Tennis outfits were worn by a number of ladies who attended the City Council public hearing on the new convention center Monday. Seems the outfits were silent support for the sports arena proposed in it. They received plenty of notice.

Scott Presents Housing Code

City Manager Roger Scott presented to Councilmen in a briefing prior to the regular meeting Monday a draft of the long-awaited minimum housing standards code ordinance.

Such an ordinance, while discussed for some time, had been tabled for about a year until Councilman Lawrence Marshall brought it up again recently. Council then set a public hearing on the matter for Oct. 28.

The original version of the code ran into trouble over the right of entry into homes for inspection. That section has now been removed from the new code.

Another problem with the original version dealt with the right of appeal after a violation was noted. The new code calls for an exhaustive appeal process to protect the homeowner and tenant.

The proposed code is similar to the standards of neighboring areas, including Norfolk. It calls for every dwelling to have a complete bath, safe water supply and kitchen-type sink and declares outdoor sanitary facilities a public nuisance where water and sewers are available.

In addition the new code calls for a hot water supply, at least one window opening to the outside.

Series Is Broadcast

The World Series is now underway, with the second game being played today in St. Louis. The Series then moves to Detroit for games Saturday, Sunday, and if necessary, Monday. If sixth and seventh games are required to decide the World Championship, the final games will be played in St. Louis Sept. 9 and 10.

The games will be televised by NBC on WVAZ-TV, Channel 10. Exclusive radio coverage will be through the NBC facilities of WVAB Radio in Virginia, 1550 on the dial.

Game time for all games in St. Louis is 2 p.m. EDT. Game time for all games in Detroit is 12:45 EDT.

Convention Center Decision Must Wait at Least 4 Months

It will be at least another four to six months before a final decision is made on the construction of a new convention cultural center in Virginia Beach. And that final decision will have to be up to the voters in a bond issue referendum.

Following last Monday's public hearing on the Planning Department's recommendations for such a new facility, Council must now decide whether to go ahead, "then plan to spend some more money" for additional studies and reports, architects fees, and the like, according to City Councilman Lawrence E. Marshall, who headed Council's special committee looking into the feasibility of the new center.

Marshall said the matter probably won't be brought to a vote until some time in the spring after all the facts have been gathered and presented to the public.

The cost of the center, as recommended, appears to be a problem at the present time. Estimates have reached from a low of about $5 to $6 million (similar to a center in Monroe, La.) to a high of about $15 to $20 million by representatives of the Good Government Association.

Marshall estimates a middle ground of about $10 million which he says would finance a first-class facility. He says a bond issue is considered the only way to finance the project.

At Monday's public hearing on the proposed center a number of persons, representing civic interest groups voiced strong approval of the recommendations.

The Planning Department recommended a music hall-theatre that would seat up to 2,500 people, a sports and coliseum arena that would seat up to 14,000 during a convention and an exhibition hall with 140,000 square feet of floor space. The site recommended is some 50 acres bounded by the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway, 24th Street and Parks Avenue a few blocks from the oceanfront in Virginia Beach Borough. The city already owns part of the land in the area. Spokesman for the Virginia Beach Development Council, Bayside Businessmen and Professional Men's Association, Virginia Beach Friends of Music, Virginia Beach Art Association and the Virginia Beach Little Theatre voiced strong support for the project and urged action as soon as possible.

Attorneys L. Charles Burlage and Garland Layton and developer Horace Clotola also spoke in support of the project and pointed out how the increase of convention and recreational business the center would generate would help finance the other immediate and long-range needs of the city.

Planning Director Patrick Standing also spoke in favor of the new proposed center as recommended by his department. Council called the report comprehensive and complete.

The only voice of dissent came from Dan Arris, speaking for the Good Government Association. Arris, in addition to his high cost estimate, objected to the building of the arena portion of the building while the city has needs such as schools, a paid fire department and higher salaries for teachers and other city employees. He said this should be given higher priority, since the center would ultimately have to be paid for by the taxpayers through a bond issue.

Arris agreed, however, that the present dome is inadequate.

In spite of this voice in opposition Council adopted the report unanimously Monday.

Holiday Inn Hopes to Open by Summer

Construction of the new eight-story, 103-room Holiday Inn at 25th St. and the Oceanfront will begin immediately, according to L. Charles Burlage, one of the principals in the corporation that will build the new facility.

City Council Monday approved the use permit for the new motel, the first high-rise motel on the beachfront. The facility will be built on the site of the old Breakers Hotel, recently demolished.

Burlage said pile driving will take about a month-and-a-half and will begin immediately. He said that depending on the weather and other problems he hopes the new Holiday Inn can be open near the beginning of the summer season in 1969, but at least by July 1.

Council also approved two other zoning applications Monday. Davis Corner Motors was granted permission to operate a minor repair shop near Newtown Road on Virginia Beach Blvd. and a zoning change to limited commercial use at S. Birdneck Road and Longstreet Avenue was also granted.

In other action Council approved extension of a property reassessment deadline from Sept. 30 until Dec. 30. The reassessment has been going on for nearly a year because of a requirement of state law. The last reappraisal went into effect in 1964. City Manager Roger Scott told Council that the project proved to be a bigger job than anticipated.

He was told that the petitioning procedures had been changed recently and while they had not been completely publicized, new petitions had to be presented by anyone requesting service. He was also assured that his area would receive the service in the future, since it had already been approved in a bond issue. Scott also requested that letters be sent out to all others who had applied under the old ordinance informing them of the changes to prevent problems in other areas.

Council received two checks from Harold Kellam of Kellam-Eaton Insurance Co. amounting to $47,276.00, of about $5,000 more than had been expected as late as Monday morning. The money was a rebate on a retrospective rating insurance plan after the outstanding safety record of the city kept the insurance premium at a minimum, according to Kellam.

Mayor Dusch accepted the money for the city. One Councilman quipped, "It's rare when anyone comes to us to give us money."

The resignation of J. W. Wood from the City Planning Commission was accepted with regret of Council because of Wood's ill health. Walter J. Pankiewicz was appointed to fill the vacancy.

The city also authorized the hiring of Langley, McDonald & Overman as its new sanitary engineering consultant since the prior consultant was retiring and closing his office. The services of Barton W. Bridges, Jr. were also accepted by Council as landscape architect for the City Hall Complex at Princess Anne for a maximum of 150 hours at what was called the low rate of $12 an hour. Council delayed action of the $5,000 request by the Virginia Beach Friends of Music to aid the organization with its deficit. Vice Mayor Robert Cornwell said Council had not had time to discuss the matter fully.

Consideration of a proposed new pay plan for juvenile probation officers and the hiring of two new probation officers for an intake department, although expected to be heard, did not come up in open meeting and was postponed until the next regular meeting.

Council also appointed Sidney S. Kellam to the steering committee of an areawide health committee as the city's representative. Kellam has been chairman of a larger group for nearly two years that has been studying the areawide health needs. The new committee is merely a committee within a committee to proceed further.

Norfolk Sticks by Airport Plans

Norfolk is still committed to its $12 million expansion of Norfolk Municipal Airport, recently renamed Norfolk Regional Airport, but with each new announcement of support for the plan there is some little room for backpedaling.

The latest endorsement has come from the Board of Directors of the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce which Tuesday passed a resolution of endorsement, but at the same time pointed out that additional airports may be needed to serve all of southeastern Virginia in the future. The board also asked that the state study the air transportation problems in the south Tidewater area.

The original proposals ignored future needs of the area when presented by the Norfolk Port and Industrial Authority and presented plans only for the expansion of the present facility. A wall of criticism from highly respected sources has caused much moderation in the thinking and an admission that the expansion is not the full answer.

While federal authorities support some expansion in Norfolk's airport they also have suggested that other sites be located for a new airport to serve the rapidly growing area.

Airlines officials, while endorsing expansion of some kind, are also in favor of a new facility of the future.

The question of expansion has not been the center of controversy, only the amount of expansion, which would include a new terminal building, a much-extended runway and taking in about 50 acres of the Norfolk Botanical Gardens.

The $12 million figure includes only the physical expansion, not any new land acquisition, new roads into the airport (which are considered a must) and relocation, if necessary, of general aviation facilities. Estimates for the entire project have been as high as $50 to $60 million.

The Southeastern Virginia

Regional Planning Commission has asked that a regional study be made before plans are continued for the Norfolk expansion. While this has been virtually ignored, a number of other groups and individuals have sought the same end, including Democratic candidate for Congress in the 2nd District, F. T. Stant, Jr.

Now the SVRPC has asked the state to insure that a study of air transportation for Hampton Roads be made in its proposed airport study. The state plans a major study of metropolitan airport needs in Virginia.

While expansion is still the center of controversy several hundred thousand dollars will have to be spent on the present air terminal immediately in Norfolk to include enlargement of the present waiting room, expansion of the coffee shop and creation of a new facility to furnish catering service to the airlines.

In addition the airlines are already prepared to spend a considerable sum of money for passenger lounge facilities which they say are absolutely necessary. All of these changes will be good only until a new terminal is built in 1972 under the NP&IA plan.

General aviation has received a boost in Virginia Beach from the NP&IA also.

The Authority pledged support of a small airport in the resort city, apparently in a move to appease critics in Virginia Beach who are against expansion of the Norfolk facility.

The Virginia Beach Industrial Authority, a City Council Committee and a Chamber of Commerce Committee have all worked with a number of groups and individuals recently in an attempt to get a private airport in Virginia Beach, but so far the location of an adequate site which will satisfy both military and civilian interests has proved to be the major obstacle.

Jaycees Promote Registration Former Jailer Trial Expected

The Virginia Beach Jaycees have been conducting a voter registration drive in the area. The drive is basically one of informing the public of the Registration qualifications and advising them of the locations of local registrars. The attack has focused on enlightenment rather than on door-to-door canvasses.

As part of the drive, a billboard has been erected near Chesapeake Colony and posters have been displayed at The Hub in Princess Anne Plaza to make registration information available to the public.

The Jaycees have also distributed pamphlets to unregistered voters, which advise the public of the requisites for registering and places to register.

This public service of the Governmental Affairs Committee is primarily concerned with encouraging registration of the more than 20,000 residents of Virginia Beach who could register, but have not, and therefore cannot participate in the presidential election.

A trial date for former jailer Kenneth Lyles is expected to be set during next Monday's docket call of Circuit Court on the charge of aiding a prisoner in efforts to escape from the Virginia Beach City Jail.

Lyles, 55, whose Virginia Beach address was Mable Lane, was indicted by a grand jury on the charge that he allegedly supplied Randall Coakley, Jr. with an apparent duplicate of a jailer's key, but which police officials said would not open any doors of the jail because of a flaw in the grooves of the key. Coakley, 24, of 13th Street, has been imprisoned on conviction of armed robbery charges.

Coakley, as was reported in the Sept. 12 issue of the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, reportedly changed his mind about escaping the basis of "personal reasons" and turned the key over to authorities. Coakley has also reportedly told police that Lyles was to allow him to escape from the jail and that the key was merely a device to remove any suspicion from Lyles.

Investigation indicates the key was never intended to open any door of the City Jail and had purposely been manufactured with an imperfection, according to police.

City Sgt. John E. Marr, who is responsible for the operation of the City Jail, says he dismissed Lyles during the early part of August. Lyles reportedly is now in Corpus Christi, Texas.

The matter of returning Lyles to Virginia Beach to face the charge has been turned over to Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans. Evans told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN "I have talked with Lyles' defense counsel and he assured me Lyles would be here on the date which will be specified for his trial. With this assurance we have withheld the extradition procedure."

Members of the Virginia Beach police department are continuing their investigation into the discovery of a .25-caliber pistol, a supply of 25-caliber ammunition and hacksaw blades in the maximum security section of the City Jail during the summer.

Detective Sgt. Warren L. Grant, in charge of the investigation, earlier said the investigation was hampered by a lack of cooperation on the part of those who could assist police. This apparently is still the case.

Grant now says, "While information was being received from certain individuals during the month of August, which pointed to those responsible for placing the pistol and ammunition in the jail, no contact has been made with my office since Sept. 14."

Another question still to be answered concerns whether the escape of three men from the City Jail, Leroy Boone, Cleveland Davis and Elton Askew, was in any way connected to the placing of the pistol, ammunition and hacksaw blades in the jail, as well as the

This is the runway of Norfolk's airport which will have to be extended under the present $12 million plan. The soon-to-be-

This is the hotel that was. The old landmark, the Breakers at 25th and Oceanfront, was demolished in just two days to make way for a new 8-story Holiday Inn which will open there next summer. Pile driving work will begin immediately and will take a month-and-a-half.

Everybody was looking for a bargain when the furnishings of The Breakers were auctioned off last week in preparation for building a Holiday Inn on the site. The auction got underway at 11 a.m. and was still going strong at 4 p.m. A refreshment canteen was set up outside.

Seminar to Attract 1,500

The Planning Committee of the International Association of Arson Investigators met at the Civic Center Tuesday and Wednesday to make preparations for their 1969 Seminar, to be held at Virginia Beach April 14-18.

The Committee, which is made up of officers and members of the I.A.A.I. Board, was welcomed Tuesday morning by City Manager, Roger Scott.

Robert E. Carter, president of the Association, stated that the Seminar, expected to be attended by 1,500 people, will combine a school of practical firefighting exercises with the planning sessions of the board. "This will really be a family affair," he declared, "since most of the members are bringing their wives."

The Association, which has offices throughout the world, including Canada, Puerto Rico and Australia chose the location for the Seminar three years ago.

Youth, Aged To Be Topics

Two meetings have been planned by area churches for exploring ways to meet the needs of senior citizens and young people.

A meeting on youth has been scheduled for Oct. 6, 4 p.m. at Princess Anne Plaza United Methodist Church, 208 S. Plaza Trail. A meeting on senior citizens is scheduled Oct. 6, 4 p.m. at the Bow Creek Presbyterian Church, Rosemont Road and Plaza Trail.

Members Go for Outing

More than 250 members of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce and their guests attended the annual fall outing yesterday at Aldo Farms.

Because of the events specifically planned for women this year more of the wives attended also.

The theme of the event was "This Is Your Lucky Day." And it was a lucky day for the winners of the door prizes and trophies. Separate door prizes were given for ladies.

Trophies were awarded to the winners of the golf chipping contest which was under the supervision of pro Tom Strange of Bow Creek Country Club. Another was awarded to the winner of the ladies' darts event.

Two trophies went to the winners of the horseshoe contests. And two others were awarded the winners of the two fishing contests. One was a spin-casting contest and the other was a bait-casting contest. A fishing exhibition on casting was also included in the day's events.

Entertainment included music by the Navy School of Music Show Band and an exhibition by the Virginia Beach rescue squad.

With all the contests and exhibitions the group also found time to eat a hearty meal in the open air. The entire event was coordinated by Bob Stanton and his committee, and was sponsored by the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce.

Surfer's Body Found

A 19-year-old Virginia Beach resident has been listed as the first fatality resulting from surfing on the ocean front between Camp Pendleton and Fort Story. The surfer was identified as Charles Allen Smith, son of the T. B. Smith's of Sanford Avenue.

The body of young Smith was discovered early Tuesday morning by Lowery D. Finley, III, 19, of 53rd Street after it had washed ashore in the area between 51st and 52nd Streets.

Friends of Smith were quoted by police as saying Smith vanished in waters of the Atlantic as the group was surfing some 30 yards off shore north of the Steel Pier Saturday morning. Although Smith called for help, members of the surfing party were unable to reach him.

Efforts by police divers being assisted by a Coast Guard Duk and helicopters to locate Smith's body failed. Monday night a body believed to be that of Smith was reported to have surfaced in the area of the pier. However search parties could find no trace of the body, which was believed to have been carried to the point of discovery by heavy tides and undertow along the beach front.

Rev. Jordan Calls Assistant

Rev. and Mrs. William H. Brake, from Creswell, N. C., have recently arrived in Virginia Beach, and are residing at 119 B 75th St. Rev. Brake has been called by Rev. John Jordan, rector of Galilee Episcopal Church, to be his assistant.

Visitors Like What They See

Tourists visiting the state of Virginia are apparently pleased with what they find here, according to a report from the Southeastern Institute of Research at Richmond.

The report, presented at the Virginia Travel Council meeting in Virginia Beach last week, was ordered by the Virginia State Travel Service of the Department of Conservation and Economic Development.

Figures in the report show that 92 per cent of visitors to Virginia plan to return, and 95 per cent express satisfaction with their experiences while here.

Other figures showed that historical attractions drew the largest crowds, that the majority of visitors stay in one place once they reach their destination, that only one-third bring young children, that 77 per cent live within one and a half days driving time and that beaches have their chief appeal to those living relatively close.

White congratulates McCaskey after presenting him with the Robert F. Nelson Award.

The Robert F. Nelson Award was originated by the Virginia Beach Innkeepers Assn. Previous winners include Nelson, former Gov. Albertis Harrison, the late Sen. Harry F. Byrd Sr., Carlisle Humelsine of Colonial Williamsburg, former state Sen. Fitzgerald Bemiss and J. Stuart White, last year's recipient who made the award to McCaskey.

Cox Spirit Is High

By James McCracken
Cox High School

A new spirit pervades the air at Frank Cox High School. Smiles appear everywhere, especially in the locker rooms of the varsity football team. For Coach McGovern's Falcon squad brought down the Bayside Marlins Friday night 7-0, bringing hopes for a great season to all students.

This will be illustrated at the home match this Friday against Deep Creek. Cox students will be wearing tennis shoes in order to "sneak up" on Deep Creek.

The campaign will be ended by a welcome-back "Light Your Fire Dance" on the tennis courts after the game, free to all Cox students sporting their Student Cooperative Association cards.

To continue the success of the Orientation Week of Sept.

Deadlines Set for Academies

Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr. and Congressman Thomas N. Downing have announced deadlines for receiving applications for appointments to U.S. military and service academies for the 1968-70 school year.

The 1969 nominees will be selected on the basis of a competitive examination to be conducted by the U.S. Civil Service Commission Nov. 9. This examination will be held at various locations throughout the nation.

Congressman Downing has set Oct. 1 as the deadline for first district residents who are interested in the appointments. The applicants have to be between the ages of 17 and 22.

Academy Picks Optometrists

Drs. Paul Johnson and Frank R. Toscano, Jr., of Virginia Beach, were elected to fellowship in the Virginia Academy of Optometry.

Five members of the Virginia Beach Rescue Squad were in Richmond last week taking part in an Emergency Care Course sponsored by the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons Committee on Injuries. Capt. C. T. Dickson, W. T. Parker, L. R. Meekins, D. W. Owens and J. W. Dickens took part in the training which featured plans for placing hospitals in a state of readiness to care for persons who may be injured in such disasters.

City Sgt. John E. Marr says jailers at Virginia Beach City Jail have been measured for uniforms and that they are expected to arrive in the near future.

Litter Is Topic for Commission

The Executive Council of the Board of Directors of the Beautification Commission met Sept. 18 and made several recommendations concerning areas of the city which have a litter problem.

The Council noted that Atlantic and Pacific Avenues should have greater attention paid to keeping them clean; particularly since these streets are seen most by visitors to the city.

Among the recommendations of the Council was to have a list of litter offenders printed in the area newspapers each week.

Clenton Shanks was elected secretary to fill the vacancy left by Robert M. Wainwright, and Conrad Little was elected to the Board of Directors.

The Council also discussed their planning program and decided to have some representation at the Sept. 30 Planning Commission meeting on the Civic Center expansion.

Kellam High Organizes

By Rod Amis

This week, after the mass confusion that accompanies the opening of an overcrowded high school, the cogs of Kellam organizations began to move. The week was marked by numerous membership drives, the first SCA meeting and the first Drama Club meeting.

Dr. Hancock was on hand to donate money so that the Kellam High School band and drill team could participate in the Oyster Bowl Parade.

Charged in Attack

A 19-year-old Chesapeake resident has been indicted on the charge of raping a 19-year-old Virginia Beach woman. Police officials said they charged Robert William Newell of Bainbridge Boulevard with attacking the woman in her apartment on Rosemont Road. Newell has also been charged with burglarizing the woman's residence during the March 10 attack.

Indicted for Murder

John Lewis Clark of West Neck Road has been indicted on a murder charge by a Circuit Court grand jury. Police officials said Clark, 25, has been accused of the murder of Stanford Ray Lewis, 30, of Gun Bridge Road during a disturbance near Pungo on July 14.

Marine Charged

A Circuit Court grand jury has returned an indictment against Marine Lance Cpl. Michael L. Smith, 20, of Black Cove Road, charging him with possession of narcotics. Police said Smith was charged after a quantity of marijuana was discovered in the Marine's duffle bag by San Francisco, Calif. customs officials while the bag was enroute to Virginia Beach from Vietnam.

Coley Indicted

Roy Clifton Coley, III, 23, of Early Bird Street is awaiting Circuit Court grand jury action on a charge of procuring for the purpose of prostitution. Coley has been indicted on the charge reportedly involving activities at the Malibu Towers office of Republic Petroleum on Virginia Beach Boulevard. A Virginia Beach police woman was the reported victim of attempted procurement when she applied for a job at the office.

Juvenile on Probation

Juvenile Court Judge Mary Speight has placed a juvenile charged with burglary on an indeterminate period of probation. The juvenile was one of six persons charged with taking $6,300 during a burglary of the Virginia Beach Civic Center in September of last year. The juvenile has been living in Bethesda, Md. for the last year, and therefore was placed under supervision of Maryland authorities.

Court Indicts Bowers

Bryan B. Bowers, 27, of Richmond has been indicted by a Virginia Beach Circuit Court on charges of possessing drugs. The indictments were returned after the charges against Bowers received a dismissal of the charges in Municipal Court. The Municipal court action resulted in two charges being dismissed due to prosecution witnesses failing to appear in court, a third charge was nolle prossed on the basis of laboratory tests, and the fourth charge was dismissed on the lack of evidence to show Bowers actually possessed a drug.

3 Bound Over

Three Norfolk men have been bound over to a Virginia Beach grand jury on attempted burglary. The men were identified as John B. Richardson, 26, of 12th Bay Street, Everett J.

Fire Prevention Pinpointed

Next week is national fire prevention week and the time is being devoted to a concentrated campaign to remind residents of the city of Virginia Beach of steps they can take to protect themselves and their property from the ever present danger of fire.

Members of the city's Bureau of Fire Prevention are carrying their message of fire prevention to the residents of the city through the students of the public schools of the city. Special literature is being distributed to students of the first grade of all elementary schools on the theme "The best way to fight fire is to stop fires before they start".

Students are given short talks on the importance of fire prevention and supplied with a number of pamphlets outlining steps which can be taken to check their homes or parents' business firms for possible conditions which should be corrected to prevent fires from starting. The material also illustrates the importance of families outlining plans of escaping from their homes and/or business places in the event fire should begin in them.

Major importance is placed on the fact that most fires occur during the night when families are asleep, or business firms are empty of customers and employees. Fire in dwellings at any time is dangerous, but this danger is increased at night when individuals are faced with the fear of being trapped by fire. This points to the importance of planning several exits which allow rapid escape from a building.

Members of the Bureau of Fire Prevention point out that precautions can be taken through a regular check on the safe storage of combustible materials and inflammable liquids, along with keeping heating and cooling units and electrical appliances and electrical circuits in proper operating condition.

Fire inspectors are reminding residents of Virginia Beach of the importance of reporting any fire to the fire department at once. This is done very simply by telephoning 486-4444, and calmly describing the location of the fire and details of the extent of injury to anyone or of anyone being endangered by fire.

Parade Heads Bowl Activities

The largest parade in Oyster Bowl history will move from MacArthur Memorial promptly at 9:30 a.m. on Oct. 5, according to Past Potentate Bernard C. Murden of Virginia Beach, Parade Marshall.

"A total of 5,287 participants are scheduled to march in the colorful parade that will include 58 bands and marching units, plus 23 floats," Murden reported. Tens of thousands are expected to line the parade route.

Imperial Potentate Chester Hogan of the Shrine of North America will be Grand Marshall of the 22nd annual Oyster Bowl procession. Other dignitaries will be Imperial Sir Aubrey G. Graham, Imperial Chief Rahan, and illustrious Potentate Meyer H. Legum of Khedive Temple.

Military and scholastic bands, the Khedive Temple Band, Arab Patrol, the Drum Corps and Chanters will appear along with the Oriental Band, Shrine Clowns and Hillbillies, all favorites with parade viewers. Floats sponsored by civic and business groups will include as usual the Pearl of the Oyster Bowl.

The parade will move west on City Hall Avenue to Granby Street, north on Granby to 21 Street, then west on 21 Street to an area between Colley Avenue and Hampton Blvd. where buses will pick up participants for transportation to Foreman Field.

A pageant will start at 12:30 at the stadium. Past Potentate Herman Nowitsky, who has directed the pageant for all 22 Oyster Bowl games, said "Patriotism will be the theme this year. Many of the bands that appeared in the parade will participate in the before-game show." W. Reid Bulman is Director of Uniformed Units of Khedive Temple. J. Ronald McLean is general chairman of the Oyster Bowl Committee. Duke University and the University of Maryland will meet in the twenty-second annual Oyster Bowl.

Playhouse To Open Oct. 10

The formal opening of the Lake Wright Playhouse will be Oct. 10 when the comedy "Goodbye Charlie" by George Axelrod will be presented.

Starring in the play will be Lyn Howard of New York City, who has had training with Lee Strasberg and The Actors Center. She recently appeared on the Jackie Gleason Show and Camera Three.

The professional dinner playhouse, whose opening was delayed a week because of construction problems, is located on Northampton Blvd. next to the Lake Wright Motor Hotel, just inside Norfolk. The Playhouse will have a 400-seat theater, a 100-seat experimental theater, a separate dining room and a cocktail lounge called "The Curtain Call Room."

The first play will be performed Thursday through Sunday until Nov. 3. Reservations for dinner and theater, for theater only or for theater parties may be made by calling the Lake Wright Playhouse at 464-6919 or by writing the theater, 6270 Northampton Blvd., Norfolk, Va., 23518.

Game at Foreman Field. The kick-off for the Atlantic Coast Conference contest will be at 2:15 p.m.

Proceeds from the Oyster Bowl are used to support Shriners' hospitals for Crippled Children and the Burns Institute.

Youth Theatre Schedules Play

The first production of the Virginia Beach Junior Playhouse group will be presented on Oct. 5, at 4 and 7 at Kellam High School.

Youth of the group have written, directed, and rehearsed roles for the entire production. "The Plague of Us," written by Rick Williams and directed by Rod Amis will include a cast of 15-20. The group is being partially sponsored by the Department of Parks and Recreation.

Cub Pack Has Meeting

Cub Scout Pack 418 held its first meeting of the winter season Sept. 27 at Kempville Presbyterian Church.

Cubmaster George McCormick conducted the meeting which included a songfest. Plans for a Halloween party on Oct. 25 were announced.

Greg Marshall, Den #1 was awarded a perfect attendance pin and a silver arrowhead. Mark Baroness and Randy Hodges were inducted into the pack as new Bobcats. Two Cub Scouts earned the rank of Wolf Cub Scout: Robert Zirpoli and Richard Wood. Five Webelos Scouts were awarded badges. Formation of a new Webelos

On Friday, Oct. 4 the Virginia Beach Little Theatre will open its 20th anniversary season with the musical, "Riverwind," book and lyrics by John Jennings. It is a simple story of lost love and found love; young love and old love. The young love includes (above) Mike Barlow and Suzy Washburn. Tickets are available by calling 428-8500 or at the box office.

Theatre Schedules Tryouts

The Virginia Beach Little Theatre will hold try-outs for "Night Must Fall" on Oct. 7 at 8 p.m.

Try-outs will be held at the Courtyard Playhouse, located on 17th Street between Atlantic and Pacific Avenues.

There are parts for five women and three men. Those unable to be there for the try-outs may call the director, Liz Sills, (Mrs. J. W. Sills) for an interview and reading. All new-comers are welcome.

This play, a mystery, will follow the musical, "Riverwind," which is playing Oct. 1, 5, 11, 12, 18, and 19. "Night Must Fall" will open Nov. 22.

Trial

(Continued from p. 1) supplying of Coakley with a key. In the case, these events would appear to have some relationship to each other.

A few days after the escape of the three men, who overpowered Jailer Fred Harrell and fled the jail with his keys, Marr requested the Virginia Division of Corrections to make an inspection of the jail "to clear up any questions of security and jail operation".

Indications are that no word has as yet been received regarding the outcome of that inspection.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation, working in cooperation with the Virginia Beach police department, is still continuing the search for the escapees.

Marr said that he felt it would be improper for him to comment any further at this time concerning Lyles or the present case. Marr did, however, tell the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, "I knew I was right to start with, I was doing my part, and the neglect was on the part of other parties."

Airport

(Continued from p. 1) The latest proposal of a site has come from State Sen. Edward T. Cason III of Virginia Beach. He has proposed that a large reliever airport and cargo facility be located on the western edge of Oceana Naval Air station.

Military authorities, however, have voiced quick unofficial opposition to the plan citing among other things the air traffic problems that would be created between military, commercial and general aviation in the area.

No official contact has been made with military authorities on the subject, but it is expected to be soundly rejected when and if such a proposal is made, especially in light of the tremendous construction boom at NAS Oceana recently and expected future growth.

Parties Open Headquarters

Virginia Beach politics become "tri-partisan" with the opening of the third campaign headquarters here.

The Wallace headquarters, located at 21st Street and Atlantic Avenue, was the last to open Sept. 28 with about 100 people present at the opening. Louis G. Darden, a special tax administrator employed by the city, has been appointed as chairman of the Wallace for President campaign.

Prior to the opening of the Wallace headquarters, the Republican and Democratic parties had already located campaign headquarters in the area.

The Nixon-Agnew headquarters opened Sept. 19 at 1756 Laskin Rd. Chairman for the Nixon-Agnew campaign is Jimmie Fant.

The Democratic headquarters opened Sept. 24 at 2556 Virginia Beach Blvd., just west of London Bridge, Edward P. Brogan, owner of Custom Home Builders, was named as general

Bryant Named Chairman

The Virginia Beach Personnel Board held its organizational meeting Thursday, naming Claiborne R. Bryant, a Virginia National Bank senior vice president, as chairman.

In addition to Bryant, the group elected W. S. Fenner Jr., department manager of Ford Motor Co. as vice chairman of the Humphrey-Muskie campaign for the November election. In addition to the Humphrey-Muskie campaign, the headquarters will also coordinate Rep. Thomas N. Downing's bid for re-election to the First District seat in Congress.

Other members of the board are Detective Sgt. Charles H. Harris, R. Lee Carey, operator of Carey's Poultry farm, and Clark Fleming, president and general manager of Bayville Farms, Inc.

Matthews Plans To Attend Meet

Thomas B. Matthews, president of the Matthews Agency, Inc., will attend a conference of the Mutual Advertising Agency Network (MAAN).

The conference, which is scheduled for Oct. 3, 4 and 5, will be held in Washington.

Fair Expects Record Crowds

The Greater Tidewater Fair continues through this weekend and will set new attendance records for the event. Crowds from as far away as northeastern North Carolina and the Eastern Shore flocked to the old Pungo airfield to "come to the fair."

Most of the parking is on concrete runways. And all but a small portion of the giant carnival, the James E. Strates Show, is also set up on concrete runways.

There is something for everyone in the family. The youngsters have delighted in the kiddie rides, the livestock and poultry displays and at riding a real live elephant.

For the teenagers and young adults besides all the rides and games there are displays of art works by youngsters in Virginia Beach, Norfolk, Portsmouth and Chesapeake.

For those who are just not the ride-riding type there is a tent full of commercial and industrial displays and there are all types of games and concessions along the midway.

There are even the two giraffe shows that bring back a taste of burlesque to the area. Both shows along the midway offer excellent adult entertainment. Add all that to the fun houses, a show that shows "any," a beautiful young girl turning into an ape, the side shows and all the many places to fill up on candied apples, popcorn, cotton candy, soft drinks, pizza and the like, and the Greater Tidewater Fair has it all.

In addition there is a free grandstand show each evening at 8 p.m. featuring the daredevil driving stunts of Jole Chittwood, Jr., a popular crowd pleaser last year.

The third annual fair continues through Saturday night, then closes down for another year and the fabulous Strates show makes its way back to its 50-car train in Virginia Beach borough and slips away to another date in North Carolina.

At night the fair can be seen for miles before reaching it because of the sparse agricultural settlement of the Pungo area. The fairgrounds is located at the intersection of Princess Anne and Indian River Roads.

General Manager Steve M. Rose said, "We are very pleased with the response so far. Last weekend we had about 15,000 people here on Sunday alone and still had room for many more."

But he adds that next year it will be even bigger and better. Tomorrow is Kiddies Day. All ride fares will be reduced and there will be no gate admission. In addition some 6,000 underprivileged children will be guests of the fair.

Rating System Adopted

The National Association of Theater Owners of Virginia, a voluntary motion picture theater trade association has announced the institution of a Motion Picture Rating System.

The system will furnish the movie going public of Virginia with rating information about movies to facilitate their choice of movie entertainment. The method used will be a system which has been in existence for many years. It is that of the Film Board of National Organizations, known in the industry as The Green Sheet.

The Ratings are a composite report of cooperating organizations and offer a guide to the selection of current entertainment films by informing the movie goer of their content.

All member theaters of the NATO of Virginia will indicate these ratings in their newspaper ads and on a boxoffice placard. Where ratings are now available, this fact will also be noted.

This plan will be implemented immediately and the public may look for the rating symbols in local theater advertising and in local theater box-offices.

They came by day and night in record numbers to the Greater Tidewater Fair in Pungo.

TADA Elects New Director

Harold Heischberger, president and owner of Hilltop Volkswagen, Inc., has been elected a director of the Tidewater Automobile Dealers Association.

Heischberger, who opened his VW dealership in Virginia Beach in 1967, has been associated with Virginia automotive firms and related business agencies for nearly 15 years.

Insurance Co. Changes Name

The Swindell Pollock Insurance Agency in Kempville became Arris, Malbon, and Etheridge, Inc., on Oct. 1.

The announcement was made by Daniel J. Arris, who will serve as president and general manager of the general insurance agency, now located at 5150 Princess Anne Rd. V.A. (Jack) Etheridge and

J. Frank Malbon will serve as corporate partners and on the board of directors.

Arris has announced plans to relocate the agency in new and larger offices at the Kempville Plaza Shopping Center on Nov. 1. The original firm was founded by Swindell Pollock in 1950. It was purchased by its present owners in October of 1962.

More Suggestions, Please

Certainly State Sen. Edward T. Caton III of Virginia Beach cannot be serious in his proposal to take part of the land adjacent to the runways of NAS Oceana for a giant Virginia Beach airport.

While he has suggested this openly in a Virginia Beach supplement to a Norfolk newspaper he must be aware that Navy officials are dead set against it because of the havoc that could be caused by air traffic and because of increased construction at the base recently. Plans for the future call for even more expansion.

This site has been thought of before and has promptly been dismissed by those who even attempted to discuss it with Navy officials. Unofficial opposition has been adamant to the point of suggesting that the huge complex would even be taken out of Virginia Beach first (along with all its personnel who spend money here).

We certainly want to see a large airport somewhere in Chesapeake or Virginia Beach in the near future and we do not feel that Norfolk Regional Airport with all its present and future expansion is the answer. But it would seem that the suggestion of a heavily traveled public facility on the very edge of a heavily traveled military base is pure folly.

This is an important military base that must not be tampered with by anyone. There must be better suggestions by responsible persons, Caton included.

More Interesting Conflict

Three extra cheers for the Virginia Municipal League. Its members passed a resolution in their convention last week to speed up changes and modernization of the outdated, outmoded conflict of interest law.

Governor Godwin thinks some urgency is needed, but his study commission, which apparently could have cared less, saw little urgency and seemed about to recommend the matter wait until 1970 to receive legislative action instead of in the 1969 special session.

Hopefully the League's resolution, coupled with one case pending in the courts brought by Virginia Beach's Andre Evans (with several others dependent upon that one), will force the commission out of apathy. This matter must be settled soon.

The finger of suspicion is sharp and while we cannot agree with Mr. Evans in his rush into the courts, we do agree that any money forfeited should remain in the locality and not go to the State Library fund. That's part of the law now and it should be changed along with the rest.

Don't Muddy the Waters Now

There is no doubt in anyone's mind who has the best interests of Virginia Beach at heart. We must have a new cultural-convention center as soon as is entirely practicable.

It is a pity that a representative of an organization known as the Good Government Association finds it necessary to question the arena that has been recommended to be included. That 12,000 to 14,000 seat arena would obviously be used more for huge conventions which will come to the beach than it will be for sports events, but so what? That's what it is for.

To attempt to confuse the issue by calling for higher teacher salaries, schools and a paid fire department first is purely misunderstanding of the need for a facility that will bring that money to Virginia Beach, and attempting to confuse the public.

And then the evening newspaper in Norfolk has the audacity to call the proposed arena a "sports palace" when Norfolk is building a $34 million center with a similar seating capacity to the one proposed here. That figure allegedly represents more than the cost of the famous Houston Astrodome. And yet that paper calls our proposed arena to be built at a fraction of that by best estimates, a "palace". What about Scope Palace?

Nothing must stand in the way of building this facility in Virginia Beach soon.

Incidentally it is pleasing to note that the Southeastern Virginia Regional Planning Commission is trying at last to bring order out of chaos with the eventual building of a major sports stadium for the entire area its goal. Again Norfolk is going ahead with studies of its own instead of cooperating. Perhaps the SVRPC can finally end this mess and get a stadium built too. What a pity we can't all work together instead of fighting.

"Tommy" Tomko

For nearly 25 years C. M. "Tommy" Tomko made sports in Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County his life. He contributed much to making city schools as important as they are in athletics today.

And when he became athletic director of Princess Anne High School in 1954 he had no gym or stadium, but that didn't bother him. He still did the job.

A great competitor in both football and baseball in his early days, Tommy always sought to instill that same spirit in his boys. His death has created a void and has ended the long career of a sometimes gruff, often smiling dedicated man. He will be missed by all who knew him.

GET IT OFF THE GROUND!

Guest Editorial

Citizenship Day

The following editorial is reprinted from the INDUSTRIAL PRESS SERVICE of Sept. 9, 1968, and deals with a major problem of our times, the No. 1 dropout, the citizen who does not vote.

"The good citizen is the man who, whatever his wealth or his poverty, strives manfully to do his duty to himself, to his family, to his neighbor, to the State; who is incapable of the baseness which manifests itself either in arrogance or in envy, but who while demanding justice for himself is no less scrupulous to do justice to others," said President Theodore Roosevelt.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower put it in another way: "Patriotism means moral forces and a prepared citizenry. Moral stamina means more energy and more productivity on the farm and in the factory. Love of liberty means the guarding of every resource that makes freedom possible—from the sanctity of our families and the wealth of our soil to the genius of our scientists. And so each citizen plays an indispensable role."

The advice Andrew Johnson gave in 1866 holds true today: "The time has come to take the Constitution down, to unroll it, to reread it, and to understand its provisions thoroughly."

And one way in which every American adult can publicly demonstrate his citizenship is to register and vote in the November election! This is the fundamental test of a good citizen.

Student Insurrection

This editorial appeared in the "Yellow Jacket," student newspaper at Randolph-Macon College and is reprinted with their permission.

This past year seems to have been specifically categorized as a year of student turmoil and rebellion. Students at the Sorbonne in Paris rioted in the streets. There was an unparalleled student insurrection at Columbia University in New York. Students rioted in practically every major university in Europe. Student rebellions against their academic institutions reached such proportion that it suddenly seemed that it was the thing to do, the "in" thing, so to speak.

However, though the student rebellions all seem to have been precipitated roughly in the same time sequence, no general statement as to cause and effect can honestly be made. If there was a world-wide cause, it would seem that at heart it was an irrational one. Each particular country has its own particular problems in regards to the student-university relationship.

After having been in France for a time and having talked with a variety of people there, several conclusions pertaining to the student rebellion in France are readily apparent. The whole problem can be stated quite simply. In point of fact, the French education system has not bothered to keep up with either the changing technologies or the other demands of modern 20th century life. The French system is archaic, to say the least, it doesn't begin to prepare its students for life in the world. Everyone, regardless of vocation or interest, must pursue a course of classical education. Students in the United States might have a hard time understanding the great pressures applied to high school students in France. By the time students have advanced beyond all the horrendous examinations imposed on them, examinations which reward memorization and pedantry and in a sense penalize originality or imagination, and have graduated to the university, their disillusionment becomes complete. Suddenly, they discover the incredible gulf which stands between them, and the academic system which they are caught in, and the rather abrupt realities which confront them in the world outside the university. The French students are rioting in order to effect changes in an antiquated educational system which has refused to keep pace with the demands of time. The French problem is unlike anything that we know in this country.

On the other hand, and an ocean away from France, there have been many riots and other examples of student activism at work in this country. Just exactly what the motive is seems to be a question to which there is no one answer, if indeed, there is an answer at all.

Without lapsing into what might be mistaken for cynicism, one must in all honesty say that the students in the United States have very little to riot about. In fact, one could hazard a wild guess that the students in rebellion have very little idea of how good they have it. After seeing the problems elsewhere which students have undertaken as the immovable object against which they push, the so-called problems in U.S. universities and colleges seem meagre and unimportant. The rioting of our students seems more in the nature of a child's temper tantrum, caused by a surfeit of emotion and a lack of perspective reality.

One wonders how many of the student activists, fanatics, anarchists, Maoists, Stalinists, etc., etc. who have pledged themselves to overthrow the status quo have considered that the intellectualization of their particular social order has no place in a pragmatic world. One wonders how much of the student activism is spawned from a feeling of loneliness in terms of two-hundred million plus people, our population to date, or perhaps from a sense of unconscious guilt which grows out of the incredible wealth America shares in comparison with any other country in the world.

We are the wealthiest country in the world. The present generation in college, let us say post 1947, has had lavished on it more in the nature of material goods than any other. We live in a society where it is quite possible to become jaded at age fourteen, or perhaps twelve if one happens to live in Southern California. It is our generation which has grown up with television and is now finding it increasingly difficult to make the distinction between phantasy and the world of reality we obtain through the senses. We have managed to quench every thirst and satisfy every hunger, and yet our soul (call it mind or whatever you want to) if you have a hangup about the word 'soul' remains agonized.

It is our generation, the generation of the have-too-much, which has to reawaken itself to the demands of the age. The older generation had better take this to heart. That particular segment of the student population which holds the most promise in terms of enthusiasm, imagination, and creativity, is most in danger. It is that segment which will take the most time to mature and which, in the most important sense of the word, will give the best and the greatest contribution to the society of which it is a part.

SUN SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"Where are you going?" she asked. "I thought you weren't going to budge out of this house for four days, and this is only the second day."

"I am going to work," he said simply. "I can't take any more vacation around this place."

"Whatever do you mean?" she asked too sweetly, while batting her eyelashes.

"One more day of this and I'd be a candidate for a padded cell," he said. "All I wanted was four quiet days at home just to relax. I didn't even plan to shave."

"Well, you wouldn't have had to just because some of my old friends from college were coming to visit and you'd never met them," she said. "I simply said I didn't want them to think I was married to a biplane. You shouldn't have let that affect your shaving."

"No, of course not," he said. "But that's not the half of it. It's the rest of the action I can't stand around here."

"What are you talking about?" "Well, for instance, that leisurely breakfast with the kids this morning was the most traumatic experience I've ever been through," he pointed out. "I'm glad I usually get out of here before they eat breakfast."

"Well, your younger daughter wasn't in the best of moods," she agreed.

"That's putting it mildly. 'I didn't mind when she said she was tired and sleepy, but when a three-year-old kid says she has a headache and is going back to bed to rest, that's going too far.'"

"She was just being her usual self this morning," she said. "Oh, really?" he asked. "I thought it might have been unusual for a kid that tiny to say, 'Don't talk to me. Don't even look at me.'"

"No, it's not unusual. She's always that way until after she's had her fruit juice," she said.

"Takes after her mother," he said. "And after I got over that shock I couldn't believe the running battle you had with the five-year-old dreamer to make her down one piece of toast in time to make the school bus."

"That goes on every morning too," she said nonchalantly. "That's why we start so early."

"That's got to be the first time I ever had indignation after breakfast," he said. "Then when the baby started crying for his bottle I figured that had to be the last straw."

"That happens every morning too," she said with a big smile. "It was just another ordinary beginning of a day."

"And from there it degenerated," he pointed out. "How come you found so many little things for me to do while I was enjoying my vacation? The first time I got a chance to sit down and relax like I planned to do the girls were home from school and it all started again."

"That's the way we housewives live," she said. "Maybe you'd like to stay here and take care of them while I go to work for you."

"I pass," he said. "But I could do it. Don't forget that. It's all in what you get used to."

"You never get used to this," she muttered. "Anyway I will admit one thing. I can't stand trying to relax around here. I can relax better in my office where the pace slows down to a run."

"Just let me know next time you plan to stay home again," she said, laughing. "I'll invite some of the neighborhood women in for coffee to meet you."

"Goodbye," he screamed as he ran out of the door. "I may never come home again. I need a week to get over this one-day vacation."

Packaging May Prevent Poisoning

While safety packaging is the most promising new approach in keeping the child under five from accidental poisoning with a medication, knowledge about the hazards of common household products eaten by children is also required.

This double-barrel approach to the prevention of childhood poisoning emerged from a report and a scientific exhibit presented at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Pediatrics by Dr. Alan K. Done and his associates in the department of pediatrics at the University of Utah Medical Center.

Dr. Done, who is also director of the Poison Information and Therapy Center, described his experience with children under five who accidentally poisoned themselves with common household products.

He pointed out that the products most infrequently eaten such as lyes and corrosives caused the highest hospitalization rate, while cosmetics, which were most frequently eaten, caused the least.

Petroleum products -- gasoline, naphtha, kerosene, and mineral oil -- as well as polishes and waxes are infrequently ingested, but have a very high hospitalization rate. Intermediate in terms of "severe poisoning" are pesticides, soaps and cleaners, bleaches, disinfectants, and deodorizers.

That all these products should be kept out of reach of small children goes without saying, Dr. Done noted. "However, the most highly toxic should be kept out of the home or their use surrounded by effective safeguards.

"Experience has shown that liquids or pelleted materials are more likely to be ingested in large quantities than powders, solids, or semi-solids. The method of dispensing or packaging is important," the pediatrician pointed out. "For example, a substance available in aerosol form is usually less likely than a liquid in an ordinary bottle to be ingested in large quantities. A bottle having a small aperture, such as is used with many shaving lotions, perfumes, and toilet waters is likely to be ingested in smaller quantities than the same product in a wide-mouth bottle."

On the packaging of drugs, foil or blister packs, or palm-'n-turn caps or bottles which require downward pressure as well as turning, offer greater protections than conventional screw caps.

Dr. Done tested the ability of 123 children between 20 and 40 months of age to open three types of closures, a 'strip-pack,' bottles with screw caps, and bottles with other safety closures.

Ninety-three per cent of the youngsters ate most of the 50 small pieces of candy in the conventional screw-top bottle within the 30-minute period allowed. The bottle with the safety closure was opened by sixty-four per cent of the children, but they ate most of the candy. Seventy-eight per cent of the children were able to open at least one unit of the strip pack, but they ate only an average of nine candy pellets in 30 minutes.

The advantage of the strip-pack is two-fold, the pediatrician noted. The effort of opening it is likely to cause the child to lose interest, while the time it takes reduces the number of pellets taken. This allows time for a child to be detected before a potentially harmful dose of a drug is swallowed.

Dr. Done pointed out that more than one out of four accidental child poisonings are caused by aspirin, with adult aspirin being responsible for more than half the hospital admissions for aspirin poisoning. Virtually all the severe cases were due to adult aspirin ingestion. Yet, the physician emphasized, safety measures have been applied only to the children's preparation.

Kids Make Good Book Reviewers

Children are often better book reviewers than adults are.

That's the word of many experts who think that children give a candid sup-up without giving the plot away. A child keeps his reviews short, too.

Many teachers like to assign book reviews to children. So do children's book page reviewers at some lively and well-read newspapers.

"When you ask a child his opinion on a juvenile book," says the reviewer for one southern paper, "he'll give you an answer that's simple and sound."

Another book page editor points out: "No one can criticize a story better than a child of the age it was written for." One 7-year-old recently began a book review: "I like this book because the words are almost hard."

Children are good proofreaders, too. "When it comes to artwork," says Betty Ren Wright, an editor with Whitman Publishing Company of Racine, Wis., world's largest publisher of children's books, "you can count on a 3-to-5-year-old to spot errors that professionals miss."

Example? Once, in a children's book, a dresser scarf appeared in a sketch on one page but was missing on the facing page. A youngster caught it immediately. Corrections were made. Because children are so observant, a child in a book illustration must never change his hair-parting, shoe color or mittens in the middle of the action, and must always have the same number of button-holes on a coat that he began with.

A child takes his books seriously. They have to be right.

Good juvenile books receive child-testing by authors, illustrators and editors.

Parents, too, will enjoy hearing book reviews from the sand-box set. It's a lively education. And it's reassuring to discover how well the children choose their favorites on the basis of art, action, and over-all quality.

HERE COMES OLGA!

Saturday afternoon at 3:30 leaving from Little Creek was a ship by the name of Yo Lo #2. The boat left having aboard those who will be coming into Oceana being attached to VF 101 and some who will be leaving VF 101.

The party went down the Nansamond River to a cabin built in 1914. The cabin was very rustic in appearance and was built on stilts in the water. When you first looked at it the appearance was that of a barn. Although the cabin was many years old, the crowd was very modern and young. The trip down the Nansamond River took two and half hours. During this time some fished, others danced and I might say everyone was eating or picking at tid bits of food.

Lt. E. T. Smith kept the crowd pretty well entertained with the playing of his accordion. In fact you would say that it was a sing along with the crowd. There were some whiskey tenors and beer baritones, and of course every one feels when they are relaxed that they can really sing. Sometimes I even think I can sing and believe me I can't.

Everyone was dressed in slacks, jackets and real warm clothing. You know on the water it always seems much colder and of course returning late that night, or I might say early Sunday morning, the air was really nippy.

Dinner was eaten while we were at the cabin and everyone was quite ready to eat. Barbecue on buns, cole slaw, macaroni salad, baked beans, potato chips and of course anything you wanted to drink from coke, beer--in fact you name it and you got it.

Did you know that you can heat cranberry juice cocktail? Try combining it with hot tea or orange juice and a little lemon juice for a mid-winter warmer.

Capt. and Mrs. Val Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Linney were the couples being welcomed to VF 101 Oceana, Lt. and Mrs. Don Monk were saying so long to the VF 101, Lt. and Mrs. Don Monk will now be returning to civilian life again.

A plaque was given to Lt. Don Monk by Cdr. Don Primeau for services rendered to both his country and the squadron. Mrs. Monk received a silver mug engraved with "Wives of VF 101". We hate to see Don and Margaret leave; they are such friendly really nice and down to earth people. I know you have at sometime met people who as soon as you meet them you feel they are people you really enjoy being around.

The party was given by Lt. and Mrs. Drexel Bradshaw and Lt. and Mrs. E. T. Smith. The Commanding officer of VF 101 is Cdr. Primeau. I am sure that the commander will feel a great loss with Lt. Monk leaving.

Those attending this party aboard ship were: Lt. and Mrs. David Anderson, Lt. Cdr. and Mrs. Ernie Burnett, Lt. Cdr. and Mrs. Rolf Noll, Lt. and Mrs. Jim Thorley, Lt. and Mrs. Bob Cooper, Lt. and Mrs. Bill Roberts, Lt. Bill Stanley, Miss Pam Lentz, Lt. J.G. Bill Tream and Miss Pat Rowe, Lt. and Mrs. Mel Koch, Lt. and Mrs. Forrest Sullivan, Lt. and Mrs. Robert McKean, Lt. and Mrs. Gary Stephenson and Miss Judy Murray.

Don, we wish both you and Margaret a happy life in Jacksonville, Fla. and may you get rich quick as a stock broker. We also welcome to our great city and Oceana Capt. and Mrs. Val Johnson (USAF) and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Linney.

Next week I will be seeing a lot of you at the Oyster Bowl Party. Until then take your pills and stay well so I might get your picture or name.

It Took Nerve, But She Did It

By Yatta Jones

Have any of you wives and mothers been thinking of going back to school, but feel that it would be too much for you? Perhaps you should talk to Felice Stern, who received her M.A. in English from ODC in June.

Felice has been married 14 years and has two children, Jules, 12, and Allison, 7. Her husband Harold is a lawyer in this area with his office in Norfolk. The Sterns live in Thalia.

Felice graduated from the University of Westhampton Richmond College in 1954, receiving a B. A. in English. Ten years later she decided to go back to school and get her master's. Her reason for going back was very simple: "I had a longing to go back to school, a feeling which I found to be shared by many older people going back."

According to Felice there is a great deal of difference between graduate and undergraduate school. "For one thing," she says, "there is no such thing as class spirit. You don't even realize what class you are in. You only know that eventually you will finish."

According to Felice a graduate student feels the pressure to excel from inward, a pressure much more real than any outward pressure. There is also the tendency to react to professors as individuals rather than as professors--an attitude which can sometimes provide extra impetus in a particular class and at other times prove damaging.

Graduate students have to learn to guard their speech. They have learned many things from experience and it becomes important to say it all at one time. Felice feels that she was lucky to have had a professor for her first course who made all of his students feel special just to have gone to class after a full day's work or housework.

One very real problem is that of concentration. Felice noticed that she had about 50 per cent of the concentration she formerly had. She found herself sidetracked by wondering what to prepare for dinner, whether she should have sent her child to school with a headache, whether she should have let the dog outside rather than have left him in the house... any number of small worries interfered with her concentration.

"I read articles that say you are in danger of cheating your children in a situation like this," Felice commented; yet Felice discovered that the longer she attended school, the more normal the situation became to her children. "I went almost four years. To my children it was the same as if I were playing bridge, going to the grocery store or doing any one of the usual things."

Attending graduate school is a bit different from what a mother would normally be doing. Above all, it is studying and library work, which involves many hours of devotion. If you are not careful what you short change, you may find, as Felice did, that your social life suffers.

"There is nothing in this life you don't gain without losing something else," Felice stated. Each person has to make her own decision as to what she will let go. According to Felice some women let the house go. Others, the "super-women," let their sleep go.

Felice cautioned anyone planning to go back to school to have a thorough medical check-up. "I had one," she said, "and found out that I had low blood pressure, low blood count, and anemia. If I hadn't known this and taken steps to correct it, I would have given up first semester, thinking that school was making me exceptionally tired." It is extremely important for a woman to have a definite goal in mind when undertaking

Fashion Show, Card Party To Benefit Bayside Library

On Wednesday, Oct. 16, the Woman's Club of Chesapeake Beach will present its annual card party and fashion show at the Bow Creek Country Club in Virginia Beach.

In keeping with November's Presidential election, the theme will be "Campaign Fashions-68" and will be carried out by way of the red, white, and blue colors, and various campaign posters.

Models for the show include Beth Houge, Joan Brooks, Molly Bennett and Brenda Aggar, Miss Norfolk. Also modeling will be representatives from each of the Junior and Senior Women's Clubs in Virginia Beach. They are as follows: Mrs. F. E. Winfree III, Mrs. R. G. Hines Jr., Mrs. H. C. Robinson Jr., Mrs. James Brown, Mrs. E. R. Godfrey, Mrs. E. C. Keene, Mrs. W. F. Salkowski and Mrs. E. G. Middleton.

Card-playing will begin at 10 a.m. with a seated luncheon to follow at 12 noon. Fashions will be presented by Berson's Mangel of Cuba plans to create hairstyles for the models. Besides his professional talent, he has a beautiful singing voice and will entertain the audience throughout the show, accompanied by Mrs. Gwen Whitehurst at the organ.

A $100 gift certificate from Berson's will be given at the show's conclusion, along with numerous door prizes.

All profits derived from the fashion show will be used for the club's educational projects, which include a scholarship each year to a deserving student, and in the past, donations to the Bayside Public Library.

Those wishing to make reservations may contact Mrs. W. B. Hughes at 464-5575 or Mrs. H. W. Fulford at 464-1877. Tickets may also be obtained at Berson's on Granby Street in Norfolk. Reservations must be made by Monday, Oct. 14. The price of each ticket is $3.

a step such as this. Otherwise she will get discouraged, Felice knew she wanted to teach in college, but even so, she lost a bit of steam toward the end. She says that she felt stale... ready to go on to something else.

Now that she has attained her goal, Felice is very happy. She teaches English and speech at Chesapeake College. She especially likes the college since it is small and maintains a personal relationship between the students and teachers. She knows definitely that if she were given the choice again she would do exactly as she did before.

Felice is a firm believer in every woman's achieving her potential whether it is in the home or outside. While living in Germany right after she was married, she learned to have a tremendous amount of respect for the American woman's independence. "There were women there who didn't even read newspapers. They had no opinions at all. I feel that a woman owes something to the world and to God as much as to her children and husband."

"A Woman has a very brief time with her children and then her motherly instincts become smotherly... I guess I'm saying a little less about what it means to be a woman, but rather, what it means to be a human being."

Home Economics Assn. Plans To Open Meeting to Public

The Virginia Home Economics Association, District VI, will open to the public their fall workshop-luncheon.

The topic for the day will be "Consumer Credit in Today's World" and the day will be Saturday, Oct. 12, 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. The place will be the Lake Wright Motel, 6280 Northampton Boulevard.

Speakers for the day will include: "Consumers and Credit in the Economy," Robert B. McTeer, economist, Research Department, Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond; "Retail Sales Credit in 1968," Harry E. Northey, credit manager, Rice's Fashion Corner, Norfolk; "Your Credit Record," Robert W. Pack, executive vice-president, Retail Merchants Association of Norfolk; "Consumer Credit Today," T. F. Church Bazaar Is Oct. 12

The Women's Society of Christian Service of Princess Anne Plaza United Methodist Church will sponsor a bazaar at the church, 208 Plaza Trail, on Saturday, Oct. 12 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

There will be Christmas decorations including decorated tree skirts, net trees and tree ornaments; gift items handmade by W.S.C.S. members.

Of special interest to children will be the special children's table with no item priced over 50 cents. Articles on this table will be sold only to children and will include toys, gifts and Christmas tree ornaments.

There will be a white elephant sale and Christmas cards may be ordered. Proceeds from the bazaar will be donated to the Church School Furnishings Committee.

When the Frost Is On the Pumpkin, Etc.

With the nip of fall in the air, what could be more appropriate to kick off Indian Summer than a luncheon, complete with Indians, featuring honest-to-goodness Indian dishes--and catered by a local restaurant? The chief was an Indian, but not the chef.

The meal was outside on the rolling lawn of the Hermitage Foundation in Norfolk to introduce a new fall tour, which will be called "Indian Summer in Coastal Virginia." This will feature a twice weekly bus tour through Nov. 2 of four of the eight attractions of the Norfolk Tour.

A special bus will leave the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce at 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday and Saturdays and return at 3:45 p.m. The fare, including all admissions, is $4.25 for adults and $2.50 for children six through 12. However, luncheon at the Hermitage Foundation is $1.30 extra. The Norfolk Tour includes the MacArthur Memorial, the Hermitage Foundation, the Moses Myers House and the Norfolk Museum of Arts and Sciences.

Chief Oscar Custalow of the Mattaponi was resplendent in feather head dress, authentic buckskin trousers and authentic (?) velvet tunic as he made Norfolk Mayor Roy Martin an honorary Indian.

Several good Indian recipes were offered, which are printed below. Guests at the luncheon dined on roasted oysters, venison, sweet potatoes, roast corn, corn bread and squash plus cider to drink.

The 17th century Indians of Coastal Virginia always enjoyed a bountiful feast at harvest time; however, the food was somewhat bland because of lack of seasoning. Although the Indian food, prepared in an authentic manner, modern spices and seasoning transformed the menu into one that should satisfy the tastes of the most particular food fancier.

MARINADE FOR VENISON

Make a marinade or basting sauce as follows: (for each 12-15 lb. leg of venison) Combine:

- 1/2 c. olive oil or bacon fat
- 1 clove garlic, chopped
- 1 bay leaf
- 3 tsp. salt
- 1/2 tsp. pepper
- a pinch of cayenne pepper
- 1/3 c. sherry or claret wine

Marinate at least overnight

(or longer) and baste frequently while cooking on a spit over medium coals (approximately 30 minutes per pound)

ROAST OYSTERS

Ideal for an outdoor cookout in the fall. Wash unshelled oysters and lay on a metal sheet over hot coals. When shells open, oysters are done. Serve them with melted butter to which has been added a little pepper and salt to taste. Delicious served with crisp crackers.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Johnson, Horace Cistola and Mrs. Larry Sancilio were among the many Virginia Beach Cancer Society supporters who attended the recent annual party and dinner at the Americano.

Is There a Doctor in the House?

Wanted: Midwife to practice obstetrics. Salary: none. Fees paid by the job, either in currency or produce. No medical degree necessary.

Unbelievable? Not 200 years ago, when delivering babies was considered a woman's province. Achieving equality in medicine has been a hard struggle for women. Less than a century ago, in 1873, the first graduating class of America's premier women's medical college had just six members, and even they were outnumbered by a faculty of eight.

The situation is quite different today. Women are wanted by medical schools. Women now comprise about 10 per cent of all medical students, compared with less than 5 per cent in 1940. However, in spite of this upsurge, the United States trails badly behind other countries in training women for medical careers. Many more are needed. Right now, there are 6,000 internships that are vacant because there are not enough trained men and women to fill them.

Our nation will need 100,000 more doctors by 1975. Womanpower must help meet this shortage. Where? Just about every area of medicine, from family practice to public health. Exciting, well-paying opportunities also abound in the fields of medical research, teaching, school health, industry, administration, foreign service and the military forces.

Individual areas of medical practice also need women. To gynecology, obstetrics and pediatrics, for example, a woman doctor brings her own unique experience and empathy to bear on patients' problems. As one woman doctor has said, her own three children provide her "most valuable postgraduate education."

Financing is a major factor in deciding upon a medical career. To become a professional today, three to four years of liberal arts study at a recognized college or university are required, followed by four years of medical school, internship and residency. The average cost of this schooling is $20,000.

In contrast, it cost a male about $700 to become a doctor in 1768. Women, as we noted, weren't even eligible.

Today, for a professional woman who may also be a wife and mother--and many are--costs are compounded when provision must be made for daily care of her children. Without doubt, a career in medicine does demand a sizeable investment of both time and money.

Happily, more scholarships, loans and grants are available for deserving students than ever before in history, and women are getting an increasingly larger share. Student loan programs are available through the government, private agencies and associations.

A case in point is the $4 million-dollar program administered by the American Medical Association's Education and Research Foundation, which has awarded some 35,000 loans to medical school students, interns and residents. This program provides a reservoir of credit for student loans, which are repaid after training is completed and wage earning begins. The cooperation of public-spirited companies enables the Foundation to make more money available to more deserving students at low interest rates.

Scholarship aid, of course, is one important means of easing the strain of medical training. In addition to grants which are given to medical schools for award at their discretion, there are many other scholarships provided by colleges, private enterprise, foundations, and federal, state and local governments.

Seriously interested in investigating medicine as a career? One excellent source is the American Medical Women's Association, which publishes a variety of helpful materials. These include "Financial Planning for the Woman Physician" (6¢ return postage), "Career Choices for Women in Medicine" (50¢) and "Medicine as a Career for Women" (15¢ return postage). For copies, write the Association at 1740 Broadway, New York, N. Y. 10019.

Also available, free of charge, is a comprehensive 32-page booklet, "Your Career Opportunities in Medicine," which contains a listing of medical schools and schools of the basic sciences in the United States. Write: Dept. BH, Priority, 235 East 42 St., New York, N. Y. 10017.

NAS Oceana C.O.'s House To Be Open

Bell-Taylor house, residence of the commanding officer of Oceana Naval Air Station, will be open to the public on Wednesday, Oct. 9 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. A donation of 50 cents will be asked.

The Bell-Taylor house was originally known as Cedar Grove and believed to have been built by the James family between 1810 and 1820. In 1871, at the death of Joshua James, Jr., the farm included a total of 509 acres. In 1873 the farm was purchased by Alexander W. Bell for $4,500 and became known as the Bell farm.

The house became known by its more familiar name, the Bell-Taylor house, in 1941 when A. T. Taylor bought the property from a Mr. Cartwright. Taylor continued to purchase additional land until the property encompassed over 1,000 acres.

The U. S. Navy began the purchase of the property in 1952, and the Bell-Taylor house has since become the residence of the commanding officer of Oceana NAS.

Patriots Continue on Victory Trail

With the exception of Princess Anne's Cavaliers, Virginia Beach high school teams are doing just about as predicted before the season started. First Colonial continues its winning ways. Cox, Bayside and Kempsville continue to show very little promise. And Kellam, late starter that the team has been, is finally beginning to gel.

But Princess Anne was supposed to be second only to First Colonial in Virginia Beach. So far the young, inexperienced team has not made a mark in the win column in three starts. The three opponents have been Great Bridge, (which also lost its stars of last year), First Colonial and Granby.

The schedule doesn't get any better for PA either, which faces a fair Maury team this weekend, then takes on rampaging Norview's Pilots. The following week the Cavaliers play Kellam. If the Knights continue to improve and do not suffer any more major injuries, Princess Anne may not register its first win until Oct. 25 and the clash with Kempsville.

On the other hand First Colonial's schedule favors a strong finish. Following three straight victories the Patriots take on hapless Kempsville. Then comes Cox and Indian River, neither very strong. Following Churchland the Patriots take on Maury, which could prove to be their only really tough game of the season. If they can get by there, an undefeated season is a definite possibility. But in a play-off for a share of the state title, First Colonial may be in trouble. The Patriots do not have the razzle dazzle of last year's Cavaliers. But they do have a strong team which could go all the way.

It is Kempsville which is having the problems in Virginia Beach. The very young and small team is building for the future and with a few breaks could win a game or two before the season ends. But even if not, wait until next year. Those juniors will be seniors with a lot of hard knocks to remember.

Fresh from a rather embarrassing 25-6 loss to Kellam last week the Chiefs take on First Colonial this Friday night on the Kempsville home grounds. But even being the home team won't do any good in this one. Look for Patriots Whitehorse, Graves and Co. to get a little rest after the half. The second team should be able to contain the Chiefs.

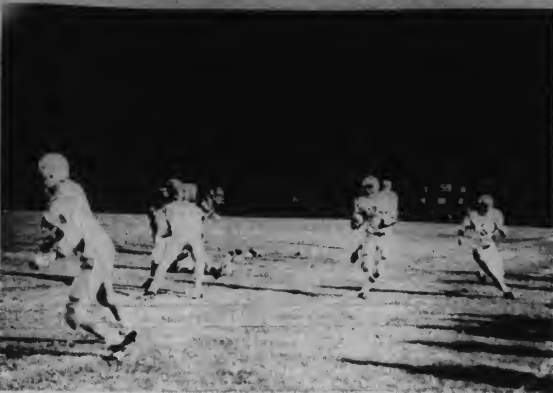

Last weekend the Patriots made it 25-0 against Bayside after the Marlin took the opening kickoff and marched to inside the five-yard line before losing the ball to First Colonial on a fourth down clutch play. The Marlin then also lost their luster and never threatened again.

Bayside faces another loss this weekend against Kellam now that Knights Chuck Connelly and Mike Futrell are beginning to show an effective running and passing game respectively. Kellam had a rough time the week before and lost to Norview's powerful Pilots, who incidentally do not face First Colonial this season. Since they are not matched, no prediction, but what a game that would be, with the Pilots looking better all the time, and facing a tougher season than the Patriots.

Cox got the axe from Norview last weekend, 32-6, to register its second loss against one win. That win came in an upset over Bayside in the opening game which could have gone either way. One touchdown was all that was scored in the game, but that's enough to spell the difference between victory and defeat. Cox meets a faltering Great Bridge eleven this weekend, but Great Bridge should take this one fairly easily in spite of their tie with Oscar Smith last weekend. Both of those teams have now won two, tied one and lost none. In Virginia Beach only Cox is yet to meet Oscar Smith also before the season ends.

Maury is still looked upon as the dark horse of the Eastern District and the Princess Anne game this weekend could be crucial. Maury did not make a big splash last weekend in its debut against Lake Taylor in the 24-7 win, but showed lots of promise. Maury should add to the win record this weekend against the Cavaliers.

Union Kempsville takes on a strong Booker T. Washington team this weekend after having an open date last weekend. Although Union Kempsville has won its first two games handily, one by a rout, Booker T. is a really tough opponent and

1st Colonial Aims for First Place

By Pinky Amburn
First Colonial High School

First Colonial High has started the school year by putting First Colonial first, not only athletically, but scholastically. The students are proud of their undefeated football team which rates number one in the district thus far this season. The Patriots, led by co-captains Clinton Graves and Carlton Rader, have won all three games this season. They beat Bayside, Princess Anne and Lower Richmond. This Friday night the Patriots meet Kempsville on the Kempsville field.

Greg DePrez, Kathy Kingan and Patricia Loesche received Letters of Commendation honoring them for their high performance on the 1968 National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test. They are in the upper two per cent of those who will graduate from high schools in the United States in 1969.

Although the commended students rank just below the 15,000 Semifinalists, their names are reported to other scholarship-granting agencies and two colleges of their choice.

The aim of the students and faculty is to "Keep First Colonial First." They are off to a good start.

Action gets rough for girls' football teams at Union Kempsville.

Tigerettes Win 0-0 Tie Game

By Deborah Peebles
Union Kempsville

At Union Kempsville High School Sept. 28, the girls took the place of the boys in a game of touch football.

This game was played to raise money for one of the contestants running for Miss Homecoming. The game proved to be very exciting and fun for everyone, especially with the boy cheerleaders cheering the girls on.

The two teams playing were the Tigerettes and the Go-Getters, both made up of students of U.K. They both played with good spirit and good sportsmanship.

At the end of the fourth quarter the score still remained 0-0, but the game was given to the Tigerettes because of faulty play on the part of the Go-Getters.

Other members of the team were: Brenda Williams, Jeanette Skinner, Brenda Olds, Audrey Cuffee, Sandra Mayfield, Laverne Baxter and Naomi Parker.

Grow Herbs at Home

(Editor's note: Here is another in the series on home horticulture by Wesley P. Judkins of the horticulture department at Virginia Tech.)

Spice up your cooking this winter with some home-grown herbs such as chives and parsley. You can grow them in short rows in the garden during summer and carry some inside to keep for winter.

To provide chives and parsley for winter use you may transplant a few clumps into five or six-inch pots and grow them on the kitchen window sill. The fluorescent light over your sink will help stimulate good growth as a supplement to the sunlight they receive through the window.

Use a light potting soil as you would for your flowering house plants. Water at weekly intervals with a soluble house plant fertilizer which you can secure from your garden center or florist. This will promote vigorous growth and ensure a nice supply of fresh chives or parsley for winter use.

Chive is a perennial plant which grows to about eight or ten inches tall. The delicate onion flavor of the chopped fresh leaves is especially good in salads, omelets or scrambled eggs. They are also used in soups, stews, sauces, scalloped vegetables and cottage cheese. Use only the fresh tender leaves as the bulbs or dried leaves lose their flavor.

Chive bulbs which are planted in early spring multiply rapidly. The clumps need to be divided every two or three years to prevent excessive crowding. This dividing operation can be done in the fall and some of the plants potted for the winter use as suggested here.

Parsley, as grown in the garden, is a biennial which produces leaves during the first season, followed by flowers and seeds the second year. Dig some of your plants for potting this fall. They will continue to produce leaves during the winter. They will not produce flower stalks because they must go through a cold dormant period to cause the young flowers to be formed in the crown of the plant.

Parsley leaves may be chopped into small pieces for use in soups, sauces, meatloaf, sandwich filling or in boiled or creamed vegetables. The entire leaf is attractive as a garnish for many foods. Add that extra flavor and decorative touch to your meals which only parsley can give.

You may harvest the green leaves of parsley at any time when they are large enough for use. The full distinctive flavor is secured from fresh leaves, but the dried product is quite satisfactory.

VIRGINIA BEACH Garden Club News

Princess Anne Hills

Mrs. Grace Sumner spoke on "Herbs" at the first meeting of the year of the Princess Anne Hills Garden Club, Sept. 23 at the Ocean Hearth.

Mrs. Sumner told club members they could cook a roast, about three and a half or more pounds, while taking a trip of approximately 300 miles. First season the meat with herbs. Then wrap it in heavy duty aluminum foil securely so no juice may leak out.

Then put it in the manifold in the engine of your car. Turn it over when you stop half way. If you travel between 50 and 55 miles an hour, it will cook as a roast in a 350 degree oven. Army cooks use this method in the field.

Kempsville Garden Club

Mrs. George Hamilton spoke on "Basic and Advanced Flower Arranging" at the September meeting of the Kempsville Gar-

Kingston Garden Club President, Mrs. William A. Perkins, center, along with members of the garden club and their children recently spent an afternoon picking up trash from a large vacant field at the intersection of North Plaza Trail and Kings Guard Road.

Desserts Are Pretty and Delicious

As lovely to look at as they are luscious to eat delicious desserts are the final fillip for the perfect party... a bit of mealtime magic to satisfy even the sweetest tooth without necessarily adding a bit of unwanted waistline.

Today's desserts play it smart: mixing and matching taste and texture in wonderful ways that watch weight while they save time. Some of the very nicest are the instant wonders—puddings out of the package, fresh fruits of the season from the supermarket, delicious delights out of the freezer—that combine quick preparation with traditional taste temptation.

Whatever your choice, the final course doesn't have to be "just dessert"... not with the help of smart serving tricks. Even the easiest packaged preparation can look glamorously gorgeous, and there's no reason why a non-fattening finale has to lack the final touch of beauty. (Desserts should please the eye every bit as much as the appetite.)

Easy does it! Just pick your flavor accent, look at the family supply of glassware with a new eye—and start painting pretty-to-eat pictures. The jobs your glasses are "supposed" to do don't count—not when the shapely clear containers are just the thing to add a festive sparkle to even the most everyday dessert. (And nicely enough you'll get double-duty use out of once-in-a-while glassware, too!)

Sparkling stemware (why wait for wine?) for a foamy parfait, a clear champagne saucer to show off the swirling colors of liqueur-flavored fruit, a spiky snowball with sauce in a champagne-sherbet glass... when service is the secret, anything goes!

For a formal meal, creative cooks are reviving a continental custom called the "intermezzo"—the pause that refreshes, between soup and fish, or with the main course. Clearing the palate calls for a tart-flavored ice. Scoop out a fat lemon, fill it with lemon ice and top it with a red cherry or sprig of mint—or serve a ball of raspberry ice in a punch cup.

At dessert, just dust off the punch bowl itself (no reason for it to take up shelf space between holiday parties) and build a flowering fruit bush. Crush ice to fill the bowl at least halfway and top with your favorite fruit combination. To keep the fruit from floating in the ice, slip a glass platter or dinner plate between the two layers; it will act as an invisible shield. Rim the edge with a pretty pattern of whole berries, citrus sections and greenery touches, and serve on crystal clear glass plates. A dessert with real sparkle—just the right touch to reflect the glow of a candle-lit setting. And no special work for the hostess: machine-made American glassware, even the most elegant, is designed to go right into the automatic dishwasher.

Next time you're menu-planning, check your cupboard first for the serving idea, then suit the dessert choice to the container. Tested ideas that please—to fit the glasses in just about every cupboard—include these:

PUDDING PARFAIT SWIRL

A really exotic dessert—made with the most normal ingredient—packaged pudding mix—but spiked with new flavor to take

SNOWBALL SURPRISE

Everyone's favorite—a coconut-coated ice cream ball—probably the simplest of all desserts to prepare. Use your choice of vanilla or chocolate ice cream—coat a dipper of it with packaged coconut shreds, drop into a low footed sherbet dish, and pour a generous helping of cold (some like it hot) prepared chocolate sauce over it. Now the surprise—after the chocolate sauce has settled, pour an ounce of Kahlua or coffee-flavored liqueur (there are two or three of these types available) over each serving. Snowball Surprise—Supreme!

PEARS GRAND MARNIER

Choose ripe firm pears when selecting—Bartlett in summer, Anjou in winter. Peel carefully to retain shape, and coat with lemon juice to prevent browning or discoloration.

Place pears upright in long-stemmed, wide-mouthed cocktail or champagne glasses and chill until serving time. Prepare Grand Marnier sauce as follows: (makes about one cup to pour over pears when ready to serve). If you wish, double the portions—the syrup will keep for days in a glass covered refrigerator dish. Do not freeze.

GRAPES GLACE

Select one large bunch of green or white grapes (enough for four to six servings to half-fill a 2 1/2 ounce brandy snifter). Wash grapes carefully and remove stems. Spread a single layer of grapes in glass pie plates, or shallow baking dishes, and set aside until glaze is prepared.

In a small glass saucepan, make about two cups of light syrup (the old-fashioned way—one half cup of granulated sugar to two cups of water). Brush the syrup lightly over the grapes, thoroughly coating them. Chill (do not freeze) the grapes until serving time.

Fill your most handsome crystal salad bowl with the grapes when completely chilled, and pour one full cup of white wine—Chablis or Sauterne over the grapes. Serve as a separate last course with coffee in the living room, lading the grapes into the brandy snifters as the guests watch. Last—sprinkle a half teaspoon of powdered sugar over each individual serving. (Note: a seasonal variation—use the big purple Concord grapes, and change the color of wine to red—Port, Muscatel or Burgundy.)

LEMON CHARTREUSE ICE

An iced confection that will be your most sophisticated touch, and will establish you as a true gourmet. A fine dessert, but the most effective way to serve Lemon Chartreuse is not as a sweet, but as a companion to a fine beef roast, veal or fish—to be enjoyed with the main course. Make it well ahead of dinner time to allow a firm serving straight from the freezer at the last on a sparkling glass salad will need:

SHERRIED STRAWBERRIES

Remove stems from whole fresh strawberries, or defrost whole frozen strawberries (not sliced)—quantity according to the number of servings you wish. Marinate for at least two hours in the following sauce:

1/4 c. of brown sugar
1/4 c. of white sugar
1 c. of dry sherry
1 pinch of cinnamon

Quantity will provide marinade for approximately one box of strawberries.

When ready to serve, drain and mix with miniature marshmallows and serve in low stemmed champagne/sherbet glass.

Now Possible To Shrink Hemorrhoids

And Promptly Stop Itching, Relieve Pain In Most Cases.

Science has found a medication with the ability, in most cases, to relieve pain, itching and shrink hemorrhoids. In case after case doctors proved, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction took place. The secret is Preparation H. It also soothes irritated tissues and helps prevent further infection. Just ask for Preparation H Ointment or Suppositories.

lemon shells will stand upright. Place lemon ice in blender, add Chartreuse and two tablespoons of fresh lemon pulp. Blend at low speed until mixture is the consistency of a thick milk shake—then pour mixture into lemon shells until filled.

Wrap each lemon cup (individually) in foil, or your favorite wrap for easy handling, and keep in the freezer until the main course is ready. Serve on a sparkling glass salad plate, surrounded by green leaves (you might add a daisy too), and garnish each serving with a maraschino cherry. Results—"Intermezzo".

Many people fail to see the importance of vegetation on sand dunes in this coastal area. But have you ever noticed how much higher the dunes are that have vegetation on them? This can be seen easily by a Sunday ride to Sandbridge or the National Wildlife Refuge just south of Sandbridge.

The Ash Wednesday storm of 1962 swept away much of the beach along the ocean. High, stable, well anchored dunes can help to reduce damage from such freak occurrences.

Many people have succeeded in getting sea oats, an attractive beach grass, to live on their dunes. These, however, establish very slowly. The further south one goes, the more apt he is to observe sea oats. Curiosity seekers and flower arrangers insist on picking sea oats much to the dismay of the owners, and to those who would like to have more to enjoy.

When you are enjoying the beach with its every changing complexion this fall, don't pick the sea oats for your next flower arrangement, but leave them for others to enjoy.

Psychologists say that in time of stress, there is a nostalgia for elegance. This seems to be born out in the current boom in sterling silver flatware and holloware. Brides are giving the greatest impetus to the demand for sterling, but older women are also reported to be buying additional solid silver to supplement their original sets.

City Councilmen Agree On Cultural Center Need

A meeting after the open informal meeting of City Council Monday discussed at length the possibility of a new cultural center.

Contrary to other reports, Councilmen say they are agreed that there is a definite need for some type of center in the near future. The problem arises on what direction to head in at present.

Councilman Lawrence Marshall, who has headed the study commission on the project, is reported to favor a complete consultant study now that the City Planning Commission has recommended the building of a combined arena, small theatre and exhibition hall near the terminus of the toll road in the Beach borough.

Other Councilmen reportedly are not ready to go that far yet. They say they want to study the matter more to attempt to determine costs and how the facility can be paid for. It is most likely that a bond issue will have to be voted on sometime next year if the project is to move quickly.

Marshall's other suggestion, that the American Institute of Architects members in Virginia Beach all participate in a contest for designing the building has been taken under advisement. This type of contest can be costly, it was pointed out, since prize money must also be put up and certain other conditions must be met.

Money to build the center would seem to be at the bottom of all cautious steps now being taken, according to city officials.

Council's regular informal meeting Monday also heard a request for some $59,000 from Roland E. Dorer, project director of "Mt. Trashmore," the city's dump-into-amphitheater project aided by the federal government.

The request would cover operation through the end of this year and cover all overpending to this time. The increased costs have come through the need for additional equipment and maintenance, among other things, according to Dorer.

Cutback To Affect Va. Beach

Naval facilities in the City of Virginia Beach will be affected by the Defense Department's recent order to release men from their Reserve commitments prior to the fulfilling of their required active duty portion of their military obligation.

The move, taken under a cutback in Defense budget allocations, will affect some 7,500 of the 105,000 Navy Reservists currently in the Tidewater area.

Navy officials tell the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN the move will mean a reduction of 200 billets at the Oceana Naval Air Station, a loss of 16 billets at Dam Neck, plus a reduction of 2500 billets of amphibious force units presently assigned to the Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base and Norfolk. Officials are quick to point out all of the above figures are approximate and includes both officers and enlisted men. Another important fact concerning the Little Creek reductions is that the billets involve units which are aloft as well as ashore.

According to authorities the reduction's will be carried out between now and Dec. 31. At the present time there is no true way of evaluating how great the economic impact will be on the city of Virginia Beach in this reduction.

Commission Approves Townhouses, Apts.

The Virginia Beach Planning Commission conducted a public hearing Tuesday in which they approved construction of 376 townhouses and 448 apartment units.

Approval was given to Vacation Home Builders of Tidewater, Inc., to construct 194 townhouses on property located on the south side of Reagan Avenue, west of Great Neck Road. This property is in the London Bridge area.

Bernard Jaffe received approval to construct 182 townhouses and 368 apartments on property located on the south side of Bonney Road, east of

Report Initiates Changes in Jail

City Sgt. John E. Marr told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN he has received a report from the Virginia Division of Corrections on the inspection of the City Jail he requested in mid-August.

Marr requested the inspection shortly after the discovery of a 25-caliber pistol and a box of 25-caliber ammunition concealed in the maximum security section of the jail, and the escape of three prisoners after overpowering of jailer Fred Harrell. Both incidents occurred in a short period of time.

Marr has declined to discuss the contents of the report on the inspection or to divulge any specific changes in the operation of the City Jail which are called for in the report, although earlier he had promised the SUN a copy of that report. Marr does admit, however, certain recommendations were made.

One of the changes apparently concerns security at the jail, since a full set of jailers keys were reportedly taken in the escape of the three prisoners.

Marr told the SUN, "I've got a man changing locks on a few doors, back in the cell area and the front door."

Marr also indicated he is taking steps to comply with other recommended changes, however he did not outline any specific changes. "There are some other changes I'm going to make, but I can't say anything now," said Marr.

Although Marr is a constitutional officer, and his operation of the City Jail comes under the jurisdiction of state authorities, the SUN has learned that a copy of the inspection report on the City Jail was forwarded to Virginia Beach City Council and to City Manager Roger Scott. While Scott declined to discuss the contents of the report, he did say it would be discussed in a meeting of the City Council in the near future.

This Tuesday state inspectors again visited the City Jail. The inspection team, which included a woman dietitian, arrived at the facility about mid-day, and were escorted by Marr into the jail during the serving of the meal.

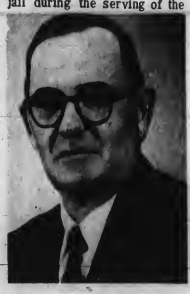

Meanwhile Monday's docket call of Virginia Beach Circuit Court set Dec. 17, 1968 as trial date of former jailer Kenneth Lyles on the charge of aiding a prisoner in escape efforts from the City Jail.

Lyles, 55, who resided on Mable Lane at the time of his employment at the City Jail, is now reportedly in Corpus Christi, Texas. Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans says he has been assured by Lyles' defense counsel that he will return to Virginia Beach in time for the trial, and it will not be necessary to extradite him.

A Circuit Court grand jury has indicted Lyles on the charge that he allegedly supplied an apparent duplicate of a jailer's key to Randall Coakley, Jr., to aid him in escaping from the jail, where he is being confined following his conviction of armed robbery charges. Police investigation, however, indicated this key would not open any door in the jail due to a flaw and that Coakley turned the key over to officials when he changed his mind about any escape plan.

An additional charge was placed against Lyles Monday by police detectives investigating the case. The charge alleges that while Lyles was employed as a City Jailor he not only "supposedly" supplied Coakley with the key, but also "supposedly" supplied Coakley with a 22-automatic and four hack-saw blades, and that Lyles was supposed to have received the sum of $20,000 from Coakley for these items.

A thorough investigation by members of the police department, and members of Marr's staff is still continuing, according to reliable sources.

Sadler Meets With Governor

James P. Sadler of Virginia Beach, committee chairman of the Mayor's Airport Study Committee, met with Virginia Gov. Mills E. Godwin last week in Richmond concerning a general aviation airport for Virginia Beach.

"I am not at liberty to discuss the meeting at present," said Sadler. "But it was a most satisfactory meeting."

Sadler and members of the committee have been meeting with great difficulty in trying to find a suitable location for an airport in the resort city. Sadler now says that City Council has authorized a possible swap of property the city owns for property owned by the state, along old rights-of-way of the Norfolk and Southern Railroad.

City Manager Roger Scott noted, however that he was not aware of the offer of a 50-foot wide, 6,000 foot long strip that Sadler mentioned actually being authorized. The parcels are near Virginia Beach Borough, but Sadler and Scott both said they could not be more specific at present.

Sadler said that Gov. Godwin now wants to discuss the matter with Col. William G. Plentl, aeronautics director of the state before making any decision. Plentl has been one who has greatly favored the location of a general aviation airport in Virginia Beach and has worked closely with Sadler and city officials.

Within the next week or ten days Sadler said he hopes to have some sort of decision from the governor. Scott said he would reserve all comment until that time.

Sadler indicated that he was optimistic after the meeting, but that he had seen other plans fade recently and was ready to say whether he thought this one would succeed.

Other suggestions, such as the dual-use of Oceana Naval Air Station for military and civilian use, have been made, but have not progressed. In other places, cooperation by military and civilian authorities has been able to establish such facilities, but Oceana authorities are reportedly against such a suggestion. At present military aircraft have almost unlimited use of the airfield above Virginia Beach and have figured greatly in the problems of locating an airport here.

Work is nearing completion on the new Virginia Beach administration building at Princess Anne Courthouse as is witnessed by this rear view of structure.

Cooper Explains Problems

"The amusement park business is a tough business," said Joel B. Cooper, who with his father, Dudley Cooper, has been operating Seaside Amusement Park at Virginia Beach. The elder Cooper has owned and operated the park since 1943.

Joel Cooper cited the short season, long operating hours and terrific personnel turnover as contributing factors to the difficulty of the business.

It was announced last week that Seaside Park has only one more season of full operation if the City Planning Commission and the City Council concur, and if financing can be arranged for a high-rise motel on the site at Laskin Road and the oceanfront.

Plans at present call for tearing down the park, which was built in 1904, and the erection of a $2 million, 12-story motel with 200 rooms. Application for a use permit will come before the planners in November, according to Cooper. A parking lot across the street from the park will probably be used for parking for the new motel as well.

Plans at present call for the removal of all amusement rides, but the carnival-type games will probably remain. Cooper said that while some of the amusement rides will be sold the majority will be moved to Ocean View Amusement Park in Norfolk as part of a plan to upgrade that park substantially over the next five years.

"We hope to make it much larger," said Cooper. "And to make it more of a regional amusement park."

The possible loss of the amusement park to Virginia Beach has concerned Charles Gardner, president of the Innkeepers Association. He said that an expanded amusement park is considered important to the orderly expansion of the resort industry. This was one of the major points presented in a report earlier this year by the innkeepers.

Gardner said he hopes some other interests will come to Virginia Beach and possibly build an amusement park near the oceanfront, but not necessarily on the oceanfront. He admitted that waterfront property may be too valuable for such a facility.

Cooper said that he feels such a park must be on the waterfront and that location is of prime importance to the success of a park. He added that he agreed on the value of waterfront property and that this was a large part of the problem of success of the amusement park business.

He also said the cost of entering the amusement park business today is phenomenal. "A major ride can cost anywhere from $75,000 to $200,000," he said.

City Manager Happy after 100 Days in Office

"I am still as enthusiastic and as excited about the future of Virginia Beach as I was on June 30," said City Manager Roger Scott. "I have had the highest cooperation of everyone—the Constitutional officers, City Council, all city employees and the citizens of Virginia Beach."

Scott's first 100 days as City Manager of Virginia Beach ended Tuesday at midnight, and they have been an active 100 days.

"Nothing has happened that I had not anticipated," he said. "Thankfully there has been no problem that was insoluble."

Scott was hired as city manager by City Council after an exhaustive search for a new city manager following the announced retirement of W. Russell Hatchett on July 1.

"My relationship with Council has been the finest I have seen in all the four cities where I have served in the past," said Scott. "They've done everything they could to make my job easier and I've done everything I could to help relieve the tremendous load they must carry."

There have been a number of sweeping changes since Scott took over, but each has been accepted with little or no problem.

Just two weeks after Scott became manager he asked City Council to end closed informal meetings and allow press representatives at all meetings except where information would be discussed that might prejudice the future course of the city. It was thought at that time that the end to closed meetings was called for in the new Freedom of Information Law. When it was later learned the meetings could be closed, Council and Scott recommended that the meetings remain open.

"I think it is one of the finest things Council has done," said Scott. "I am glad we were able to take a lead in this matter."

On the same day he called for the open meetings he issued a directive on all purchasing procedures of the city at the height of conflict of interest controversies, and required all employees involved in purchasing policies in the past.

He pushed for the quick establishment of a personnel board, a matter on which he had put many hours while assistant city manager. The board,

City Manager Roger M. Scott

Then criticism arose concerning the city's insurance. Scott appointed a special committee to study the matter immediately. That study is under way, thus ending that problem.

Criticism on the progress of the city dredge in both Rudee Inlet and branch of the Lynnhaven River prompted Scott to call for a priority of all future projects. That list is now being prepared.

Criticism of the handling of surfing problems brought about a study of long-range planning, the first concrete planning in several years.

In August at three meetings Scott pointed out the need for a study of fire departments in Virginia Beach. He said he saw the eventual need for paid departments, or at least part paid employees in the future and has recommended a consultant study. This will soon be done.

Fire department equipment caused a minor clash for Scott but he stuck to the rules set up and Council agreed that exact procedures and specifications had to be met and that no one department could be allowed a variance.

In other matters Scott has been against proposed pay raises for juvenile probation officers. He said he is aware they need a raise, but that he cannot okay a raise for them while others are faced with the same need. Council is expected

Building May Set New Record

Construction in Virginia Beach during September continued on the rise. A total of 306 new building permits were issued for a total value of $4,424,624.

That amount, added to the previous eight months of 1968, brings the yearly total to date to $48,942,218, well on the way to setting a new record for building in a single year in Virginia Beach. At this same time a year ago, the total stood at $36,615,434.

Single family residences still lead the list of the new permits. September saw 180 permits for a value of $646,859. Apartments and townhouse permits fell off sharply in value 16 permits in September, valued at $208,000, but officials say a large number of multi-

Straight talk on car financing.

When you have the time, take a look at the classified section of this paper.

Chances are, you'll find an ad placed by someone who wants you to take up the payments on his car.

This person probably went in somewhere a couple of months ago and got an auto loan quick and easy.

And then he found out that paying it back certainly wasn't quick. Or easy.

Maybe he was confused by all the gimmicks and slogans and talk about "quick and easy" terms.

And maybe he was confused about the actual interest he had to pay on his loan.

Apparently the place where he got his money was really interested in making an auto loan.

And not at all interested in the person making it.

We at First & Merchants have a philosophy about this. We feel if a loan isn't good for the customer, it certainly isn't good for us, either.

So we take the trouble to make sure the loan is going to be good.

We'll figure out how soon you can pay the loan all back. The sooner you do it, the more money you save.

For instance, if you could repay your $2,000 note in 30 months, we'd write you a 30 month loan.

And you'd save a good bit, when you compare the cost of a standard 36-month loan.

And we can make the whole thing a little less painful by automatically deducting the payments from your checking account.

Of course, we're going to have to ask you some personal questions.

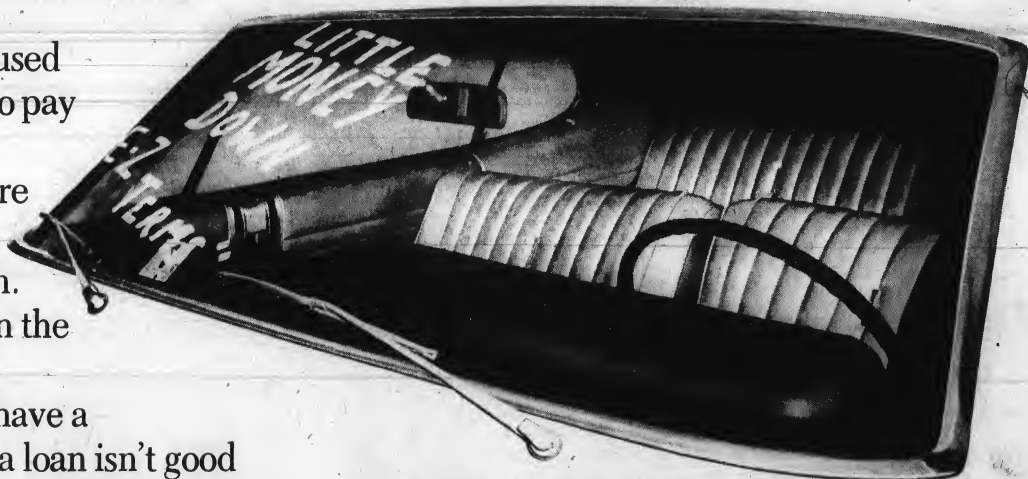

Like how much money you make. And what your major debts are. Things like that.

But all these questions are really as much for your protection as for ours.

After all, you'd be in pretty sorry shape if your auto loan payments took up so much of your spending money, you wouldn't have enough left over to handle unforeseen emergencies. Or to go out and enjoy yourself once in a while.

Let's face it. The easiest and least expensive way to buy a car is with cash.

If you've got the cash.

But if you're like most people, you just don't have it. Or you're reluctant to blow most of your savings account that took you years to build. And will take you many more years to replace. (If you ever get around to it at all.)

The fact is, most people really have just one choice. And that's to borrow.

So if you need money to buy a car this year, ask your dealer about F&M financing. Or come by and talk to us at First & Merchants.

We'll give it to you straight.

Wedgewood Comedy Marvelous

When Edward Albee was asked what his comedy "Everything in the Garden" was all about shortly after it opened on Broadway, he said it was about money and prostitution, both in the realistic and symbolic aspects. While this may be an oversimplification, the two subjects, however interrelated, do make up the superficial story of the current bill of fare of Williamsburg's Wedgewood Theatre.

On the surface the play deals with a middle-aged, middle-income couple with a teenage son in boarding school. They are beset with all the usual problems . . . too little money to live beyond their means as they do to keep up with their neighbors and friends. While they scrimp and save on bad cigarettes to collect the coupons, they join the tennis club that only the elite and privileged may join. And they maintain a fabulous garden around their home.

When the financial strain becomes too much, the wife turns to prostitution on a grand scale and makes a considerable amount of money in a short time at a plush establishment in the city operated by a prim British madame.

Obviously problems arise when her husband finds out. In the past he would not even let her take a part-time job. Then to complicate matters, in a tense confrontation scene at a party, they find out that three of the women in their social group are also making money this same way to augment their husbands' income so that they too can keep up with each other.

The symbolism involved is complex and personal. Not one member of the audience can leave without seeing something of himself in one of the deep character studies Albee presents. No doubt everything in the garden will continue to grow no matter what, and everything in life will continue to go on no matter what we do; but Albee makes it uncomfortably easy to see ourselves for what we really are and there is almost an embarrassment that he can see so well inside us.

He makes no attempt to judge this morality of immorality, but leaves it to the playgoer to judge and be judged.

Paul Iddings is outstanding as the husband. His relaxed style in the early scenes is only outdone by the tremendous restraint he shows later. This is one of his finest jobs in the theatre. Claudine Iddings, as his wife, has a difficult role. But she conveys with beauty the good woman who sees nothing wrong with her prostitution activities because it's for her husband and son, the house, and of course, the garden.

J. Mackie, as Mrs. Toothe, the madame, is nicely serene in her unscrupulous role. Her peerage bearing is a pleasure to watch.

It is difficult to separate the neighbors, because they are so much alike. Frances Bailey, Carolee Silcox and Billie Gene lager all play typical nouveau riche suburbanite wives that are also prostitutes with all the high moral quality needed. All are excellent.

Bob Hutchinson, Roby Brown and D. R. Henry, as their typically ruthless husbands who understand why their wives are also prostitutes, handle their roles very nicely. Their selfish feelings come through perfectly. Billy Swinder, as the teenager who shocks them all in his craving for attention is a good mirror of them.

Only rich bachelor neighbor Jack cannot be categorized. He is unhappy, a lecher, and he drinks too much and talks too much. He is obviously the conscience of all of them and Larry Glaister handles the complex role handily. The play is sensitively directed by Ron Reid.

This is definitely not a family-type comedy, but it is marvelous theatre well-worth seeing. HJL

Millers To Record Messages

Millers Department Store, in cooperation with the U.S.O., announces "Operation Voice-Over-Sea."

This is a program whereby letters are recorded for servicemen overseas. It will last for approximately three weeks. Anyone who has a loved one in military service in Vietnam, or elsewhere overseas, is invited to participate.

Interested persons should take the name and military address of the letter recipient to Millers Department Store across from Princess Anne Plaza, where the letter will be recorded in private. The letter may be heard at any one of the U. S. O. posts located throughout Vietnam and elsewhere.

Although this service is free, there is a small charge for handling and postage.

Art Auction To Be Oct. 19

The Tidewater Artists Association is having its biannual art auction Oct. 19 at the Norfolk Museum.

Proceeds from the auction, which begins at 8 p.m., will go to ODC and various scholarship funds. Several area artists have paintings which will be sold.

Auctioneer for the event will be Maury Riganio.

Head Campaign For Bond Vote

Democratic City Committee Chairman Owen Pickett and State Sen. Edward T. (Ned) Caton III will head the Virginia Beach campaign for voter approval of the proposed $81 million state bond issues in November.

According to Pickett, this campaign will be separate from the national Humphrey-Muskie ticket campaign.

'38 Maury Class Plans Reunion

Maury High School Class of 1938 will hold its 30 year reunion Oct. 19 at the Lake Wright Motel, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Class members should make reservations through Louis Mirman, 318 Lynn Shores Dr., or telephone him at 340-3100 or 340-4709.

Jaycees Host Seminar

The Virginia Beach Jaycees hosted the annual Eastern Regional Metropolitan Affairs Seminar Oct. 4-6.

The Seminar, held at the Mariner Motel, was attended by Jaycees from 14 East Coast states. Included in the Seminar were forums and speeches dealing with the problems facing urban areas of the eastern states and how the Jaycees can best work for their solution.

There was an impressive list of speakers at the Seminar, including U. S. Sen. William B. Spong Jr., State Sen. Henry Howell and Wendell E. Smith, president of the United States Jaycees.

Bayside Plans Story Hours

A weekly story hour has been scheduled for children from three to five years old at the Bayside Library on Independence Blvd.

A Halloween story is planned for Oct. 25 and a Thanksgiving story is planned for Nov. 1, 8, 15, and 22. All stories will be at 10:30 a.m.

Settlement Made Out of Court

Agreement to the terms of a settlement for Rado Annette Harris and her family will result in a total of $715,000 awarded to the family.

The case involves suits on behalf of Rado; her mother, Mrs. Katherine Harris Basnight; her stepfather, Truxton Basnight; and a brother, Ronnie, 15. It was scheduled for trial Oct. 29 in the U. S. District Court in Norfolk. The agreement will still have to be approved by the court, according to U.S. Dist. Atty. Roger William. Court approval is necessary because a child is involved and also because the suit is against the U.S. government.

Rado and her family were injured Feb. 21, 1967 when a Navy jet crashed into their home. Rado and her stepfather, Truxton Basnight, are still undergoing treatment for their injuries. Rado's physicians have said that Rado will need 20 to 40 more operations in the future.

Plaza Squad Sweeps Honors

Men of the Princess Anne Plaza Rescue Squad made a clean sweep last weekend in the first aid contest held in conjunction with the annual Rescue Squad Parade at Ashland.

The Plaza volunteers emerged from the competition with trophies for first places in first aid and best equipment as well as the Sullivan Memorial Award for receiving the highest total number of points in all categories of first aid and equipment competition.

The first place award in the first aid competition was earned for the best performance in solving a problem which required the squadsmen to render immediate first aid to protect life in a mock emergency. The men were given a sealed envelope which contained information outlining the mock emergency they would be faced with, and then judged upon the manner in which they handled the emergency.

The equipment first place award was earned in the category covering "custom carry-all conversion ambulances". Units were judged in their ability to stock their ambulance with equipment which is required under existing regulations, plus the ability of the unit to stock a particular ambulance with additional first aid material and equipment to make their unit as flexible as possible and sustain long periods of operation in order to meet emergencies. An important part of this competition was the ability of squadsmen to have full knowledge of the capabilities of all material and equipment contained within the ambulance.

The Plaza Squadsmen who traveled to Ashland and took part in the competition were Squad Capt. R. D. Bottom, 1st Lt. P. Knoblett, 2nd Lt. R. W. Perone, J. Fremeau and D. McAtee.

This competition is sponsored annually by the Ashland Fire Department and Rescue Squad and is open to all Rescue Squads of the state. This year approximately 30 squads from throughout Virginia took part in the program. The competition is second in importance only to the same type program sponsored by the Virginia Association of Rescue Squads, Inc.

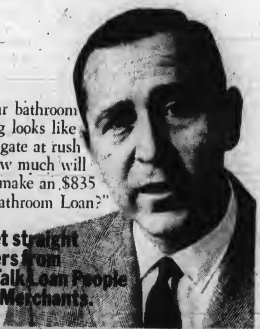

Members of the Virginia Beach Rescue Squad last month captured the top awards in the Virginia Association competition. Men of the Plaza rescue squad point to the fact, and rightly so, that citizens of Virginia Beach are assured that when they require emergency services of a rescue squad they will receive some of the best service available anywhere in the state.

Explorers Are Real Marksmen

"You hear so much about juvenile delinquents today, yet here is a fine group of young men you don't have to worry about."

These words were used by Ernie C. Hyers in describing the members of Boy Scout Explorer Post #407, who have formed a rifle team. The team is comprised of 10 to 15 members of the Post, which is sponsored by the Bow Creek Presbyterian Church, Hyers, who is the Post advisor, also serves as instructor in teaching the members of the rifle team the proper handling and use of firearms.

The training is accomplished through use of the National Rifle Association basic marksmanship course. Training begins with at least eight hours of classroom instruction consisting of the fundamental operation of firearms, the safe handling of firearms, and proper steps to take as safeguards against injuring anyone while using firearms. Actual training in the use of firearms is carried out, under personal supervision by Hyers, on the Virginia Beach police special weapons range near Princess Anne Courthouse.

During range training members of the team use 22-caliber, single shot, bolt action rifles, which are fired at NRA approved targets. Each member of the team is scored on points of accuracy of "hits" within prescribed time periods, and on varying distances from targets. During all range training the Explorers are constantly reminded of precautions to take to assure the safe use of firearms, and groups are kept at a minimum in number to further assure the respect of safety. Such training not only prepares these young men for hunting trips they might take, but also provides them with the proficiency required to take part in competition with other rifle teams of Explorer Posts throughout the Tidewater Council of Boy Scouts. The success of the training is best exemplified by Hyers' pointing out that the group continually captures first and second places in individual competition in nearly every match they enter. The value of such training for these young men is perhaps best summed up by Hyers in his statement that "this is a real healthy sport, and looking at the cross section of these young men you don't worry about the future."

Scott

Other future projects that will soon be announced by Scott include a code of ethics he hopes to have Council adopt as an ordinance. It will set a stringent code by which all city employees must abide, especially concerning involvement in political activities.

In addition the next 100 days will see the completion of a new water contract with Norfolk.

"So far the negotiations are going very well on that," said Scott.

Probably the most far-reaching change to be started in the next 100 days will be a complete re-organization of all city operations along professional managerial standards.

"This won't be a sweeping change immediately, but will take a few years to implement," Scott said. "But it must come." Roger Scott spends much of his day in meetings, on the phone and answering letters. He averages four or five nights a week at other meetings of one kind or another.

When he was selected he promised two things to be a 24-hour city manager and to stay out of all politics.

Even his earlier critics from anti political factions agree he has done both.

The Thalia Elementary School PTA will meet at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 15 at the school. It will be open house.

BADGES & BANTER

By Les Lehigh

A fish fry will be held this Saturday by men of the Ocean Park Volunteer Fire Department. The affair, which will also feature ham dinners for those who prefer it, will be held from 1:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. at the unit's station on Shore Drive just west of the Lesner Bridge. Those wishing to attend may purchase tickets at the door or from volunteers.

Col. D. T. Pantano, Jr., of the Virginia Beach Auxiliary Police, says several new men have just joined the unit. He added that men of the Auxiliary put in many hours assisting regular policemen of Virginia Beach in security details during the Greater Tidewater Fair staged last week at the Pungo Airfield.

Nurserymen Elect Hayes

The newly formed Tidewater Nurserymen's Association has elected C. J. Mickey Hayes, Jr., of Virginia Beach as its first president.

The group, comprised of member firms from the southeastern section of Virginia, was created to help promote the general welfare of the trade in the Tidewater cities and counties, and to increase the usefulness of the industry to the general public.

Other officers elected were Bob Pretlow of Pretlow and Company, Franklin, vice-president; Elgia Easter of the VPI Extension Service, secretary; and Pat Bridges, Norfolk Botanical Gardens, Treasurer.

Elected to the Board of Directors were Jim Campbell of Franklin, J. R. Ruffin of Williamsburg, and Floyd Twiford of Portsmouth.

Bevan Attends

Alumni Meeting

Lathrop Bevan of Virginia Beach attended an Admission Relations Conference at Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Penn. Oct. 4 and 5.

The objective of the conference is to assist individual alumni clubs in setting up their own Admission Relations Committees for the purpose of seeking out gifted scholars as potential candidates for admission to the University.

The conference was sponsored by the Lehigh Alumni Association and was attended by presidents and admission relations chairmen from at least 30 Lehigh alumni clubs from various parts of the country.

An adult dance sponsored by the Davis Corner Volunteer Fire Department will be held Sat., Oct. 19 at the Aragona Recreation Center. Department Chief Bill Spencer says a number of prizes will be offered to those who may wish to attend in costumes. Music for the 9:00 p.m. to midnight event will be furnished by S. B. Taylor and his Do Dads.

Men of the Princess Anne Courthouse Volunteer Fire Department were on duty virtually around the clock during the Greater Tidewater Fair. The unit manned a fire truck and ambulance at the fair grounds to meet any emergency which may have occurred. No major injuries were reported.

Residents of the region were given a first hand view of the talents of men of the Virginia Beach Traffic Bureau during last Saturday's Oyster Bowl Parade. Sgt. R. A. Belangia and officers R. W. Scharer and G. L. Bryon demonstrated the capabilities of the Bureau's motorcycle corps by executing several maneuvers as the parade which traveled through downtown Norfolk.

Approval was also granted to Princess Anne Lodge #25 A. F. and A. M. for a lodge located on the south side of Princess Anne Road, west of Princess Anne Court House. This lodge was moved to this location from the Princess Anne municipal complex to make room for expansion there.

The Planning Commission was warned by school construction Supt. Ernest F. Stone that new residential developments are being built faster than schools to serve the children brought into the city by the building. This warning was backed up by Grover L. Wright, a lawyer who was representing 101 area residents opposing rezoning of property on Little Neck Road, across from Gardena Road.

First District Congressman Thomas N. Downing's office said bids are being advertised for the building to be known as Wickstock Station on a 20-year lease basis, with six 5-year renewal options. The new building will have 6,850 square feet of floor space and a 1,820 square foot platform, in addition to parking and maneuvering areas.

Hayes Building

Terry Corporation of Virginia asked for a 30 day deferment on a change of zoning from Limited Commercial District 3 to Multiple Family Residence District and a Use Permit to construct 84 townhouses in Pembroke Manor.

The Planning Commission approved, with qualification, Bessie L. Codd's application for a change of zoning from Limited Commercial District 3 to General Commercial District 3, and from Residence Suburban District 4 to Limited Commercial District 3 and General Commercial District 3 property located on the north-west corner of Virginia Beach Blvd. and North Witchduck Road. The approval is subject to street dedication, which is necessary for the city to widen the road.

Two change of zoning applications were deferred. The first application, that of Kernal Realty Company, was deferred for 30 days to see about the road network. The property in question is located on the southern extremity of Clearfield Avenue in the Clear Acres area.

The second application for change of zoning that was deferred is that of Dr. James C. Wright, Dr. Wright has applied to change certain property from Residence Suburban District 4 to Multiple Family Residence District. The property is located on the southeast corner of Hobart Avenue and General Booth Boulevard in the Rudee Heights-Harbour Point area.

Approval was granted to the City Council to construct a golf course on property located on the east side of Prosperity Road in the Camp Pendleton area.

Also approved is the construction of a boat launching ramp and related facilities on Owl's Creek at property located west of General Booth Blvd. and south of Croatan Road. The state will pay for this facility, which is being constructed on land that was part of Camp Pendleton and has now been made available to the city.

An application of B. L. Fink's for construction of a post office was approved. This is on property located north of Princess Anne Road and west of Landstown Road in the Princess Anne Courthouse area.

Mahler Elected Vice Pres.

Harold T. Mahler has been elected assistant vice president of First & Merchants National Bank and David B. Hill, Jr. was named assistant cashier. The announcement came here from Edward H. Church, senior vice president for the bank's Virginia Beach area.

Mahler was an assistant cashier with the former Bank of Virginia Beach in 1961. Prior to that time he had banking experience with the Southern Bank of Norfolk. He is a resident of the Bayside Lions Club, Thoroughbred Civic League and the Bayside Business and Professional Association.

Hill joined the bank in 1965. He is a native of Virginia Beach and attended Frederick and Chowan Colleges.

Six other promotions were made by the bank's board of directors. In Richmond: John Tyler, Jr., head of the international department, was named vice president; Fleming V. Austin, Sterling W. Durham and James J. Wilson were elected assistant cashiers. At the bank's Colonial Heights office, James H. Haskins was elevated to assistant vice president and in Waynesboro, Kenneth H. Givens was also promoted to assistant vice president.

'Riverwind' Is Good In Spite of Problems

The Little Theatre of Virginia Beach opened its 20th season last weekend with the pleasing John Jennings musical "Riverwind." Performances will be played again this weekend at Courtyard Playhouse and again at the Norfolk Museum Theatre on Nov. 1 and 2.

The small cast musical is hauntingly sentimental and delightful theatre, but the Little Theatre of Virginia Beach production doesn't quite come off. It comes close, but all the gears don't mesh correctly, and it becomes a stage full of actors and actresses merely playing scenes.

The action revolves around a doctor and his wife, whose marriage is not on the safest of ground, returning to the rundown motel of their wedding night in an attempt by the wife to rejuvenate her husband's affection. It works, but not the way she thinks. He remembers his love through the innocent charm and beauty of the daughter of the owner of Riverwind, the rundown motel on the Washash. It is a happy plot, and all ends happily with the couple reunited, the dreamer of a daughter united with her boyfriend, and an almost married couple who come to Riverwind every year still as happy as ever almost married after seven years.

Carol Hall and Harrell Tice, with their active antics, almost carry the entire show. She is a rather unconventional would-be actress. He is a professional student who has been working on his Ph.D. for years and years. That is why the marriage has been held up. Both their singing voices are pleasing, and Miss Hall turns in an outstanding comedienne performance. Beautiful singing voices are also a credit to Chuck Oliver and Fayé MacKinnon (who is also the musical director). Her rendition of the title number is a highlight of the show. Mr. Oliver's cultured voice is almost too good for this type of musical comedy, especially in the duets he must sing, but his portrayal of the busy doctor who finally remembers his youth is good.

Theresa Worrall takes all the honors in this one. As the homespun owner of Riverwind, who gets tipsy on too much champagne, Mrs. Worrall is natural and extremely convincing. Her warm characterization is a delight to watch.

Suzy Washburn, in her LTVB debut, is stiff and apparently uncomfortable in the role of the young daughter who dreams of life on the other side of the Washash and who waits for something exciting to happen to her. She has a nice singing voice, a trifle thin, but pleasing to the ear. Unfortunately her gestures are very poor and detract from the action. Obviously she lacks stage presence, especially in the musical numbers, but could have been directed to be a little smoother.

Mike Barlow, as her reticent boyfriend, is also stiff and not terribly convincing. In the singing part of his role he attempts to substitute volume for quality, he does not have, and it does not work.

Overall the action is a bit slow, especially in the cross from songs to songs, and director Bill Britton, who knows better, needs to speed the pace up and get his players to relax and have fun with this bit of froth. There are several outstanding musical numbers in the show and they alone are worth the price of admission. Regardless of the problems this is still highly recommended theatrical fare. H.J.L.

Playhouse Opens

The plush Lake Wright Playhouse opened last night with its first production of the comedy, "Goodbye Charlie." The initial performance was by invitation only and was a formal affair. Tonight the theatre opens to the general public.

The 400-seat intimate theatre is the first in Tidewater to be designed and built as a theatre. Planning began nearly two years ago and construction started last November on the building adjacent to the Lake Wright Motor Hotel on Northampton Blvd. at the Virginia Beach-Norfolk line.

Dinner is also served prior to the theatrical productions. The dining room offers a view of Lake Wright, of jet planes landing and taking off at Norfolk airport close by and of the 18th green of the Lake Wright Golf Course.

Director-producer of the new theatre is Timothy L. Jones, well known to Tidewater thespians. Jones, formerly a member of the Wedgewood Theatre Company and director of Cavalier Dinner Playhouse in Norfolk has also taken part in one production at the Virginia Beach Little Theatre.

Business manager of the theatre is Earnest Price, owner of the Azalea Drive-In Theatre of Norfolk and the new Twin Drive-In Theatres on Independence Blvd. in Virginia Beach. The acting company is entirely professional, according to Jones. The players are members of Actors Equity. Plays will be presented for approximately a month, according to the present schedule. The third production planned is a musical. Reservations for individuals or groups for dinner and theatre or for theatre alone may be made by calling the theatre at 464-6919 or by writing Lake Wright Playhouse at 6207 Northampton Blvd., Norfolk, Va.

Jones said a number of theatre parties have already been sold for performances as late as next May.

Winter Concert Planned

The Virginia Beach Friends of Music, Inc. presents the first of its three Winter Programs on Nov. 10.

The program will be held at 3:30 p.m. at First Colonial High School. Walter Noona, new Civic Chorus director, and Trio are scheduled for the program. Tickets for the attraction are available on a reserved basis. They may be obtained by writing the Virginia Beach Friends of Music, Inc., P.O. Box 963, Virginia Beach, Va. 23451. Tickets are $3, $4, and $5, tax included.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Stafford Balderson are co-chairmen of the 1969 Summer Arts Festival.

Monday Is Night For Scouts

More than 10,000 flyers will be distributed this week inviting boys to participate in a "School Night for Scouts" so that boys interested in becoming cub or Boy Scouts may have an opportunity to gain information.

Boys eight years old through 13 and their parents may visit the designated schools from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Monday, Oct. 14. Schools are Arrowhead, W. T. Cooke, John B. Dey, Herming, Kempville Elementary, Kings Grant, Linkhorn Park, Bayside Elementary, Pembroke Plaza, Tranterwood Thalia, Windsor Woods and Woodstock.

Scouts and scouting representatives at the schools will explain the many activities and programs. There will also be displays of projects and equipment.

Elmer Tarrall of the Virginia Beach Public Schools, is School Night chairman. James H. Peery is District chairman. J. Richard Colick is Organization and Extension chairman and Fred B. Cooke is District commissioner.

Ground Broken For School

Ground was broken Oct. 5, for the first stage of the building program of the King's Grant Christian Day School.

At a very brief, informal ceremony the first shovel full of earth was turned over for the footings for the first building to be constructed on the school's property at 5473 Virginia Beach Blvd. The school owns 12 acres of land between Chinese and Davis Corners, and between Virginia Beach Blvd. and the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway.

First phase of construction includes improvement of the athletic field, building the permanent maintenance building and temporary classroom facilities. Financing is still being arranged for the construction of the permanent classroom building, office facilities and auditorium-gymnasium.

Participating in the ceremony were Dr. Harold E. Richards, Jr., and Mrs. Richards, principal and assistant principal of the school since its founding in 1961, and Leonard Hodges, representing the building committee of the parents of the school.

First stage of the construction is scheduled to be completed during this first semester. And the second phase is tentatively scheduled for completion for September, 1969.

Orchestra Needs More Members

The Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation Department has extended an invitation to anyone who would like to join the Virginia Beach Concert Orchestra. State Fire Assn. Formed Sight, Test Surprises Everyone

Members of the Fire Prevention Bureau from throughout the state have joined together in the formation of "Virginia Fire Prevention Association". This marks the first time that Fire Inspectors will use a central office for improvements in enforcing state fire prevention laws and codes.

The Association is comprised of members representing approximately 30 cities, towns, and counties throughout the Old Dominion. While the total membership at present is unknown it has been estimated at over 200, and others are expected to join in the near future.

During their organizational meeting in Charlottesville members of the Association agreed to their constitution and by-laws, and elected officers. Chief W. R. Stikel of Henrico County, was elected president; Chief M. T. Holland of Virginia Beach, elected 1st vice president; L. W. H. Bolling of Bristol, 2nd vice president; Chief M. E. Williams of Richmond, secretary-treasurer; and Capt. R. G. Buckrop of Arlington, chaplain.

Close cooperation between the various Fire Prevention Bureaus of the state is assured through the membership of the Board of Directors which will be composed of the Association president and one member from each of the political subdivisions of the State.

The Association members have agreed to affiliate themselves with the Virginia Safety Association and have scheduled their next meeting in conjunction with the Safety Association's next annual meeting scheduled for May of 1969 in Richmond.

Fair Draws Crowds

Approximately 150,000 people made their way to Pungo during the nine days of the Greater Tidewater Fair, according to Steve Rose, general manager of the fair.

"That estimate came from the carnival people," said Rose. "I think they are a lot more experienced in that sort of thing than I am."

He added that he had not finished totalling all the receipts for the nine-day period, but that it looked like the estimates made by personnel of the James E. Strates show was about correct.

Rose said that the location did not prove to be a detriment. He pointed out that there had been some concern prior to the fair that Pungo was just too far out, but he said this proved unfounded.

"Publications of fair associations to which we belong show that only about 30 per cent of the attendance at fairs is made up of local people," said Rose. "The other 70 per cent come from out of the area."

The fair was also blessed by the weather this year. It rained twice during the time the fair was open, but both times during the night and was just enough to "settle the dust," according to Rose. The carnival was set up almost entirely on the concrete runways of the old Pungo airfield anyway and would not have been affected by rain.

Rose confessed, however, that all the parking was not on concrete and that bad weather could have caused a problem. As it was, he said that twice parking reached the critical point, using all available dirt and concrete areas. But traffic and access was never a problem as it had been in the past, he said.

The huge Strates show is reportedly interested in returning to next year's fair, according to Rose, but he said no commitments had been made. He said also that reaction to the Strates show had been favorable and that it was a "beautiful show."

Now Rose is talking about next year. He says that all undergrowth will be cut down and that additional land will be utilized for parking and for the midway. He said that this will mean a better layout and better access to the independent midway area, which includes the livestock, commercial and industrial displays. Next year the commercial exhibits will be in a permanent building, according to Rose.

He added that while this is not generally a rural area any longer he is still interested in the usual jelly and jam exhibits as in other fairs, but said there has not been a great deal of interest so far, although he has offered to put up prize money for a large number of entries.

During the rest of the year Rose plans to hold horse shows, rodeos, demolition derbies, as well as stock car racing if it can be arranged on the fairgrounds to create activity for Virginia Beach.

He said he was pleased with the success of the fair this year at its new and permanent location and that he was pleased with the amount of business. "I spent half the day Tuesday just writing checks though," laughed Rose. "It costs a lot of money to put on a fair."

Children Celebrate Patriotism

The Old Cannonball Society of the Children of the American Revolution is planning something each day during Patriotic Education Week, Oct. 12-19.

On Sunday, Oct. 13 members will hear a talk on patriotism from Adm. D. F. Welch at old St. Paul's Church in Norfolk. Yorktown Day, commemorating the surrender of Cornwallis, will be celebrated Oct. 15 with a bus trip to Yorktown. Children will leave Larchmont Elementary School at 9 a.m.

Did you pass the vision tests? Both of them?

"It's a most revealing and actually shocking fact that over 10 per cent of the total 1,684 did not pass the test for distance vision," said Mrs. Dorothy Craig, second vice president of the Virginia Beach Safety Council. Mrs. Craig has been present at the two machines donated by the Titmus Optical Company of Petersburg set up in Pembroke Mall for six days from Monday, Sept. 23 until Saturday.

"And what is considered even more disastrous is that over half of the failures are teenagers from 15 to 17 years old," Mrs. Craig added. Most admitted that they could not see line five which was considered the average required vision. Some of them admitted that they could not even see line 1, the largest letters on the test. And all of this age group said that they were not aware they could not see.

Both Princess Anne and First Colonial High Schools are now equipped with the 12-seat simulators for driver training, the latest and most completely accurate equipment available. The question arises what good are the new facilities if the students simply cannot see?

"We must contact school authorities to know what should be done to improve the situation," Mrs. Craig said. "There are many women who would gladly volunteer their time to take surveys of all the schools. This disturbing fact will mean a lot to concerned parents, and they will be more than willing to do something to correct the weakness."

Another additional bit of information gathered over the six days of testing is that more men than women failed the distance vision examination. Several added that they wondered how they could have driven to the Mall without being able to see better than the tests proved. And all agreed with William Thompson, chairman, Highway Safety Committee, that the project was very worthwhile.

League Checks Drivers

The new officers of the Windsor Woods Civic League recently announced a new program of activities for the 1968-69 year.

They approved programs for community information and discussion of items of community interest. They also supported a drive to increase Civic League membership and community participation in civic affairs.

The League is planning to conduct a survey which will be compiled in order to make an official request for more extensive coverage by unmarked police cars in the Windsor Woods area.

Residents of the area are urged to note instances of traffic violations, the date of the offense, identity of the violator, the type of vehicle, the circumstances and any results in order to bring these noted traffic violations to the Civic League meeting Oct. 16 at the Windsor Woods School at 8 p.m.

The guest speaker for this meeting will be State Sen. Edward T. (Ned) Caton III, who will discuss the impending state bond issue.

Game Warden Trains Here

Donald W. Hinchey of Richmond recently completed the Game Warden Recruit School and has been assigned to Virginia Beach, to serve his apprenticeship under Warden E. E. Walters, the Area Leader.

The comprehensive three-week course Hinchey completed is conducted by the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries. The course is held at the State Police Headquarters in Richmond and covers all facets of the profession from Game and Fish management to hunting and boat safety.

Hinchey, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Hinchey of Abingdon, Va., will receive a permanent assignment in some area of Virginia as a fully qualified Game Warden following this period of "In Service Training."

Church Plans Week Revival

Revival Services will be held at London Bridge Baptist Church from Oct. 14-20 at 7:30 p.m.

The Rev. Mark W. Stone, of South York Baptist Church near Langley Air Force Base, will be the evangelist for the services.

Rev. Stone was born in Thomasville, N.C. He is married to the former Miss Nancy Giles of Rock Hill, S.C. and they are the parents of two children.

We Still Favor Local Option

To those in Virginia Beach and elsewhere who believe that local option liquor-by-the-drink would be readily approved wherever it was placed on the ballot, the case of Dickenson County must now be considered.

As soon as possible the measure was approved in Bath County, home of the famous Homestead. The remarkable majority of approval there was not remarkable after all. A majority of the voters are employed by the Homestead or by other resort-oriented businesses.

Dickenson County was defeated. The measure was soundly defeated, more than 4-to-1. The rural county opposition was led by church groups, and this opposition was highly successful.

The matter will be on the ballot in Virginia Beach and in a number of other places in our area in November. We must not be lulled into a state of complacency or euphoria by the apparent overwhelming support we see on the surface. There is definitely a strong wave of opposition afoot, mostly from church and religious groups that are battling the evils of liquor itself, not merely the local option matter. They forget that liquor is already with us.

Not only must we urge that the voters of Virginia Beach approve the matter for the betterment of our resort industry and to bring larger businesses to the oceanfront, but we must also point out again the increase of tax revenue that will be realized to help out the poor taxpayers.

Also the issue must not be left alone. Everyone interested in seeing the local option include Virginia Beach must talk it up and help the measure pass.

The church groups and organized opposition certainly have a distinct right to rally their forces and fight in any way they can, but those of us who favor it must use all the methods at our command to bring about favorable action.

There are a number of extremely important issues at stake in this November's election, including the Presidency and Virginia's first major bond issue, but the liquor-by-the-drink issue is extremely important too.

For the good of Virginia Beach the opposition must not be allowed to win. Much of the future of the city depends on a favorable vote by responsible citizens who want to see progress in the resort city. And besides that, anyone who wants a cocktail before dinner should be allowed to purchase it legally, instead of being forced to pour it from a bottle in a paper bag illegally.

The Announcement of Demise

Although it is still more than a year and a couple of major obstacles away, we are saddened by the announcement that Seaside Amusement Park is to be torn down for a new high-rise motel.

That old landmark has been the scene of many a good time by many a Tidewater resident for more than a half century. Many of us remember well picnicking at one of the pavilions on a Sunday afternoon.

But after all, this is progress, and the park has not had a great number of amusement rides and games in recent years anyway. It is however, unfortunate that this last amusement center in Virginia Beach must go at a time when we are really on the brink of expanding our resort facilities and industry. An amusement park should be a major part of that expansion.

Hopefully someone will come here and build another large center, probably not on the oceanfront's valuable land, but somewhere nearby, and will do well with it. Seaside has certainly done well. We recognize that the cost of developing a major amusement park is great, but the return is also great not only to the investor but also to the city.

When the 50-year old merry-go-round is moved away to make way for a motel room, there will be many a tear in the eyes of those who remember their childhood happiness on the carousel.

Sad State of Affairs

What a sad state of affairs when it takes a plea from the Supt. of Schools to get plumbers to take emergency action during a strike to get sanitary facilities finished in two schools which were not completed, partly because of other strikes.

The teachers' and students are taking it all in stride, but it still seems that something is all wrong here. While we believe strongly in the original purpose of unions and in the power to strike, somehow the health of youngsters and pride in completing a job seems to us fairly important too.

And the new administration building at Princess Anne is already drastically behind schedule because of material shortages, bad weather and strikes. One picket there forced a number of other plumbers off the job in the same strike. At this rate it may never be finished.

PERSISTENT GHOSTS

Vote For the Bond Issue

The following editorial appeared in the current issue of the Virginia Education Association publication, the VIRGINIA JOURNAL OF EDUCATION. It deals with the $81 million bond issue to be voted on Nov. 5, and should be of interest to all Virginians. It was written by Dr. Robert F. Williams.

The Board of Directors of the Virginia Education Association has unanimously and enthusiastically endorsed the $81 million bond issue for the higher education and mental health capital outlays.

It is important that we not only vote for the bond issue, but we have a responsibility to inform nonschool people of the merits of this important step which Virginia must take for the welfare of its children and citizens generally.

In order to be in possession of the strong arguments in favor of such action, let us review the situation.

In the next decade, public schools in Virginia will have their first relief in a generation from the pressures of exploding enrollments. This will enable us, for the first time in many years, to think primarily in terms of quality instead of quantity.

During the next ten years, elementary and high school enrollments in Virginia will remain almost static as the birth rate declines and the crop of war babies passes.

The birth rate in 1967, for example, was the worst in Virginia since 1912. But college enrollments in the Commonwealth will double between 1967 and 1977, after it has already doubled in the preceding decade.

In this generation, colleges and universities will have to accommodate four times as many students. The reasons are to be found largely in the public schools themselves.

As teachers and administrators, we are constantly improving the holding power of our schools. In 1956, first graders finishing the twelfth grade averaged 31%. In 1967, it was 55%. In 1950, only about 25% of Virginia's high school graduates continued their education after high school. But by 1967, it had jumped to more than 60%.

No more than two generations ago, graduation from grade school was considered the minimum as preparation for life, and a high school diploma was a prized possession.

Now, the minimum for acceptance in even the most unskilled business or industry is a high school diploma, and the possession of a bachelor's degree is the ticket required for entrance into most of the skilled occupations.

In the last college semester of 1967, more than one-half of the eighteen to twenty-one year olds in this country were enrolled in college. In California, two years of college is the minimum free public school education for every young Californian. All but two or three states in the Union are building community colleges. In fact, in 1966 throughout the nation a new two or four-year college opened every single week.

This is the pace being set for Virginia in higher education, and we are virtually starting from scratch. Whereas, across the nation 50.9% of the eighteen to twenty-one year olds were enrolled in college last year, in Virginia the figure was only 30.2%. Even the Southern States averaged 37%.

And, distressingly, one out of every four young Virginians who goes to college goes out of state rather than finding what he seeks in a Virginia college or university.

So far as numbers are concerned, there is no relief in site. We have all heard about the population explosion and the education explosion; and erroneously, some believe that once this initial force has been dissipated, we will return to normalcy in our requirements for higher education. But what has really happened is that we have stretched by at least two years the expectations of our people for public education; and when through our community college program we have put together the ingredients of convenience and low cost as evidenced by what has happened at Richmond Professional Institute (now Virginia Commonwealth University) and old Dominion College at Norfolk, we have uncovered a bottomless reservoir of yearning for learning among young Virginians.

In less than a decade of independent existence, RPI and Old Dominion College became two of the three largest institutions in the state in terms of total enrollment.

Then there are the community colleges, all of them overflowing in their first year of operation; and one of them, just two years old, already exceeding in total enrollment all but one of the privately supported colleges of Virginia. This college—George Mason in Northern Virginia—as well, in enrollment, exceeds that of several State supported four-year institutions.

There are still nine areas in the State's master plan for community colleges not now served by these commuter institutions. With the $81 million bond issue up for referendum on November 5, seven of these can be accommodated for a total of up to 10,000 new students. Without the bond issue, six of them cannot be built, and between 8,000 and 9,000 young Virginians will be without a college classroom within their reach.

But community colleges would only accommodate these new collegians for two years. Thereafter, many of them will be knocking on the doors of our four-year institutions as juniors, and already the four-year colleges are busy expanding new dormitories to house their own budding enrollments.

In the current biennium alone, the four-year institutions together have been authorized to float $53 million in revenue bonds, largely to build dormitories and cafeterias whose fees will pay for the buildings. But students must also have classrooms and laboratories and libraries in which to learn. These the $81 million bond issue is designed to provide.

Only slightly less violent has been the explosion in the field of mental health. Medical science has continually increased the life expectancy of the human body, but it can make no similar guarantee for continuing mental health.

Psychiatry and new public awareness have multiplied the number of mental health diagnosed, but so far diagnosis outruns cure.

In spite of local mental health clinics, now numbering 32, Virginia's mental hospitals still, unbelievably, use buildings that are 70, 80, and more than 100 years old.

And, perhaps more pitiful of all, the accommodations for the retarded children in Virginia are grossly inadequate. Up until now, Virginia has tried to keep pace with these tremendously increasing demands for public services out of tax revenues exclusively.

This means, for instance, that new buildings and state-aid for teachers' salaries must all come out of the same tax bucket.

With the $81 million bond issue, the Commonwealth can do a great deal of catching up in capital construction without jeopardizing aid for traditional public school outlays. But in a larger sense, the bond issue would add a new dimension to Virginia's capabilities in the vital fields of education and mental health just as the demands of an increasing population and a burgeoning economy are stretching the expectations of her people for all her public services.

Virginia and the South are on the threshold of another golden era. The pressures to decentralize, reorganize, and diversify throughout American industry have made our region a most valued area for new plant expansion.

As never before, industry is looking for elbow room, for production facilities closer to the great Northeast market, for employees who believe in a day's work for a day's pay, and for a governmental climate recognizing the basic values of private enterprise.

All these they are finding in Virginia and the South, and in the process creating still another innovation—a new growing Southern market for American industries output.

Every corner of Virginia, every citizen has felt the impact of this migration of industry; but if we are to continue reaping its benefits, our public services must keep pace with the progress in industry, in business and in cultural endeavor. We cannot keep Virginia rolling along with one flat tire.

The vote for the bond issue on November 5 will dramatize for all of us how well the people of Virginia understand this and how deeply they are really dedicated to the welfare of this Commonwealth.

"What's with this stupid cat, anyway?" he asked. "She hasn't been this friendly in months."

"Don't you really know?" she asked.

"No," he said. "Except that she was just waiting until I had a dark blue suit on to jump in my lap and deposit her lovely white fur."

"That's not it at all," she reassured him. "But you can't call her stupid. It's gotten cold outside and she's looking for some place warm to lie down."

Cat

"So I'll buy her a heating pad. Let her get that white fur all over that."

"She loves you," she said.

"She loves me for the warmth of my lap and when I feed her," he said. "Otherwise she ignores me too."

"Well, you may not have to worry about her much longer if she jumps in the clothes hamper again," she said. "The other day I put eight sheets in on top of her. I couldn't find her for hours. When I got ready to do the laundry that afternoon, I thought it was alive. But it was just your panting, kicking cat."

"That's not as bad as the time she went into the heat duct system and got lost," he said. "Remember we could hear her 'meowing' in every room as she got to a vent and couldn't get out."

"How well I remember," she said. "Especially when the heat came on. How can you tell a deaf cat directions on how to get out?"

"How can you tell one that can hear?" he asked. "The problem was that only that oversize vent in the living room where she went in was big enough for her to get out. Too bad one of the kids removed the vent."

"Do you remember your nickname for the cat when she was just a kitten?" she asked.

"I sure do," he said. "Now that's real stupidity. Any cat that would, not once, but twice, jump on the stove and stick her tail in the burning gas jet has to be dumb. I thought 'Furry with the single on top' was an appropriate nickname."

"You have to admit though, she's the only cat you've ever seen that sits up on her hind legs and begs," she pointed out. "That's true," he said. "That must come from feeding her that dog food."

"Careful," she said. "Don't sit on that sofa. She's been curled up there with the kids all day keeping warm."

"But she hates the kids," he protested.

"Not when she gets cold."

"It's going to be a long winter," he said. "All right. I'm ready to feed her now. Where is she? This is so ridiculous, not to be able to call her and have to search the house just to find her."

"Look in the laundry hamper," she suggested.

Mrs. Bieniek

Wedding Is in Florida

Mr. and Mrs. William Lennox of Bay Colony Drive announce the marriage of their daughter, Karen Lee, to Joseph Bieniek of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., on Sept. 14 at Our Lady Queen of Martyrs' Catholic Church in Ft. Lauderdale. Father James Flynn officiated.

Mr. Bieniek is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bieniek of Ft. Lauderdale.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of brocade satin and alencon lace with a fingertip length illusion veil. Mrs. Anthony Bieniek of Ft. Lauderdale, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Gail Duffy of Ft. Lauderdale and Miss Janet Rodrigues of Tampa, Fla.

Anthony Bieniek was his brother's best man. Groomsmen were Martin Bieniek, brother of the bridegroom, and Terrence Smith of Ft. Lauderdale.

A reception was held in Sweden House following the wedding. After a wedding trip to Jamaica, the couple are living in Ft. Lauderdale where the bridegroom is employed by General Motors. He is a graduate of Broward Junior College.

Mrs. Bieniek, a dental hygienist, is a graduate of St. Petersburg Junior College.

Women Should Be Leaders Says Cape Henry Speaker

Mrs. Alvah E. Riggins, past state president and now district chairman for Leadership and Development, addressed members of the Cape Henry Women's Club on Oct. 3 at the Bay Harbor Club.

The occasion was the Club Institute which followed the first board meeting and luncheon of the club year.

Mrs. Riggins, who spoke on Leadership Training, said that leadership is developed by doing and achieving, and the club women who give of their time and service receive the rewards, for willingness to serve pays off and makes a good leader. She added that "know-how" is developed through club training.

She said she feels that now is the time for positive thinking and positive stands by club women. Since public opinion is worth everything and club women have leadership ability, they should let their voices be heard for what is right.

"They should use their leadership training and band together to help uphold law and order, for respect, law and order are most needed now for community improvement," she said.

Ivan Mapp Speaks To Mid-City Club

The Mid-City Woman's Democratic Club is having a luncheon meeting today at the Bow Creek Country Club at 12 noon.

Ivan Mapp will be guest speaker at the meeting.

Attorney To Address Local Club

"Wills and Why Everybody Needs One" will be the subject of Ernest C. Consolvo local attorney, when he speaks to the members of the Princess Anne Business and Professional Women's Club on Monday night.

Mrs. Harriet Adcock, legislation chairman, has planned the program and announced that a question and answer session would follow Consolvo's talk.

The dinner meeting will be at The Cavalier at 7 p.m. According to club president, Mrs. Rose Bissett, plans will be made for members to attend the Fall District Luncheon to be held on Oct. 19th at the Capeville Methodist Church on Eastern Shore.

Mrs. Margaret Drescher, finance chairman, will present a fund-raising project to the membership.

Take Stock of Your Stockings

If you have trouble keeping yourself in hosiery, pity the Mongolian native—he has to wrap sheep's tails around his legs to keep warm!

Djinge women of Africa weave stockings of an unusual material—their own hair!

In Tibet it's easy to spot the quarrelsome wives; they're forced to go without stockings for a month. On the other hand, Fiji Islanders allow only marriageable girls to cover up their legs.

Fashionable males of the 12th Century strutted around in short breeches of velvet or leather, but later men wore leotard-type garments of striped jersey.

The Scottish Highlanders sported the first knitted hose—probably of wool—while Henry VIII endorsed stockings of Spanish silk.

Mary, Queen of Scots, put her best foot forward no matter what the occasion; at her execution, she wore worsted blue stockings trimmed and edged with silver.

Elizabeth I of England, who did poor Mary in, was herself a lover of highly expensive, hand-knitted silk hose. Her first was in black. She gave the hand-knitters of England a big boost by decreeing that all her subjects had to wear stockings on Sundays and holy days.

Lace and knotted work became the rage soon after, and up until the late 1770's, hose were twilled or plaited and came in silk or velvet. At one point, when women hid their legs under long skirts, men's stockings were the elaborate ones.

By the end of the 19th Century, women's legs became more socially acceptable, and their stockings boasted fancy fronts of lace or silk, with elaborate embroidery. Many sported two tones: a light blue leg with a maroon foot, a red top with a brown leg. Beaded fronts and lace inserts also drew all eyes with their brilliant color. By the Gay Nineties, bold stripes became thefad.

It wasn't until the "Roaring Twenties" that a demand developed for sheer hosiery, which led eventually to the stylish nylons in many shades and textures available to today's shoppers.

At one point sheer silk stockings of two threads became the rage, and until 1924, when the first flesh-colored stockings made their appearance, black and other dark colors were most popular.

The first nylons were exhibited at the New York World's Fair in 1939 and went on the market on May 15, 1940. When the embargo on silk from Japan and the use of nylon in parachutes, gun-swabs and other items for soldiers during World War II led to a shortage of material for stockings, women wore hose of baggy rayon or used leg make-up. Men who were around then remember the leg make-up because, at dances, it rubbed off on trouser legs. When nylons came back around 1947, women went for dark shades like navy, green, burgundy, and black.

In the sixties, skirts skipped over the knee, and panty hose became an overnight success.

Patterned legwear sets the fashion mood for fall. The checkerboard design of Hanes Hosiery new Square Play stockings has just a trace of shimmer that slims and flatters. Dress by Junior Accent; shoes by Charles Jourdan.

In addition to complexion tones in panty hose, color became fashion's favorite legwear look. In 1966, the first, now famous, solid color crepes called opaques, were introduced.

Today, colored and stretch hosiery, and even the sheerest nylons are surprisingly durable provided that you care for them properly.

When you open a box of nylons break the paper band and lift the stockings out. To put nylons on, gather the stockings down to the toes with thumb and index finger of both hands and slip it over the foot. Heel and toe should be in place as the stocking is guided over the instep. Always attach the garter to the stocking well, never to a sheer section. Carter the front first and flex the leg to avoid pulling the stocking too fast before attaching back garters.

To put on panty hose you should be seated. Use both hands to gather one leg of panty hose down to the toe and slip it over the foot. Smooth toe and heel into place, guide the stocking over the instep up to the ankle, and repeat this with the

We've just been reminded of the popular extra nutritious salad that children love so well. Easy for mother to do too! Take plump cooked prunes and slit down one side to remove pit. Fill prunes with chunky peanut butter and serve on lettuce. It's good with or without dressing.

It's a big, wide, wonderful world that inspired this winter's knitted accessories. Cozy hats and gloves are knitted of Cretan acrylic fiber in colorful Scandinavian patterns. Scottish tweed designs and early Americana patchwork patterns.

Bazaar Will Be Nov. 1

There will be a turkey and barbecue luncheon and supper at Charity Methodist Church bazaar on Nov. 1.

The luncheon will be from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and the supper will be from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Dot Books Serve Purposes

Dot books serve many purposes.

These are the books in which a child follows numbers or letters with a crayon or pencil to form a picture.

The pre-schooler can learn his A-B-C's and 1-2-3's as he plays.

Later he can color the pictures he makes, or cut them out, or paste them up.

Activity books that contain dot games often have other games a child goes on to. There are mazes: "Get the pioneers through the woods and back to the covered wagon." A child follows the open spaces with a crayon until he achieves the goal. There are picture puzzles: "Find Peter Rabbit in the garden." And he turns the page this way and that until he spots Peter in a row of carrots or a radish patch.

Experts tell us that these playbooks are big incentives to a child's learning. An environment in which he has tools for trying and failing—for pure fun—helps his confidence grow. Bright colors, paper to crumple, shapes to test out, keep him happily occupied.

Originally made with squirrel meat and cooked all day over an open fire, today's VIRGINIA BRUNSWICK STEW cooks quickly with tender chicken instead of squirrel while thrifty electricity does the cooking for less than 4¢.

- 2 3-lb. fryers, cut up
- 2 strips bacon
- 2 sliced onions
- 4 cups canned tomatoes
- 2 cups fresh butter beans
- 3 cups corn cut from cob
- 8 tbls. butter
- 3 tbls. flour
- 2 tsp. salt
- 1/2 tsp. pepper
- 2 tbls. sugar

Worcestershire sauce to taste

Simmer chicken in water to cover until tender. Bone chicken; set meat aside. Add bacon, onions, tomatoes, butter beans, salt and pepper to broth. Cook 30 minutes. Add corn; cook 10 minutes. Thicken with butter and flour creamed together. Return chicken to stew. Season with sugar and Worcestershire sauce. For only $3.50 this stew serves 12. It freezes well too.

Birthday Launches Antique Show Church Day Will Be

Tuesday was not only the 43rd birthday celebration of the Princess Anne Woman's Club of Virginia Beach, but it was also the day plans for the club's 10th Annual Antiques Show were announced.

The show, chief fund raising venture for the club's civic projects, will be held Oct. 24-27 at the Civic Center. The hours are from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Thursday, Friday and Saturday and from 1 to 7 p.m. Sunday. Past antique shows have proved so successful that all spaces were reserved by early spring this year. Mrs. Earl DuVal is chairman and Mrs. Erma Mott is co-chairman.

Dressed in the old fashioned gowns they wear as hostesses at the show, club members Tuesday at the Americana traced the 43-year history of the club which had its beginnings in 1925 as the Kempsville Home Demonstration Club. Mrs. A. E. Ewell, the club's first president, was a guest at the meeting. Other past presidents who attended were Mrs. Russell Hatchett, Mrs. R. B. Tynes, Mrs. J. Douglas Wilson, Mrs. Wallace Clarke and Mrs. George Aldrich. Each received a birthday cake.

The theme of the program was "The Past Presents a Challenge," and a challenge it was when club members were faced with a table full of household antiques to identify. Mrs. Alma Altheide won the prize for knowing the most.

Mrs. S. N. Richardson, president of the Keynote Music Club, sang for the club members.

Forty-three dealers from nine states from Maine to Florida have reserved the available space, and there is a waiting list, information from the dealers indicates there will be a great variety of merchandise. Items include furniture, china, glassware, silver, brass, copper, iron, tin, pictures, jewelry, primitive lighting and accessories.

Men will be interested in knowing there will be gun racks, wooden tools, nautical items, shaving mirrors, and among other things a Captain's washstand and desk combination.

All items will be for sale, and the price tags vary from one dollar to a few thousand dollars. Tin will be featured in recognition of the show's 10th anniversary, and each dealer will feature an item listed as "10th Anniversary Special".

Some of the more unusual items include a hand made, cherry frame meat slicer of Pennsylvania origin, a nursing rocker of Scottish origin carved with a sun on the top beaming on and blessing mother and baby, a spool cotton box of walnut with three drawers inlaid with mother of pearl and an inlaid mahogany hunt table of Hepplewhite design and southern origin.

"Angle's Kitchen", now an annual tradition, will meet the needs of the hungry by selling sandwiches, soup, ham biscuits, desserts and coffee. Mrs. B. W. Wroten is Angle.

A short, colorful ceremony recognizing the home state of the dealers will open the show promptly at 11 a.m. on the 24th. Proceeds from the show will benefit Atlantic Mental Hygiene Center, Hospitality House and scholarships. Tickets ($1) may be purchased in advance from members of the Woman's Club or at the door during the show.

A new feature this year will be art work donated by local professional artists and by members of the club art class which will be displayed for sale in the foyer.

Committee chairmen include Mrs. M. F. Camp, chairman, Mrs. R. E. Davenport, co-chairman, tickets; Mrs. H. W. Graham, chairman, Mrs. Mary Grubbs, co-chairman, patrons; Mrs. A. R. Bunting, chairman, Mrs. John J. Shand, co-chairman, program book; Mrs. R. W. Whitehurst, chairman, Mrs. Lacy Robeson, co-chairman, hostesses; Mrs. C. W. Jernigan, decorations; Mrs. D. L. Van deWiele, chairman, Mrs. P. C. Hartman, co-chairman, hospitality room; Mrs. Wroten, chairman, Mrs. Roy Dudley and Mrs. R. M. Faust, co-chairman, Angle's Kitchen.

Others are Mrs. G. L. Aldridge, publicity; Mrs. T. E. Leenitzer, secretary; Mrs. F. B. Wilholt, treasurer; Mrs. Mott, chairman and Mrs. J. W. Clemens, co-chairman, dealers' consultant; Mrs. M. B. Zoll, Mrs. Aldridge, Mrs. R. E. Davenport and Mrs. Edward Simele, advisers.

Plans for a different format for World Community Day were announced at the meeting of the Virginia Beach Council of Church Women United last Friday at Lynnhaven Colony United Church of Christ.

Instead of having a speaker for the program, which will begin at 11 a.m. Nov. 1 at First Baptist Church, the women will meet together to hear the program "A New World a Coming" then break up into small dialogue groups to discuss what local churches are doing about world situations. Mrs. Herbert G. Robinson is chairman.

The program for this year's World Community Day was written by two African women, one Negro and one white.

Mrs. E. N. Durkee and Mrs. Garland Payne of the Suburban Junior Woman's Club display some of the handiwork done for the Pembroke Bazaar by their club.

Pembroke Bazaar Expands

The 2nd Annual Pembroke Charity Bazaar will be bigger and better than last year according to early indications.

The bazaar was held successfully at Pembroke Mall last year in an effort to not only cut down on the number of individual fund-raising bazaars held each year, but to give each organization a better opportunity to display their wares in a central location.

The idea caught on. Last year there were between 70 and 80 booths at the two-day bazaar. This year there are approximately 120 civic, cultural, recreational and service organizations participating. And it has been extended an extra day.

Dates for this year's bazaar are Oct. 24-26. Hours will be from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Oct. 24 and 25 and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on the 26th.

So hurry up, ladies, and put the final touches on your sale items. If last year was any indication, this year's bazaar should be a huge success too. Besides, it's a good chance to do some early Christmas shopping.

H.D. Clubs Celebrate

About 130 Virginia Beach Home Demonstration Club members from 15 clubs gathered at the Black Angus Restaurant Wednesday, Oct. 9 for their 20th Annual Achievement Program.

This year's program featured an "Around the World" theme in both fashions and decorations. Table favors included dolls from various countries and tiny world globes.

New officers who were installed at the meeting were Mrs. Ben A. Reed, president, and Mrs. M. M. Curran, secretary. They were installed by Miss Wanda Ferrell, Virginia Beach extension agent.

In a brief acceptance talk Mrs. Reed said that the theme for the coming year will be "Reach Young Homemakers." "Home is the foundation of the democratic way of life," she said.

McAllen's ALLEY

By Carolyn McAllen

Frustration, Inc.

The five-year-old got scalped.

It was her father's doing. I had promised to take her and have her hair cut (she really was shaggy), but I had to go out the night in question so I couldn't. She, of course, clouded up, and rather than listen to her screams, her father volunteered to take her instead.

I just wish I could have seen my five-year-old daughter and restless husband waiting an hour and a half at the beauty academy together.

Although after seeing the haircut, I have a strong suspicion he took her to a barber shop. As one of my neighbors said the next day, "I didn't know she had gotten her hair cut. I thought she was Bill at first."

Speaking of Bill, he's going to be the first four-year-old expelled from kindergarten. The only reason he was accepted in the first place is because he's always been so well-mannered and cooperative. Monday, the five-year-old couldn't wait until I got out of the car to tell me that Bill's teacher had set him in the corner in her class because he had kicked some of the other kids.

Later we found out he had also pulled the chairs out from under a few others. His explanation was that "they were picking on him." He also told his father that his teacher had spanked him. I hope she did.

At the insistence of the seven-year-old, I started trying to track down a Brownie troop for her. The local Girl Scout office supplied me with a number which I tried numerous times to call with no luck. When I finally did get her, she informed me that she was not chairman for my neighborhood and gave me the number of the woman who is.

Another ten phone calls later I got through to her—only to find out that the Brownie leader in my neighborhood happens to live directly across the street from me. Her assistant leader lives next door to us. Oh, well, you can't win them all.

Then just to add insult to injury, the seven-year-old handed me a notice at breakfast telling about a meeting for anyone interested in joining Camp Fire Girls. Great. Only she gave me the notice the day after the meeting.

This Club Is International

Suppose for a moment that your husband is at sea, your baby is ill, you go out to start the car and . . . the battery is dead. What is the next best thing to having your husband home? A friend, of course!

Members of the Little Creek CPO Wives Club have not just one friend, but a bevy of them. The club has a two-fold aim; it is a service club as well as a social one. It was organized about five years ago. At that time it was known as the "June Watkins CPO Club."

Wives of servicemen whose pay grade is E-7, E-8 or E-9 are eligible to join. This is extended to wives of active or retired servicemen and widows who may be living in the area.

Many wives find a source of strength in the club when their husbands are gone. Many times it is a temptation for a woman to "go to pieces" not just health-wise and mental-wise, but also appearance-wise. Having a place to go keeps a woman looking and feeling her best.

A service wife moves quite a bit and cannot afford to take her time in forming friendships. A club such as this makes her feel welcome immediately. She is able to meet women with whom she has a lot in common in a minimum amount of time.

There is a certain international flavor to this particular club. Some of the members were originally from Germany, Scotland, Ireland, Central America and Canada. They have found the club a wonderful place to make friends. As one member said, "Everybody helps everybody else . . . and if you want to speak your own language you can always find somebody to speak to here."

Besides the services that the

Third Neptune Ball Is Friday

The Neptune Ball, the Cavalier Junior Woman's Club Third Annual Charity Ball, will be Friday, Oct. 11 at Bow Creek Golf and Country Club.

Dancing will be from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., accompanied by Paul Creech and band. Guests of honor will be the Neptune football team, their wives and dates.

The Neptune colors of blue and gold will be seen throughout the ballroom. Club members are spending hours at decorating workshops under the direction of Mrs. Frank A. Martin, ball chairman, making blue velvet candles, gliding fall leaves and glueing sequins and gold braid on hundreds of tiny footballs for the tables. The candles are made from heavy cardboard carpet tubing, which is cut to length then covered with velvet. A huge goal post is under construction for the bandstand and will be painted with blue glitter and adorned with gold leaves and magaphones. As the one big fund raising event to support the club's Community improvement projects, the ball has in the past two years contributed to the purchase of Phono Cardio Scan instruments, making possible the program of heart defect detection now in progress in Virginia Beach elementary schools.

club performs for the wives themselves, the club is actively busy in civic projects.

Among these projects are Thanksgiving baskets for needy families, gifts and clothes for St. Mary's Orphanage, and monetary support for TARC, the Tidewater Association for Retarded Children.

Each year the Little Creek CPO Wives Club wraps packages at Christmas. This is done according to an agreement with the Little Creek Amphibious Base Country Store in order to make money to contribute to charities.

The club also sponsors bake sales as a money-making project. The Little Creek CPO Wives Club is presently campaigning for new members. They have planned a "Newcomers Coffee" for Thursday, Oct. 17 as part of their project. Without doubt, it will be the most successful "campaign" this season!

Move House Plants Inside

(Editor's note: Here is another in the series on home horticulture by Wesley P. Judkins of the horticulture department at Virginia Tech.)

Now is the time to bring in your house plants from their summer vacation in the flower garden or border. Do not allow them to stay outside too long and be damaged by frost.

Most of your house plants should be repotted in fresh new soil, to insure good growth this winter. This applies to those which have been kept in the house all summer, as well as those which have been outside.

Use care in selecting the pots for your plants. They need not be expensive, but they must allow good drainage. Be sure they have a large hole in the bottom which will not be plugged with soil.

Suitable pots for house plants should have neutral colors which will not detract from the attractiveness of the plant and should be as small as possible to hold the roots and yet support the plant. Don't use a large pot with a small plant.

Porous clay pots are ideal for house plants because they allow for better aeration of the soil than glazed crockery or plastic pots. You will find the glazed and plastic containers quite satisfactory however, if adequate drainage is provided in the bottom.

Use a soil mixture which is porous enough to allow good drainage and aeration. This can be secured from your local florist or garden center, or you may prefer to prepare your own. A good mixture should include two parts soil, one part shredded peat moss, one part coarse sand and one-half part dried manure. If you prefer a lighter mixture, or have very heavy clay soil, use only one part of soil.

Be sure your soil is sterilized to eliminate diseases and kill weed seeds. Bake in the oven for an hour at 200 degrees Fahrenheit. You may find it more convenient to use a soil disinfectant which can be secured from your local florist or garden center. Use this material according to the instructions on the package.

In repotting old plants, invert the container and, with the plant stem between the first and second finger, knock the rim of the pot against a counter or table. This will loosen the plant and cause it to drop out of the pot. Remove the outer part of the soil mass to allow room for replacement with the new fertile soil mixture.

Cover the drainage hole in the bottom of the pot with a piece of broken crock. Add gravel or crushed stone to a depth of about one inch. This procedure will provide the good drainage which is essential for the healthy growth of your plants.

Center the plant carefully in the pot and work the new soil down around the root ball. Press down firmly with the fingers and bounce the pot a couple of times to settle the soil. The top of the soil should be at least one-half inch below the rim of the pot for convenience in watering.

After repotting, cut back long branches to give your plant a good compact form. Remove dead leaves and wash off any spray residue or dirt which detracts from the attractiveness of your plant.

Place your house plants in a location which receives plenty of natural or artificial light. Do not, however, allow them to bask in the sun of a hot south-west window.

Point O' Woods

The Point O' Woods Garden Club was well assisted in the maintenance of the front entrance by a beautification project supervised by two Life Scouts, John Jennings, Jr. and Bob Backlund of Troop 493. This community service, with the able assistance of over a dozen younger scouts, will mean another step toward Eagle rank for these two young men.

A large vote of thanks and a "well done" was extended by the Garden Club members for the many hours of hard work and excellent results afforded by the fine efforts of the group.

Troop 493 is sponsored by the Wyckoff Presbyterian Church. John Jennings, Scoutmaster.

Tidewater Federation Meets Tues.

The fall meeting of the Tidewater District of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 15 at the Lafayette Yacht Club, 4257 Granby St. in Norfolk.

The meeting will convene at 10 a.m., and registration will start at 9 a.m.

The theme for the program will be "Music from the Appalachians" to be presented by Mrs. George W. Campbell. Mrs. Campbell uses a zither, a dulcimer and an auto-harp for accompaniment. A graduate of the University of Louisville, Ky., she is a private music teacher and is national director of music for Kappa Delta. She is eastern director of Virginia's Music Teachers Association and is a life member of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs.

Garden Week To Be Topic of G. C. of Va.

Emphasis on the aspect of Historic Garden Week will be the theme of the Club Presidents' reports at the 49th meeting of the Board of Governors of The Garden Club of Virginia to be held in Warrenton, on Oct. 15, 16 and 17. Mrs. Lucius J. Kellam of Belle Haven, president, will preside at the business meetings.

The Board of Governors is composed of the Board of Directors, presidents of member clubs, chairmen of standing and special committees and all ex-presidents of The Garden Club of Virginia.

Attending this meeting from the Virginia Beach area will be: Mrs. Mayor F. Fogler, director at large and a member of The Garden Club of Norfolk and Mrs. M. Bagley Walker, president of the Princess Anne Garden Club, and Mrs. D. L. Madeira, president of the Virginia Beach Garden Club.

Spark Windows With Cornices

An added touch over the windows can "make" a room setting which lacks "something."

Window cornices, easily made in the home workshop, are the crowning touch in many rooms, complementing the curtains, draperies and walls. They serve also to prevent dust from settling on the fabrics.

Many home craftsmen . . . and their wives . . . like using Marlstone, a textured hardboard in the motif of travertine marble, for cornices. They are two-toned, off-white and gray in the fissures and blend nicely with almost any choice of fabrics and wall finishes.

It's easy to achieve the indoor-outdoor effect in a home. Just panel accent walls in entry, living, dining and family rooms with resawn, tongue-and-groove siding boards.

DAR Plans Annual Tea

The Princess Anne County Chapter of American Revolution will hold its annual tea Oct. 12, 2:30 p.m., at the First Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Hugh H. Sissons, chairman of American music, will present an interesting program featuring Danne Viser and Larry Viser, minister of music for a local Methodist Church.

There will be several guests present, including members of other Chapters in the district.

Mushrooms Are Delicious Way to Diet

A good tailor may be able to hide a few pounds of overweight on a man, but women's clothes reveal even the slightest bulge.

That there are more piggy banks than Twiggies in this country is obvious. If you doubt it, the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Science's National Research Council says, "A considerable segment of our adult population is overweight." For most of us the pounds come sneaking up, ounce by ounce. The only sure way to lose weight is to eat fewer calories than you expend.

The first step is to learn about the calorie value of the foods most likely to be eaten. Some are much lower in calories than others, but taste just as good and satisfying. Mushrooms are an excellent example. Here is a vegetable which has been called "food for the gods," a delicacy which has been used as an ingredient in many of the world's greatest dishes, yet this tempting munchable packs less than a third the calories of uncreamed cottage cheese, and less than one-ninth the calories of regular ground hamburger.

If you're a compulsive nibbler, eat mushrooms raw—they can easily get to be a good habit. Or team them with leafy greens or celery in a flavorful, though low-calorie salad. Simmer them in a little beef or chicken stock and add a bit of onion and oregano, "the mushroom herb." Add them to lean meat, fish, seafood, well-seasoned aspics. Use mushrooms to replace higher calorie foods for example, they are an excellent extender of meat loaf.

Even though they are low in calories, their texture is "meaty" and satisfying. Mushrooms are a relatively good source of the following individual nutrients: protein, phosphorus, iron, thiamine, riboflavin and niacin—substances we need even when we're cutting down on calories.

MUSHROOM AND CELERY SALAD

- 1/2 lb. mushrooms
- 2 c. sliced celery
- 2 1/2 tbl. olive oil salad oil
- 2 tbl. lemon juice
- 3/4 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. sugar
- 1/8 tsp. ground white pepper
- 1/8 tsp. onion salt
- 1/8 tsp. instant garlic powder

Slice mushrooms (makes 2 1/2 cups). Combine mushrooms and celery in salad bowl. Mix oil, lemon juice, salt, sugar, white pepper, onion salt and garlic powder. Shake well. Pour over mushrooms and celery, coating well. Serve on lettuce lined salad plates. Yield: 6 portions, approximately 66 calories per portion.

HERBED MUSHROOMS

- 1/2 lb. small fresh mushrooms or 1 can (6 to 8 oz.) whole mushrooms
- 1 can (10 1/2 oz.) beef broth, undiluted
- 2 tsp. instant minced onion

Mushrooms are cloud-light in calories; team deliciously with celery in this well-seasoned salad for the weight-watcher.

- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1/8 tsp. ground thyme
- 1/16 tsp. ground black pepper

If fresh mushrooms are being used trim stem ends, (makes about 3 cups); place mushrooms in a small saucepan. If using canned mushrooms do not drain and omit beef broth. Add remaining ingredients and bring to boiling point. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 5 minutes. Serve immediately. Yield: 3 portions, approximately 17 calories per portion.

MUSHROOM BURGERS

- 1/4 lb. fresh mushrooms or 2 cans (3 to 4 oz. each) mushroom stems and pieces
- 1 1/2 lb. lean ground beef
- 1/4 c. finely chopped onion
- 1 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1 tsp. powdered mustard
- 1/4 tsp. ground black pepper
- 1/8 tsp. instant garlic powder

Chop fresh mushrooms (makes 1 1/2 cups) or drain canned mushrooms. Combine mushrooms with beef, onion, salt, mustard, black pepper and garlic powder. Shape into 6 patties. Broil 5 inches from source of heat 4 to 5 minutes; turn and broil until done. Yield: 6 burgers; approximately 212 calories per burger.

Mushrooms, their history, lore and recipes make fascinating reading, whether they are priced at $950.00 or 15¢. About ten years ago R. Gordon and Valentina Wasson published a beautifully done two volume set, "Mushrooms, Russia and History," an edition limited to 512 and costing several hundred dollars. This was obviously intended for the privileged few.

Today the Wassons' book is hard to find, priced at almost a thousand dollars when available.

Health of Sexes Differs

Everybody is well aware of the fact that men are men and women are women.

That's not news. The French summed it up with a shrug and a wry, "Vive la difference!"

Nevertheless, new footnotes are constantly being added to the catalogue of distinctions separating the sexes.

This is a scholarly dissertation on the fascinating fungus, but not at all a cookbook. If, on the other hand, you love cooking and eating mushrooms, there's a great little leaflet of about two dozen of the best mushroom recipes, using either fresh or processed mushrooms, which costs 15¢.

This 15-page illustrated booklet is called "Mushrooms Put M-m-m-m in Your Menu." Write to the American Mushroom Institute, P. O. Box 373, Kennett Square, Penna. 19348. Remember to give your zip code and enclose the 15¢ in coin to pay postage and handling costs.

The Health Insurance Institute has reported on some of the findings made by medical researchers, sociologists and analysts from the mountains of data being compiled in this era of computerization.

For instance, did you know that women have perceptibly cleaner teeth than men? Yet generally they need more dental care than men do.

These dental statistics were brought to light in the course of a U.S. National Health Survey, a statistical examination of health characteristics of a population sample representative of 111 million adult Americans.

The survey found other interesting and medically significant differences between the sexes. Consider the incidence of headaches. Both men and women have them, to be sure, but women have more of them—statistically, 3.3 severe headaches per 100 women to 1.4 per 100 men.

Statistical researchers in government agencies, insurance companies and in medical institutions have noted many other health characteristics distinguishing the sexes.

*The need for eyeglasses. More women of all ages need glasses than men do. (An estimated 50 per cent of the female population wears them. Among men, it's 43 per cent.)

*Rheumatic fever. More girls than boys get it.

*Gout. About 350,000 Americans suffer from this condition caused by excessive amounts of uric acid in the blood. Nine out of 10 gout victims are men.

*Hypertension. Women under age 50 are less likely to suffer from hypertension than men in the same age group.

*Blood sugar levels. Women, regardless of age, have generally higher blood sugar levels than men.

*Mental illness. Mental hospitals have noted that more men are admitted than women.

Now Possible To Shrink Hemorrhoids

And Promptly Stop Itching, Relieve Pain In Most Cases.

Science has found a medication with the ability, in most cases, to relieve pain, itching and shrink hemorrhoids. In case after case doctors proved, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction took place. The secret is Preparation H. It also soothes irritated tissue and helps prevent further infection. Just ask for Preparation H Ointment or Suppositories.

Pumpkins Climax Mall Events

Pembroke Mall has a full list of events scheduled for October, culminating with the Mall's Third Annual Pumpkin Decorating Contest.

The first of the events, the Virginia Professional Photographers Display, began Oct. 5 and will continue through Saturday. This is a display at the Mall of award winning photographs of the Virginia Professional Photographers Association for 1968.

Also continuing through Saturday is "Leather Week". The Leather Industries of America, Inc., will present five fashion shows today, Friday and Saturday, featuring leather merchandise from merchants throughout the mall. Today and tomorrow the fashion shows will be at 1:30 p.m. and 6:45 p.m. Saturday the fashion show will be at 2 p.m.

The Virginia Beach Extension Service will have an exhibit Oct. 14-19. The exhibit will consist of Home Economics, Agriculture, Horticulture and 4-H displays, including some demonstrations presented by 4-H club members of Virginia Beach. In addition there will be a fashion show Oct. 19 at 1 p.m. entitled "The Hats and History Review", featuring styles from 1896 to now.

Pembroke Mall's Second Annual Charity Bazaar will be held Oct. 24, 25 and 26 with approximately 120 civic, cultural, recreation and service organizations participating. Hours will be from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. on Oct. 24 and 25, and from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. on the 26th.

The Pumpkin Decorating Contest will be held Oct. 29-31. The contest will be open to children ages 6-12. First prize will be a $25 Savings Bond, second prize will be $10 in Savings Stamps and third prize will be $5 in Savings Stamps. Pumpkins will be judged at 4 p.m. on the 31st.

GI education benefits are available to veterans with service after January 1955.

Further information on the events may be obtained by calling the promotion office at Pembroke Mall at 497-9431.

VIRGINIA:
In the Circuit Court of the City of Virginia Beach, on the 23rd day of August, 1968.

ORDER
This day came more than 4,000 qualified voters of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, by counsel, and filed their petition, pursuant to the Virginia Code of 1950, as amended, Section 4-98.12, requesting that the Court order that a referendum be held on the question "May mixed alcoholic beverages be sold in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, by restaurants licensed under Chapter 11 of Title 4 of the Code of Virginia?"; and this cause was heard upon said petition and also upon a certificate of the Clerk of this Court, certifying that 23,442 votes were cast by qualified voters of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, in the last preceding presidential election, which was held November 3, 1964, and were counted, and that 15% of said number is 3,517, and upon a certificate of the General Registrar of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, certifying that the petitions filed, with this Court, contain the signatures of at least 4,000 duly qualified voters of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia; and was argued by counsel.

It appearing to the Court that said petition conforms to the law in such cases made and provided and that said petition contains the signatures of duly qualified voters of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, equal in number to at least 15% of the number of votes cast by qualified voters of said City and counted for presidential electors in the last preceding presidential election in said City, do hereby ADJUDGE, ORDER AND DECREE that a referendum be held on the question as set forth in said petition, to-wit: "May mixed alcoholic beverages be sold in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, by restaurants licensed under Chapter 11 of Title 4 of the Code of Virginia?"; and the Court doth further ADJUDGE, ORDER AND DECREE that the regular election officials of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, on the 5th day of November, 1969, shall open the polls and take the sense of the qualified voters of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, on the question herein provided.

The Court doth further ADJUDGE, ORDER AND DECREE that the Clerk of this Court shall cause a notice of said election to be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, once a week for the three weeks next preceding the election to be held on November 5, 1969.

The Court doth further ADJUDGE, ORDER AND DECREE that the regular election officials of the said City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, upon the date designated herein, shall open the polls at the various voting places in said City and conduct said election in such manner as is provided by law in other elections insofar as the same is applicable, and that said election shall be by ballot and that said ballot shall be prepared by the Electoral Board of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, in accordance with the provisions of Section 4-98.12 of the 1950 Code of Virginia, as amended.

The Clerk of this Court is hereby directed to send a certified copy of this Order to the Electoral Board of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia.

Overton Case Lacks Answers

Several questions remain unanswered regarding the apparently illegal detention of William Oliver Overton in the Virginia Beach City Jail for a period of six days.

Overton, 35, of Holland Road, remained in the City Jail from July 1, when he was arrested on a charge of malicious wounding of a girlfriend, Salomey Field, until Oct. 3, when his release from jail was obtained through the help of Commonwealth Attorney's Office special investigator Detective Louis Taylor.

The initial court action took place in Municipal Court July 5. The case was continued until July 19, Aug. 30, Sept. 9, and finally to Sept. 13 when Overton was bound over to a Circuit Court grand jury on grounds of probable cause.

The grand jury which convened on Sept. 27 failed to indict Overton on the charge, and legally Overton should have been a free man.

Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans said a message from Overton was relayed to Detective Taylor's home the night of Oct. 2 requesting the two meet the next morning at the jail. This meeting resulted in Taylor's affecting Overton's release when Taylor informed Evans the man was still in custody, and Evans informed City Sgt. John Marr's office that there was apparently no reason to continue holding Overton. Evans said that to this point he had no knowledge that Overton was still in jail since he felt that the city sergeant is responsible for keeping persons in the jail. He said his interest in the case ended when the grand jury failed to indict.

Evans said, "Those familiar with court proceedings will know where the responsibility lies." Marr said however, he could not release a prisoner until he is authorized to do so by the courts. And that he had no record of the failure to indict until Oct. 3 when he received a card with this information from the Circuit Court clerk's office.

Circuit Court Clerk John Fentress said, "I'm sure there will be closer cooperation among the departments—namely the clerk's office, city sergeant's office and Commonwealth's attorney office—in dealing with such matters."

Circuit Court Judge Robert Wahab said, "The usual procedure has been, and should have been in this case, to check the list of presentations for indictments against the true bills returned, and to check jail cards to see who is or is not in jail."

Wahab said he did not want to attempt to place the responsibility on anyone for what occurred in Overton's case. He added that safeguards against a recurrence have been taken through his requesting "closer cooperation and closer attention on the parts of those involved."

While the Virginia Beach City Jail is physical property of the city, City Sgt. John Marr is governed in his operation of the facility by regulations of the State Department of Welfare and Institutions. These regulations state that, "If there is any doubt as to the authority and orders required to receive, hold, or release a prisoner, the Commonwealth's Attorney shall give his advice in the form of a written decision."

There is speculation that Overton may bring suit against the city of Virginia Beach in the matter. Theodore A. Boyce identified as Overton's attorney, said there had been no contact with Overton.

According to Municipal Court records, papers concerning Overton were forwarded to Circuit Court on Oct. 2 in time to complete proper steps for the Circuit Court docket call on Oct. 7, although the grand jury convened on Oct. 13.

Rules Tight Committee Says of Law

Regulations adopted recently by the Virginia ABC Board will make it virtually impossible for any establishment to operate as a saloon, cocktail lounge or bar in those cities voting "yes" for mixed beverages Nov. 5.

Hunter A. Hogan, Jr., chairman of 4 Cities for Mixed Beverages, said today that restrictions under the new law are so tight that the ABC Board will have greater control over alcohol in the area than under present conditions.

The referendum will be held in Virginia Beach which is represented on 4 Cities for Mixed Beverages.

Take a restaurant which has been serving beer and wine over a bar, Hogan said. If this restaurant gets a mixed beverage license, all alcoholic beverages (including beer and wine) will have to be served at a table. The patron will not be allowed to walk around holding his drink.

And apparently as a discouragement to solitary drinkers, he said, most of the tables have to be dining-sized tables large enough to seat two or four persons.

"What we can look forward to if voters approve the referendum," he said, "are restaurants and dining rooms where a patron can order a cocktail before a meal."

Congressman Thomas N. Downing addressed the crowd at Bow Creek Country Club.

Downing 'Wagon' Visits

Rep. Thomas N. Downing, seeking re-election to a sixth term in Congress, was the guest speaker Tuesday night before a combined meeting of the Virginia Beach Young Democrats and the Lynnhaven and Virginia Beach Democratic Clubs.

Downing was introduced by his campaign managers in Virginia Beach, Del. B. R. Middleton and Kenneth Whitehurst, Jr. Both had spent the day with Downing on the campaign trail in Virginia Beach. During the afternoon Congressman Downing was at City Hall, and his red, white and blue motor home converted into a "bandwagon" visited a number of shopping and residential areas in the city. The campaign continued Wednesday morning.

Downing came to Virginia Beach shortly after Congress adjourned Monday.

U.N. Day Observance Planned

Mrs. Everett W. Abdill was appointed official chairman for the United Nations Celebration by City Mayor Frank Dusch on Tuesday.

President Johnson has proclaimed Oct. 24 as United Nations Day throughout the United States in observance of the founding of the U. N. on that day in 1945. In addition, Mayor Dusch has proclaimed Oct. 20 as U. N. Day in Virginia Beach.

The Tidewater Chapter of the United Nations Association of the U. S. A. will present a special program Oct. 20 at the Civic Center from 3-5 p.m. This salute to the founding of the U. N. has events scheduled for children and adults, with emphasis placed on the annual UNICEF drive.

Future Schools May Enter Long Range City Planning

What City Council did not do at its regular meeting Monday may prove to be far more important than what it did do.

While Council disposed of about 25 zoning matters the first real item was sounded concerning the future of the building industry in Virginia Beach. Council agreed to postpone for two weeks its decision on rezoning and permission to build a high-rise, high-rent apartment complex to be known as Heritage Arms near the intersection of Thalia Road and Virginia Beach Blvd.

The postponement came after lengthy discussion of the number of school children the 458-apartment units would "generate". Richard Bell, speaking for the Thalia Wayside Corp., developers of the proposed complex, argued that the type of apartment would not generate many children because of high rent. He said the units would appeal more to young executives and retired persons past child-bearing age. Rents will reportedly range from $195 to $400 monthly.

Virginia Beach School Superintendent E. E. Brickell told Council that the elementary school that would serve the units, Thalia School, is now operating at capacity, and that Princess Anne High School, the secondary school that would serve it, is operating with a number of temporary classrooms added already. He said also that the city does not own any land in the area available for another school site.

Kempville Councilman Albert Bonney said he would arrange a meeting between Bell and school officials within the next two weeks in efforts to work out the problem.

Meanwhile councilmen expressed skepticism concerning the future where schools and apartment developments are concerned.

At the same meeting, however, approval was given to a 288-unit apartment development in the Homestead area.

While he said he expected some word within a few days, he admitted there may have to be further meetings before the possibility of a general aviation airport in the city can become a reality.

In the original meeting the committee offered to trade an old Norfolk Southern Railroad right-of-way through Seashore State Park for about 100 acres of the park itself for the airport.

While some question has since arisen concerning the city ownership of the land, Sadler said he felt the matter could be resolved and that he was optimistic at this time concerning the location of a private airstrip there.

The location has been considered favorable because of the lack of military aircraft in the area. That problem had previously put a stop to location of a strip at other sites in the city. The Navy has exclusive rights to most air space in Virginia Beach.

An airport in Virginia Beach would bring an additional $15 million in resort business to the city, according to Sadler.

Meanwhile the controversy over expansion of Norfolk's airport still brews. The issue of access to the present field has been raised again. At present roads to and from the airport in any direction are considered inadequate, and no relief is in sight at least within the next few years.

Expansion, totalling some $12 million, not including access roads, is expected to further complicate the problem.

where Brickell said there is no critical school problem and where a new school site is available. The money for the new school, however, is not available, according to city officials. The Charlack Corp. will build those apartments on the northwest corner of Providence Road and Whitehurst Landing Road.

A number of other apartment and townhouse developments may fall into the same questionable category. Bernard Jaffe has applied for a use permit for 368 apartments in the same Thalia area and the City Planning Commission has approved several other projects that could cause school problems elsewhere. School officials have recently been raising objections to such rapid development until some way can be worked out to settle school and school site problems.

Several Councilmen said privately after the meeting that this could be the beginning of long-range planning to meet school needs.

In other zoning matters Council approved the rezoning of Virginia Beach Blvd. from the oceanfront to Newtown Road after a planning department study made its recommendations. There were few objections to the rezoning since the new plan generally maintains entrance corridors for major housing developments and zones much of the rest for commercial and apartment use.

Airport Decision Awaited

An airport for Virginia Beach still remains in the hands of Virginia Gov. Mills E. Godwin, Jr. James P. Sadler, Virginia Beach industrialist and chairman of the Mayor's special airport committee, said he is "still waiting to hear from the Governor following a meeting in Richmond two weeks ago."

While he said he expected some word within a few days, he admitted there may have to be further meetings before the possibility of a general aviation airport in the city can become a reality.

In the original meeting the committee offered to trade an old Norfolk Southern Railroad right-of-way through Seashore State Park for about 100 acres of the park itself for the airport.

While some question has since arisen concerning the city ownership of the land, Sadler said he felt the matter could be resolved and that he was optimistic at this time concerning the location of a private airstrip there.

School Board Settles Insurance Question

The Virginia Beach School Board settled the question of dividing insurance commissions after a three month delay.

A committee, made up of School Supt. E. E. Brickell and School Board Chairman J. W. Buffington, presented the plan whereby 50 per cent of the commissions on school insurance would go to the agent of record and the rest be divided among members of the Virginia Beach Independent Insurance Agents Association and those agents who have previously participated in school insurance.

Said Buffington, "There is no perfect solution, no good solution, not even a fair solution." Then he added that the insurance this year is "far superior and far less expensive than when it was put out on bids."

The issue of commissions was first raised in August when independent agents appeared at the School Board meeting to say that the plan of giving the commission only to members of the Virginia Beach Independent Insurance Agents Association was unfair since the organization does not represent all of the independent agents.

In September they returned along with members of the V. B. I. I. A. A. but no settlement was reached, so Buffington and Brickell were appointed to settle the division.

Mrs. Ralph Melton, spokesman for the John B. Day P.T.A., renewed an earlier request for a gymnasium for the school. Brickell pointed out it would take another bond issue to provide the money for a gym.

He said that 26 elementary schools have no gym and several others have a very small one. He suggested that "at the first indication of another bond issue, you all holler loud."

Dr. D. D. Cook-right suggested that a small track and football field could be put in the open field behind the school which is presently used as parking during Cox High School football games. He said that at little expense a covered shelter could be built for inclement weather and mats purchased for tumbling.

Parks and Recreation Director Harold Whitehurst and Brickell will meet with PTA representatives to see what can be worked out.

Frank Taylor, director of adult education, said that 519 adults are enrolled in adult evening classes, and he foresees 1,000 in the future, "maybe next year." Classes increased to 40 this fall from eight last year. Taylor also predicted evening school diplomas in the future.

The Building and Grounds Committee of the School Board recommended and the School Board approved that the Bayside Junior High School not exceed $2,600,000. Bids on the proposed school were higher than anticipated, and the committee has been working with the architect to cut costs.

UCF Unit Tops Goal At Beach

Earl V. Slattum, co-major of the Community Fund Drive for the Beach Borough, has announced that the drive reached 100.33% of its goal of $8,950.

Slattum and co-major Bill Swertfeeger initiated their campaign the middle of August in order to get to the business people before the season closed.

Special recognition for their work was given by Slattum to the drive's Restaurant Division co-captains, H. O. "Mike" Erhard and Mike Saville, as well as to co-captains of the Hotel-Motel Division, Bill Dicky and Roy Niel.

Members of the General Business Committee who also gave extra effort to the campaign are John Gravatt, Pete Guellini, Monroe Farmer, E. A. Darden III, Russell Ruck, Mike Beckett, Clint Shanks and Bill Robertson.

QUESTION: Should continued apartment and townhouse development be allowed in Virginia Beach without regard to the cost of building new schools since this will almost certainly result in another large bond issue and increase in taxes? (See City Council Zoning Story.)

Jail Developments 'Embarrass' Marr

"I've been harassed and embarrassed to the point that I will not take any more," said City Sgt. John E. Marr concerning his reaction to recent developments regarding his operation of the Virginia Beach City Jail.

Marr also released to the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN a copy of the report of findings by the Virginia Division of Corrections in an August inspection of the jail, which he requested. A week ago Marr would not discuss the contents of the report but on Thursday, the SUN's publication day, released the report to a Norfolk newspaper. While the report detailed specific recommendations for improvement of the jail operation, Sgt. Marr said he felt "the report didn't criticize me."

W. K. Cunningham, Jr., director of the Division of Corrections, recommended numerous personnel and physical changes at the jail.

Personnel changes outlined in the report suggested the hiring of additional jailers and matrons, although the report stated that the present staff "in a sense . . . gives you full-time supervision over the inmates."

The report alleged inmates of the jail were not receiving adequate supervision and recommended employment of additional jailers to provide for placing an "inside jailer" on duty in the security area. The hiring of additional matrons was also recommended so that a matron would be on duty at all times to supervise women inmates. At present only one full-time matron is employed.

Marr said he has requested an allocation from the State Department of Welfare and Institutions board of compensation for an additional matron whom he hopes to employ in the very near future.

The report also recommended "that only misdemeanants be used as trustees" and that such trustees be "returned to their cells when not actually working at their assigned jobs". Apparent felons are also used as trustees.

Marr, while taking steps to make some of the recommended changes, said he also disagreed with the recommended relocation of the Justice of the Peace office out of the building and the use of space in jail operations.

Marr told the SUN "Relocation of the Justice of the Peace would make an inconvenience to police in bringing prisoners in and to prisoners in their making bonds".

Recommendations regarding security changes include providing additional space for visiting prisoners. Visiting is now permitted on each of the floors of the jail, and personal contact between inmates and visitors is possible. At Marr's request, and upon City Manager Roger Scott's recommendation City Council Monday appropriated $1,500 for renovation of the city jail. Scott said the money would be used to construct a "proper visiting area where prisoners would have no contact with visitors". There is speculation this work will begin immediately.

Another recommendation was that "some type of security door should be installed at the entrance of the jail for the protection of the jailer." The report added, "The open front door is an invitation to come into the jail and affords the jailer no protection whatsoever should someone pull a gun on the jailer and demand him to open the main door and let the prisoners out."

Finally the report recommended certain remodeling of the jail to strengthen internal security and called for salaries for guard personnel being made equal others who are employed in the same work.

Reportedly members of City Council and other city officials are studying the recommendations before any further steps are taken.

Change in Conflict Law Looks Hopeful

Until this week it looked like the special conflict of interest study commission set up by Virginia Gov. Mills E. Godwin, Jr. was ignoring the special problems faced in Virginia Beach and Norfolk.

Then in an abrupt face, upon the urging of state and local officials and a resolution adopted recently by the Virginia Municipal League, the commission met and recommended that changes in the nearly 100-year-old law be explored by the special session of the Virginia General Assembly expected to be called next February or March.

The chairman of the commission, Dr. William T. Muse, said he did not believe the rush was necessary and the matter could wait until 1970, but because of the urgent pleas, asked for the consideration by the special session.

The matter came to a head in Virginia Beach when former Police and Trail Board chairman Richard Holland was accused of conflict of interest by Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans. The matter involved the sale of emergency equipment to the city by a firm Holland heads. Evans now has a court case pending against Holland, which is expected to be delayed until the General Assembly acts.

Other Virginia Beach officials were also accused, and a furor became much worse when a large number of Norfolk and other Tidewater city officials were also accused of conflicts involving millions of dollars.

New legislation will bedrain

Tooth Lost, Purse Kept

Virginia Beach police are searching for a purse snatcher who failed to steal a purse but cost his woman victim one of her front teeth. Jennie R. Gulte, 23, of Burton Drive, is quoted by police as saying her attacker grabbed for her purse Monday night at a London Bridge supermarket. The woman said she bite her attacker on the arm, she was struck in the mouth by the attacker in freeing himself, and she swallowed her front tooth. The would be purse snatcher fled empty handed.

Break-In Stopped

Court appearance is pending for three Norfolk men on charges of attempting to burglarize Carroll's Drive-in at the intersection of Virginia Beach Blvd. and Lynnhaven Road. The suspects were identified by police as James Martin, 63, Landing Street; William H. Taylor, 34, Livieria Drive; and Melvin R. Butt, 23, W. 34th Street. Investigators said the trio was apprehended after a chase of approximately one mile when they were running on foot from the drive-in in the early hours of Monday morning.

Hearing Scheduled

A Nov. 4 Municipal Court hearing has been scheduled for Raymond Diggs facing a charge of alleged illegal possession of marijuana. Police investigators contend Diggs, 27, of Sykes Lane, was arrested at an apartment in the 2000 block of Cypress Avenue during an investigation of a disorderly complaint by police officer J. E. Parks.

Five Face Charges

Five suspects facing charges in a number of Virginia burglaries which occurred during the past year and resulted in loss of an estimated $4,000 in property. The suspects were identified as three 19-year-olds, Jerry Kizer, Hill Prince Road; Malcolm West, Ferry Plantation Road; and James E. Sadowski, a former Virginia Beach resident now living in Richmond, and two juveniles aged 16 and 17. The crimes reportedly occurred in Virginia Beach, Norfolk, Williamsburg, and Charlottesville. Court appearances are scheduled at various times of the remainder of this month. Police reported a portion of the stolen property worth approximately $500.

Magazine Spotlights Va. Beach

Virginia Beach is spotlighted in the September issue of Emphasis magazine.

Two articles—one on fishing for bluefish and the other on Joy Evans, winner in the girls' division of the 1968 East Coast Regional Surfing Championship—concentrate on this area.

"A Good Case of the Blues" is an account of one day's fishing aboard the "Striper III", a 40-foot Chris-Craft, owned by Bill McCarthy, a vice-president of The Bank of Virginia in Richmond and R. I. "Yan" Pusey, president of Pusey's Industrial Truck Sales in Hanover County. The "Striper III" is home ported at the White Heron Motel.

"Joy Evans Princess of Surfdom" follows Joy Evans at home, at classes at First Colonial High School and at the beach, where Joy puts in many hours of surfing.

State Board School Names Hall for Kellams Picks Bayne

Virginia Beach Borough Fire Department Chief E. B. Bayne has been appointed to serve on an advisory committee on emergency medical services by the Virginia State Board of Health.

The committee is composed of nine members from various parts of the state who have been requested to draw up a set of regulations for the certification by the state of all ambulance owners, operators, and attendants in the Old Dominion.

Chief Bayne told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN the committee is still in its formative stage, that officers have not been named, and the committee is to have its first meeting in the near future.

According to Bayne the certification program is expected to get under way about the first of next year. Basically the regulations will stipulate that no ambulance may be dispatched on a call which has not been certified through an inspection of equipment contained in the ambulance, and which does not contain at least one person who has been certified in proper first aid training. Such certification would be valid for a maximum period of two years before requiring re-inspection of equipment and re-examination of personnel.

While no specific requirements have been outlined as yet regarding the type of training which will be required, indications are they might include training in advanced first aid.

Chief Bayne said the new program will apparently create no problem with operation of ambulances by any of the Virginia Beach fire departments or rescue squads, since such equipment already is maintained on the level of such requirements as noted above.

Kellam Hall, one of two buildings at Virginia Wesleyan College which is being named in honor of prominent Tidewater families, is being named in memory of the late A. E. and Clara Eaton Kellam of Princess Anne County.

Funds for this memorial, a dormitory, have been provided by the sons and other members of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Kellam. Two sons, Sidney S. Kellam of Virginia Beach and Edwin C. Kellam of Norfolk, are members of the Board of Trustees at Wesleyan.

The Virginia Wesleyan College Board of Trustees have also authorized a lounge-classroom building to be named in honor of the Birdsong family of Suffolk, Va. Judge Jerry C. Bray, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees at Wesleyan, indicates that this family "has supported Wesleyan financially in a significant way during the early years of development."

Harvard R. Birdsong, chairman of the Board of the Birdsong peanut businesses based in Suffolk, is a member of the Virginia Wesleyan Board of Trustees.

Dedication for the two buildings has been scheduled for Dec. 1. Both buildings are part of the college's first academic village now being occupied.

Two other dormitories, Louise Eggleston Hall and Margarette Hanes Old Hall, were dedicated last fall at Wesleyan. Each village has four dormitories, two lounge-classroom buildings and a dining hall. The entire village, which was completed for the first class in Sept. 1966, cost approximately $1,600,000.

In other action at the regular fall meeting, the trustees voted approval on a grant and loan agreement with the U.S. Office of Education for $747,000 toward the cost of a new science center. The center, to house laboratories, classrooms and offices for the college's science program, will cost approximately $1,000,000.

The college is now involved in a program to raise locally $300,000 for this facility. The long range campus plan calls for the beginning of construction on this facility in early 1969 for completion in Sept. 1970. Final plans and specifications for this facility are now being prepared.

Some things to tell your grandchildren about the telephone.

Tell them how Long Distance was so expensive that it was only used by movie stars, gangsters and tycoons. That's pretty hard to believe, but tell them.

Or tell them how everybody gathered around the general store, to hear some good conversation. Namely yours and whomever you were calling. The telephone booth ruined all that.

Tell them how polite you used to be to your elders because your elders knew more than you did. Especially the elders who were telephone operators.

And they might find it curious that while the cost of everything else has increased over the years, Long Distance calls keep costing less and less. When they ask you why, tell them you don't know why, but isn't it nice. A telephone just isn't what it used to be. We're glad. We hope you are.

Agreement May Mean Million

Herbert Glassman, owner of the Americano Hotel in Virginia Beach and Ernest Lendman, of Lendman Associates, which is headquartered in Norfolk, have recently concluded an agreement which will bring at least 200 and probably more people coming each day to Virginia Beach. Lendman operates a nationwide personnel agency which deals only with ex-military officers and large corporations in the placement of men in choice executive positions. The placement business is relatively new, but has grown so fast and now includes so many applicants and large businesses that Lendman was faced with housing the executives and the applicants who converge in Tidewater for interviews and placement.

H.A. Bailey Resignation Unconfirmed

Harry A. Bailey, GOP member of the Virginia Beach Electoral Board, still refuses to confirm or deny his supposed resignation.

Bailey has been the center of controversy in the local Republican party since 1967 when Circuit Court Judge Robert S. Wahab Jr. reappointed Baileys secretary to the board for a two-year term. At that time the Republicans protested the appointment, contending that Bailey did not represent their party's interests in Electoral Board matters. They threatened legal action to remove Bailey but did nothing.

Various sources have indicated that the resignation, which reportedly has been submitted to Wahab, will be effective Jan. 1, 1969. Wahab does not confirm the report, nor does John B. James, board chairman.

Bailey has said that if the report were true, the only advantage in not announcing his resignation now would be to allow him to stay until after the Nov. 5 election because of his familiarity with the procedures.

John A. Field III, Republican City Committee Chairman, says that Republicans will insist that a member acceptable to them replace Bailey.

He has therefore guaranteed Glassman a minimum of 120 rooms a night, seven days a week, over the seven-month period from Nov. 1 until Memorial Day when the resort business makes it imperative for Glassman to have all of the 180 rooms at the Americano, as well as the 80 he owns at the Gay Vacationer.

Glassman said that while many of the applicants and business executives bring their wives and families, others do not. The applicants, when possible will be housed two to a room.

All interviewing and placement will also be accomplished at meeting space and office set up in the hotel, according to Glassman. Meals will also be provided, under the agreement, at the hotel's dining room.

Glassman estimates that an additional million dollars will be brought into the Virginia Beach economy through the arrangement based on the amount spent by tourists and conventioners when coming to a resort city. Glassman added that the hotel will also provide live entertainment during the evenings throughout the winter in the dining room and in the hotel's private club.

The average stay for the company executives is expected to be about a week, while the applicants will stay a shorter time, probably two or three days.

Questions To Nixon Are Taped

The "United Citizens for Nixon-Agnew Listening Post" in Virginia Beach went into operation last night, and will continue through Oct. 18.

All citizens with questions for either Nixon or Agnew are invited to visit the headquarters at 215 21st St. to voice these questions. There they will be put on tape and sent to the Nixon staff in Washington, D.C.; from Washington they will be sent to the candidates and the answers mailed to the person posing the question.

Leonard Morrell, headquarters chairman, will be on hand from 7-9 p.m. through the 18th to tape the questions.

CCO Hears Importance Of Liquor

Richard D. Guy, chairman of Virginia Beach's liquor-by-the-drink campaign, addressed the Beach Council of Civic Organizations recently.

Guy told the group that if the local option referendum is defeated, discussion of a new convention center will be meaningless. Guy said that the city will not only lose much of its convention business, but also some of the tourist business.

In his speech Guy referred to two recent talks by Rev. Harold E. Richards Jr., a spokesman for Tidewater Opposition to Alcohol's Lies. He said the statistics used in the talks were "very misleading and erroneous."

The Beach Council of Civic Organizations also elected new officers at the meeting, choosing Glen McClanahan as president for the next year.

F&M Bank Announces Changes

Directors of First & Merchants National Bank have announced a plan of reorganization whereby the bank will become a subsidiary of a holding company to be known as First & Merchants Corporation.

Robert L. Gordon, Jr., president, said here late Wednesday that the move is being undertaken to achieve greater flexibility in broadening the range of financial services which can be offered.

Final adoption of the plan is subject to approval by stockholders and obtaining necessary consents from bank regulatory and tax authorities.

Social Council To Tour Bldg.

The Virginia Beach Council of Social Agencies will meet Oct. 18, 3 p.m., in the new Department of Public Welfare office at Virginia Beach Courthouse.

Roger Scott, city manager, will be the speaker for the meeting. In addition, a tour of the new offices of Department of Public Welfare is planned.

This is the new Woolco store on Little Creek Road

Woolco Opens, Second Planned

Woolco Dept. Store will have a second outlet in the Tidewater area underway shortly after the first of the year if all goes well.

The first major store, located at 4251 E. Little Creek Rd., opened to the public yesterday.

The second store, of about equal size, will be located in Pembroke East.

Pembroke East construction has been held up for some months because of a legal tangle concerning the ownership of land where Pembroke Mall and Princess Anne High School are now built and where Pembroke East will be built. The technicalities revolve around ownership of never-opened streets in the area.

Horace Cistola, partner in the Terry Corporation, developers of Pembroke East, as well as Pembroke, Pembroke Mall and Pembroke Manor, said he expects the case to come to court soon so that construction can begin early next year.

Thalhimer will occupy one end of Pembroke East while Woolco will occupy the other. A number of other leases are still pending, according to Cistola. He said several tenants will be announced in the near future.

Woolco Dept. Store is a division of the F. W. Woolworth Co. and features full department store merchandise and services.

UCF Campaign to Begin

The greater Tidewater United Communities Fund campaign for 1968 begins on Monday, Oct. 21, and ends on Nov. 1. During that time volunteer workers will be soliciting contributions from cities in the Tidewater area to meet the goal of $2,267,222.

Some 52 agencies, including the American Red Cross, health services, youth services, child and family welfare services, services to armed forces and national central services will benefit from the campaign and will in turn make funds available to the needy in the coming year.

The cost of the services, as well as the goal for 1968, has gone up considerably. About 28 percent of the money collected will be used in Virginia Beach, while Chesapeake will receive slightly over 10 percent. Norfolk gets about 6 percent of the money spent on the services. The distribution is based on population and need. Employees in many business establishments will be asked to contribute on a Fair Share basis. The fair share method of giving represents approximately one hour's pay per month over the period of a year. It is estimated that one family in three benefits from some service of the United Communities Fund in a given year in Tidewater, and the once-a-year solicitation through a central agency is considered an excellent way to raise money for these member agencies.

Campaign Reports

For the week of October 13-19, these are comments from the three major political headquarters in Virginia Beach: NIXON-AGNEW, James Fant, chairman. "The campaign is going very well. We've had tremendous enthusiasm and a lot of volunteer help. We've now canvassed in nine precincts, our man is now favored by about 55 percent. Basically, organization, women and the national tide are all in our favor."

WALLACE-LEMA, Louis Darden, chairman. "I think we're coming along a lot better than I thought we would, and I think we're in pretty good shape right now. I think we'll win it by Nov. 5. We've got most of the precincts covered with workers, and we have no trouble keeping the headquarters open from early morning to ten at night. We have plenty of help."

HUMPHREY-MUSKIE, Edward Brogan, chairman. "I think it's very obvious that we had an uphill fight, but I am very enthusiastic now. We have had no trouble getting volunteer workers. Now they're coming in here in droves. The total of young people also working for the ticket now numbers over 55, and we are in the process of setting up a telephone survey. Seven City Councilmen, all five city constitutional officers, our state senator, one member of the House of Delegates and a number of others have endorsed the ticket."

City to Hire J.P.'s Probation Officers

City Council Monday authorized City Manager Roger Scott to hire two new justices of the peace to handle the heavy load of work in that department and two new juvenile probation officers to meet additional needs of that department.

The probation officers will probably become part of a new intake department, designed to study a large number of the cases scheduled for court and reduce the actual number that actually reach the court.

Scott did not recommend a pay hike to Council as had been urged by juvenile authorities and a committee headed by Vice Mayor Robert Cromwell. Scott did not bring the pay hike to a vote but discussed it informally with Councilmen. He said the need was there but could bring about moral problems in other city jobs if that hike were arbitrarily made. He agreed that a study would be made of the matter for future recommendation.

Council also authorized Scott to seek federal and state money for an economic analysis of the city for the present and future. Scott said this would probably help in the future study of the resort industry as well as in other businesses and industries.

Approval was given to the appropriation of $22,428 to pay for plans for the Rudee Inlet permanent marina. When the marina is developed by private interests the money will be repaid to the city.

H. B. Smith and Joseph Dodd were appointed to the city Board of Electrical Examiners and President

To Decide On Funds

In one of the last acts of the present session of Congress, the House of Representatives agreed to go along with Senate attempts to free federal impact funds. The Senate had already put language in the appropriations bill that would try to force President Johnson to free the funds.

The funds had already been approved by Congress earlier but had been frozen by the President. The recent action merely exempted the impact funds earmarked for heavily populated federally connected areas from the spending cut tied to the tax surcharge.

There is still much concern that the President will not release the funds, and there is apparently no law which can be invoked by Congress that can force the release. About 80 percent of the impact funds reached impact areas prior to the freeze, but about $91 million was held up nationwide.

An increase in the next year's funds was also passed by Congress but the chances of all of that reaching the states is also doubtful, because of present and future budgetary problems. Virginia Congressmen and Senators have made continued efforts to free the funds, so far to no avail. The loss to Virginia Beach alone totals about a half million dollars school officials have already budgeted and say they are not sure how they could replace.

Zoning

between Newtown and Wickliffe Roads from the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway to the Norfolk Southern Railroad was also zoned industrial by Council after objections from residents of the area were withdrawn upon assurance that no "smokestack" industry would be placed there. Landmark Communications, Inc. publishers of the newspapers in Norfolk, has an option on about 34 acres of that land for the future development of a secondary printing plant there.

The property was on option pending the zoning for $11,500 an acre from E. Y. Williams and W. W. Reasor.

Rezoning of property in the Robbins Corner area was deferred until a study could be completed to include property to Shore Drive.

Council also established a new zoning category to protect and develop historic and cultural property in the city.

A use permit was issued to W. D. Sams, Jr. for the construction of a 60-unit motel at 36th and Atlantic Avenue.

An application of R. H. DeFord for a zoning change to multiple family residence was approved near Newtown and Sullivan Roads, but may yet be in for trouble when a use permit is applied for because of school problems in the area.

The Virginia Beach Friends Housing Corp. was granted a use permit to build 110 apartment units near Seatack Elementary School. The low income, low rent project will be federally subsidized.

'Fallacies' Uncovered In Flyer

An investigation made by 4 Cities for Mixed Beverages uncovered fallacies, misstatements and distortions of facts in a flyer distributed recently by "TOTAL", Hunter A. Hogan, Jr., 4 Cities chairman, said today.

Prepared by "TOTAL" (Tide-water's Opposition to Alcohol's Lies), the flyer was directed at young people. It listed four reasons for voting against Mixed Beverages, supporting them with "statements taken out of context, erroneous conclusions and things which just are not true", Hogan said.

The flyer quoted the chairman of the Iowa Liquor Commission as saying that "selling of liquor to minors" was one of two major problems which developed during the first four years of liquor-by-the-drink in Iowa.

In a telephone conversation with a representative of the 4 Cities Committee, Walter E. Edelen, the chairman of the Iowa Liquor Commission, remarked, "I think they're taking it out of context....(the law in Iowa) has worked 95 percent perfect. There isn't any perfect way to handle the problem. But it's worked exceptionally well in Iowa."

In another erroneous statement, "TOTAL" claimed that "Liquor-by-the-drink sales will greatly increase law enforcement problems."

Hogan said "Total" backed this statement with the erroneous report that liquor-by-the-drink Atlanta made 76.6 percent of her total arrests for alcohol-related charges during 1965 compared to 55 percent for the national average."

A check with the given source, the Task Force Report on Drunkenness of the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice, shows that the 76.6 percent figure is not for arrests on alcohol-related charges but for drunk, disorderly and vagrancy. Arrests for drunkenness were 52.5 percent, less than the national average.

The flyer put out by "Total" also states that the Mixed Beverages Law "rather than protecting the minor—gives new protection to the liquor dispenser that he has never had before." It went on to say that the licensed liquor-by-the-drink dealer is relieved from the absolute burden of determining whether his customer is a minor or not."

The source given was Chapter 211, Public Acts 1967, Section 57-156, T.C.A. Local legislators queried "don't know what this reference is," Hogan said. "They say that there is no such thing as 'Acts of 1967' because the Legislature did not meet that year." Another misstatement by "Total."

Hogan added, "They do know that Section 4-62 of the Virginia Code provides that anyone who sells alcohol to a person, knowing that person is under 21, is guilty of a misdemeanor. They do know that the new Mixed Beverages Law also makes the minor guilty if he tries to buy liquor. It seems to me that the law does not relieve the operator of the burden, but makes the law more stringent by adding the provision concerning minors."

Mackay Appointed

H. E. Wittersheim has announced the appointment of Frank I. Mackay of Virginia Beach to the position of Advertising and Sales Promotion Manager for Diesel Injection Sales and Service, Inc.

Mackay will serve in this position for the Norfolk location and in branches throughout Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina.

Before joining Diesel Injection, Mackay was a free lance business consultant from San Francisco, Calif., to Edmonton, Alberta, Canada. He was formerly associated with R. R. Allen, Inc. of Norfolk.

City Fire Inspector Fred Quist, who is also chief of the Chesapeake Beach Volunteer Fire Department, is reported making good recovery from recent surgery. Quist's physicians have requested he be visited at the present time only by members of his immediate family, however those who wish to do so may send him cards by addressing them to him at Room 202, General Hospital of Virginia Beach.

Men of the Princess Anne Plaza Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad were in Smithfield last weekend for the annual Firemen's Parade. The team captured two ribbons in competition for the best overall ambulance and the best "four man hose hook up" in fire truck competition.

Five members of the Virginia Beach police department will enter the Tidewater Police Academy next Monday for a training course until Dec. 10. Those attending are officers C. M. Jones, 1st Precinct; A. Mathisen, and L. Boyd, 2nd Precinct; A. J. Guertin and A. T. Freeman, 3rd Precinct.

Three men have taken up duties this past week as new members of the Virginia Beach police department. Warfield M. Wood is attached to the 1st Precinct, while John E. Taylor and Terry L. Crigger are on duty assignments at the 2nd Precinct.

Men of the Knotts Island Fire Department are in the midst of arrangements for their Seventh Annual Variety Show. The Nov. 2 event, which will be staged at the Knotts Island School, will feature a number of attractions, and be highlighted by the choosing and crowning of Miss Knotts Island. Arrangements for the show are under direction of Fred L. Waterfield.

Wainwright Joins Company

Wainwright Realty Company has added a member to its staff, Robert M. Wainwright Jr., who has joined the firm as a real estate salesman.

Wainwright, a graduate of Randolph-Macon College, is a resident of Norfolk. He is married to the former Diana Nash and they have two sons.

Another member of the firm of Wainwright Realty Company, Peter deWitt, has been designated as a graduate of the Realtors Institute. The Realtors Institute is sponsored by the Virginia Association of Realtors. While attending the Institute, deWitt was vice president of the student body.

Gov. Curtis To Speak

One of the nation's youngest governors, 37 year-old Kenneth M. Curtis of Maine, will be the key speaker Oct. 17 at a reception of the Tidewater Area Business Executives for Humphrey-Muskie.

Gov. Curtis accepted the invitation to speak at the request of U. S. Senator Walter F. Mondale, Minnesota Democrat, who is unable to make the trip because of changes in the national Democratic campaign schedule.

The gathering at 6 p.m. Thursday at Lake Wright, is being coordinated by two Tidewater insurance executives, John Williams and S. R. DeShields, and Dr. Leland Peterson of Old Dominion College and Owen B. Pickett of Virginia Beach. They are working in conjunction with R. L. (Dick) Mayo, co-chairman of the Norfolk campaign for the Humphrey-Muskie Ticket.

Dan Klein Attends Meet

Dan Klein of Bosworth Road, a representative of Connecticut General Life Insurance Company, is attending a special meeting this week at the company's home office in Hartford, Connecticut.

Klein is associated with the company's Norfolk branch office.

Time For a Close Look

No one could possibly believe more strongly in the future of Virginia Beach than we do. No one could support that orderly development more. But we are facing a serious problem if we continue to ignore what too rapid growth can do.

We have just been rocked with an $18 million bond issue less than a year ago for schools and other service improvements. This raised our taxes. Now we soon must be faced with another school bond issue because the schools will soon again lag behind the development and construction of homes and apartments in the city.

The City Planning Commission and the City Council have been continuing to approve new developments at a breathless pace. Some have included the sale of school property to the city. But obviously money for those sites and for the schools themselves must come from somewhere. Bond issues and tax money are the only answers.

Finally when excellent cooperation between school, city and planning officials has caused a serious look at the problem, the light has dawned. There is trouble ahead.

The problem is not unique. Northern Virginia has faced it for years and has partly solved it by requiring dedication of school sites at least. This may be part of an answer here. Besides our taxes are still relatively low, which adds to the rush of builders to come here.

We do not want to see the brakes put on completely. We merely want to see them applied gently while a full study of the problem is made and solutions drawn. We believe those solutions can be found if everyone interested in the future of Virginia Beach helps.

No More Conflict

Now, at last, maybe we're getting somewhere. No matter if the chairman of the special conflict of interest study committee feels there is no need to rush to settle the matter. He doesn't live in Virginia Beach. In any event, he and the commission have set out to draft new conflict of interest legislation to present to a special session of the Virginia General Assembly next year.

It took all the urging possible from a number of quarters, but now the wheels of progress are finally turning on the matter. Regardless of what type of law is now drawn, anything is better than an ambiguous 100-year old law that was drawn to handle special problems of the times.

Now maybe this mess can get cleared up at last and the finger of suspicion can be placed back in its holster both in Virginia Beach and elsewhere when a new law is written and passed by our state lawmakers.

Support the Bond Issue

The $81 million bond issue before the voters of Virginia on Nov. 5 must pass if the state is to keep up with the needs of higher education of the present and future and if the state is to rise from the bottom of the list in help for the mentally ill.

Those who would not vote in favor because of the departure from tradition or because they are afraid of a "reckless spending program" are deluding themselves and simply do not understand the problem.

We must have those colleges for the children who are already in our secondary schools and who in a few years will be faced with a lack of facilities without this bond issue.

We must finally meet the needs of the mentally retarded and the needs of mental hospitals in Virginia. If we do not, we face additional problems in the future.

The time has come for action. Instead of waiting until tax money is available. This bond issue is possible through a safeguard written into the Virginia Constitution years ago, and represents no dramatic change, except that we must now meet urgent needs.

A vote against the bond issue is a vote against progress and a vote for a return to the horse-and-buggy days in Virginia. A vote for the bond issue will help put Virginia back into the competitive higher education field and will help raise the state from the very depths where mental institutions are concerned.

There is just no valid argument against the issue. It must pass.

The UCF Campaign

The old, the young, the infirm and the needy all benefit from funds collected and distributed by the United Communities Fund. One never knows when tragedy or need will strike and he will need the services of UCF. But if and when it comes he is assured that UCF agencies will be there to help.

This is only because we are all asked once a year to give generously from the heart to this worthy cause. The 1968 UCF campaign begins Monday, and no doubt we will all be contacted within a few days and asked for our contribution. Do not look upon this contribution as merely a necessity. Look upon it as a way to help those who need help and as a way to put money aside in case we ourselves ever need that help. Over the years UCF has done marvelous things. It continues to do so.

Now more than ever before in these troubled times...our gifts do work many wonders. Remember that when you are asked to give.

in the coming election, every time you turned on your radio you heard, "Go out and register to vote."

Some of the prospective voters did just this only to be told they could not register to vote and that they would have to vote by absentee ballot from their home state. We are speaking of military men living in the City of Virginia Beach, Va., for as long as five years.

Upon leaving one assistant registrar in the area and stopping by one of the party headquarters, we were advised to go to another registrar to register with no question and not even the mention of a vote by absentee ballot.

Other military men may not pursue this right and say what is the use. Also military men don't have to register; they may also vote on their military Identification Card (I.D.).

Please print this on behalf of all the military men in the City of Virginia Beach and all of Tidewater.

Sincerely,
Mrs. James W. Adams

"Can't you be satisfied if I just tell you I had a fabulous time in New York?" he wanted to know.
"No," she said. "I'm really interested. I want to know what you did with your one night on the town in New York."
"All right, I'll tell you all," he said. "The other fellows and I went to three topless joints. We went to a high-class restaurant and had a seven-course dinner. Then we topped off the evening with a few drinks at the Playboy Club."

Nothing

But

The Truth

"Yes," she said. "Now what did you do?"
"I'll tell you, but I guarantee it might sound as far-fetched as the other stuff I tried to tell you."

"Try me," she said.
"We took a ferry ride to Manhattan from Governor's Island," he said. "Then we took a 30-minute subway ride to Times Square and walked up Broadway to 50th Street. Do you believe me so far?"

"Go on," she said.
"I sat in a phone booth at the Taft Hotel for an hour talking to my uncle and our cousins," he went on.

"That's getting a little harder to believe," she said.
"Stick around," he said. "Then we went to a drug store and got a cup of coffee. Next we walked back down Broadway very leisurely stopping at all the little souvenir shops and bookstores and the shops just to look around and buy those little trinkets I brought home for the kids."

"That wouldn't take two minutes," she said. "What are you trying to hide?"

"I warned you," he pointed out. "Finally about 11 o'clock we stopped for a hot dog and coke at a little joint where you stand up to eat, then walked around a little more before taking the subway back to the Battery and the ferry ride back to Governor's Island."

"And you expect me to believe that that's all of it?" she asked.
"Well, sure," he said. "You asked me for the truth. What else did you think a group of newsmen would do when the Coast Guard takes them to New York to see the Governor's Island facilities?"

"Do I have to answer that?" she wanted to know.
"No, I suppose not," he said. "I do have a vivid imagination."

"So I can tell by that wild story you've just told me," she said.
"Come on now. You said you wanted the truth and I told you," he said. "Aren't you satisfied?"

"Of course I am," she said. "Now tell me what you did while you were in New York."

Case Summation Oct. 4 to 10, 1968

The court had hearings on 57 juvenile petitions which concerned persons 17 years of age or under accused of violating state laws or city ordinances. These petitions included 20 cases involving felonies and resulted in nine of the cases being continued to a future date; eight of the cases resulted in terms of probation; two of the cases were continued generally, and one of the cases was tabled.

Other cases which the court settled involved 20 on alleged traffic law violations and 14 on family domestic problems. There were 9 cases of parental non-support during the above calendar dates.

Bureaucratic Fund Misuse

The following editorial was written by Frank A. Howard, Engineer-Director of the Virginia Road Builders Association, Richmond, Va. It appeared in the recent issue of the association's magazine, VIRGINIA ROAD BUILDER, and comes at a time when federal highway funds have been frozen, thus holding up a number of important projects in Virginia. Among those being held up is the four-laning of the final link of US Route 60, Shore Drive, from Fort Story to Atlantic Ave., scheduled to be built shortly.

Once a year, through the celebration of National Highway Week, we try to give the motoring taxpayers—the highway users—and the general public—a summary of road progress and achievement.

This should be a time to look inward as well as outward. We are making progress administratively, as well as technically? We don't think we are. Too many kooks are spoiling the broth!

We've been working under the shadow of the heavy hand of Federal bureaucratic misuse of the Highway Trust Fund for several years now. It's mighty frustrating. It's also mighty short-sighted of our Federal Government. We just can't keep the highway program on schedule unless the politicians keep their meddling fingers out of the Trust Fund pot.

We need more highways and we need more money to build them. We need legislation to prevent the administrative arm from circumventing the intent of Congress. We need legislation to permit the industry to cut through the ever-burgeoning morass of red tape that is wasting the highway users' money and slowing down the road program. We need laws that let us get things done! Not laws that hamper progress!

We know we face problems. Who doesn't? Most states are having a hard time trying to finance their road programs. No state has enough revenue to build the highway system it needs and pay for. The needs of the traveling public are increasing at a much more rapid rate than tax revenues. Bureaucratic shilly-shalling with the Highway Trust Fund isn't helping any.

Highway planners and engineers have never kept pace with motor vehicle development since its inception. We were even behind in the horse and buggy days. We're getting further behind day by day. Legislatures have always been about ten years behind the times in passing the necessary revenue legislation to even keep abreast of increasing traffic needs. Wild eyed socialistic planners sit up nights figuring ways of raiding highway funds to use for other purposes.

Sovereign states must become more self-sufficient in their highway financing if we're ever going to get the roads the highway user is demanding and is willing to pay for. It's high time the state legislators accept the responsibility for the needed roads within their borders and secure the necessary revenue to build them. The highway user is willing to pay for better roads if the legislators will just give him a chance.

If they don't, and the Federal Government keeps flinching with the trust fund, the old law of supply and demand will come into force and we will see more toll roads built in the next 10 years than ever before. People just will not accept obsolete highways when they can get modern ones—even with tolls. Much as people hate to pay tolls, the success of existing toll roads prove the users' willingness to pay for better roads. If the legislators won't give the user a chance, the toll road authorities will.

HERE COMES OLGA!

Friday night was another busy night, I started the evening with the dance held at the International Dance Studios at Pembroke Mall. If you are wondering why I covered this dance, well it's first of all that I am now taking ball-room dancing at this studio trying to get rid of two left feet.

Jimmie Hudgins, who has lived at Virginia Beach for many years and who started teaching with a very prominent dancing school decided he would open his own.

I was surprised to find so many people at this party. All of them are his students. I watched these people dance and it was amazing to see how well these people of all ages dance. It is unbelievable to see the ones who had never danced before.

These parties are given so that all his students can get together socially. This also gives a chance to see how well each one can do after instruction.

The ball room was dimly lit by very low overhead lights and candles on each table. Some of those attending were: Mrs. Della C. Epstein, Mrs. Shirley Armstrong, Lewis Hardin, Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Etherington, Miss Jane Pepper, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Hudgins, Phillip Mertz, Mrs. Harriet Jacobson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Costa, John Lewis, Louis Hardin, Mrs. Johnnie Stephenson, Miss Teresa Salver, Miss Barbara Spruill, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Edwards, Mrs. Armstrong, and Miss Ann Dixon. Jimmie and his instructors would circle around and dance with each and everyone of the students.

My next party was a working one-the Neptune Ball given by the Cavalier Junior Woman's Club at the Bow Creek Country Club. This dance was the third annual charity dance for the club.

The Neptune's colors of blue and gold were carried out so beautifully in their decorations. Mrs. Frank A. Martin, Ball chairman, and her committee had made some very attractive blue velvet candles which were placed on the tables. Also on the tables were the miniature footballs which were gilded in fall leaves, sequins and gold braid, which made the ball room so very attractive. You could easily see this was a football dance and of course, if you are familiar at all with the Neptunes, then you would know why the colors were used.

Paul Creech and his band were enclosed by a huge gold post which was painted with blue glitter and adorned with gold leaves and megaphones. This dance was well attended not only by the Neptune team but their wives and the members of the Cavalier Junior Woman's Club and their husbands. Of course as I have commented this fall that the women have completely returned to the long formal. There were so many attractive formal that I really could not pick out one that was anyone outstanding than the others.

This team of the Neptunes has some really big men as well as some very handsome ones. I was surprised that George Wooten who plays split end is not a huge man. Some of these men you would know are football players if you saw them on the street by their build, but George was just an average-size man.

The football players attending with their wives were: Mr. and Mrs. Don Bierowicz, Mr. and Mrs. George Wooten, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Ferricks, Paul Duda and Miss Ann Romeo and Mr. and Mrs. Don Floyd. I am sure there were others but try and find who you want in a crowded and dimly lit room. So men of the Neptunes, if left your name out then fuss with me, I can only say I am sorry.

Others attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Scott Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Ush of Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Morgan, Mrs. and Mrs. Howell Cohen, Mrs. Nancy Wicks, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCall, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Hutchinson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Harper, Mr. and Mrs. Mickey Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ingle, Mr. and Mrs. Bob DeFord, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Wall, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Edridge, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Feller, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Wilber, Dr. and Mrs. J. Henry McCoy, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Wicks, Mrs. and Mrs. John McCall, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Bates, Mr. and Mrs. James Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Houchens, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Pittman, Mr. and Mrs. George Sims, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Wilber.

The proceeds from this dance will be used for the benefit of the club's Community Improvement Project.

I would like to thank Mrs. Howell Cohen and Mrs. W. B. Jones in helping me to find the names of the people as well as to which tables were occupied by the Neptune team.

Congratulations to Mrs. Frank Martin, chairman of the ball on a job well done.

Sorority Established At College

The National Executive Board of Nu Tau Sigma in New York City announced today that Princess Anne Business College, Virginia Beach Blvd., has been approved for charter of a local chapter.

Nu Tau Sigma is a sorority of national scope whose members are students of business education enrolled in the Nancy Taylor Finishing Course.

M. Werth, director of Princess Anne Business College announced that Mrs. Barbara Lewis has been named as sorority advisor for the local chapter. Mrs. Lewis, who has been associated with Princess Anne Business College and Norfolk College for 7 years, will direct and coordinate the activities of the sorority.

Cape Henry Meeting Features Classes, Contributions, Etc.

"Christmas in the Country," crafts classes, contributions and a program on health were the highlights of the Oct. 10 meeting of the Cape Henry Woman's Club at the Americana.

Mrs. R. L. Counselman, Ways and Means chairman, gave a report on the club's upcoming "Christmas in the Country" open house which is scheduled for Dec. 4 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. This event will include a tour of the holiday-decorated homes of Cdr. and Mrs. George W. Webber and Mrs. Elizabeth G. Powell on Oak Lynn Path in Little Haven and a visit to "Mrs. Santa's Kitchen" for gifts and goodies.

Crafts division chairman, Mrs. George Webber, received an excellent response from members who expressed interest in upcoming crafts classes. Included in the classes are: one on holiday arrangements ("Holiday Capers"), taught by Mrs. H. O. Freeman; crewel embroidery and egg decoration ("Sue in Stitches and Eggs"), taught by Mrs. E. E. Cox; "Knit one, Purl Two with Mary", a class taught by Mrs. R. L. Counselman; chair painting ("Caning with Rose") taught by Mrs. Webber; an art class taught by Mrs. K. L. Seay; and a choral group under the leadership of Mrs. R. J. Steinhilber.

The club voted to contribute $100 to the Princess Anne-Virginia Beach Junior Woman's Club for a special kindergarten for retarded children and $100 to the American Red Cross to fill ditty bags for servicemen.

It was announced that several club members will attend the Tidewater District Fall meeting in Williamsburg today. They are Mrs. C. E. Upton Jr., president; Mrs. Earl W. Leonard, first vice president; Mrs. F. Gilbert Keene, district treasurer; and Mrs. Arthur B. James.

The club will be hostess club for the Spring District Meeting at the Cavalier Hotel on March 11; Mrs. Philip L. Russo was appointed general chairman.

Club members were entertained by guest soloist Kenneth Bell, choir director of First Presbyterian Church. He was accompanied by Mrs. R. J. Steinhilber at the piano.

Health Chairman, Mrs. C. H.

Cook-Outs Can Become Cook-Ins

You don't need special powers to turn cook-outs into cook-ins and extend the summer barbecuing season into a year-round affair. But it does help to have a little black magic - in the form of handy charcoal briquets - and some saucery sorcery. The Barbecue Briquet Institute offers these tips and recipes to help you charm hungry family and friends with indoor charcoal cooking.

Barbecuing's basic bag of tricks starts out with an outdoor-type grill, barbecue kettle or hibachi. Built-in kitchen grills, permanent and prefabricated fireplaces are also ideal places for conjuring up a tasty cook-in. A number of small inexpensive grills on the market fit easily into any fireplace. You can enhance the magic of a regular fireplace, if you have one, with an inexpensive swing-out rack which attaches to the grate.

Magic concoctions may have been taken for granted in days of yore - but for you, they may mean trouble. Charcoal, like any fuel, gives off gases when burning, so use your grill only in the fireplace or in a cooking area that is vented or hooded. If you use a portable grill on an enclosed porch or in a garage, for example, be sure to leave the doors open while cooking.

Up in a puff of smoke, it may be fine for witches and the like, but not for you. So unless you really lead a charmed life, heed these safety tips. If you light the briquets with lighter fluid, don't oversize them or add fluid after the coals have ignited. When you need extra coals, place them around the edge of the fire until they ignite. To lessen the chance of flame-ups, when broiling, spread the live coals one inch apart in a single layer and tip the grill.

SHORT RIBS OF BEEF IN RUM MARINADE

Buy beef short ribs, cut into pieces about 2 inches square. Allow about 1 pound per serving. Prepare Rum Marinade. Lay short ribs in marinade, cover and marinate 4 hours in the refrigerator, turning occasionally. Just before barbecuing, drain ribs on paper towels. Reserve the remaining marinade for basting. Arrange hot briquets for grill barbecuing. Place ribs on grill about 5 inches from briquets. Barbecue over medium heat, turning frequently until done, about 1 to 1 1/2 hours.

RUM MARINADE

1/2 c. rum
1/2 c. soy sauce
1/4 c. canned pineapple juice
1-2 tbl. lemon juice
1 tsp. dry mustard
1 tbl. molasses
2 tsp. ginger
1 clove garlic, crushed
1/2 tsp. pepper

Combine all ingredients in glass or enamel container, stir to mix well. Or put marinade in pint-size, screw-top jar, cover and shake. The marinade can be stored in the refrigerator until used.

HERBED CHICKEN BREASTS OR LEGS

3 chicken breasts and 3 chicken legs (allow 1 each per serving).
1/4 c. butter or margarine, softened

1/4 c. minced parsley
2 tbl. minced onion
1/4 tsp. thyme
Sour cream if desired.

Put butter into a small bowl. Add parsley, onion and thyme; mix well and set aside. Wash chicken breasts or legs and pat dry with paper towels. Use a small, sharp knife to make pockets in the thickest parts. (Cut the slits parallel to the skin and large enough to hold 1 or 2 teaspoons of butter mixture.) Fill each pocket with a spoonful of butter mixture and close with wooden picks. Arrange hot briquets for grill barbecuing. Place stuffed breasts or legs, skin-side down on grill close to the briquets. Barbecue chicken until done, or about 15 minutes; turn once. If desired, brush with some sour cream during the last few minutes of grilling.

HONEY GLAZED LOIN LAMB CHOPS

Buy loin lamb chops cut about 3/4-inch thick. Allow one or one and a half chops per serving. Sprinkle lamb with salt and pepper. Combine 1/2 cup honey, 3 tablespoons lemon juice with 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg; blend. Brush lamb with half of honey mixture. Broil lamb 3 to 4 inches from glowing briquets 5 to 7 minutes. Turn and brush with remaining honey mixture. Broil 5 to 7 minutes, or until desired degree of doneness.

Under the watchful eye of a parent, teens can learn the art of firebuilding safely with barbecue briquets and the art of broiling a popular cut of lamb such as these chops shown sizzling on a hibachi placed in a fireplace or other well ventilated area. This is something young people can enjoy indoors or outdoors all through life.

THE WOMEN

VIRGINIA BEACH SUN

Thursday, October 17, 1968

Mrs. John Perry, who was chairman of the outing, stands with her husband behind Mr. and Mrs. Dale Bimson, Mrs. Keith S. Bonney and Mr. Bonney.

Juniors Visit New Playhouse

Members of the Princess Anne-Virginia Beach Junior Woman's Club and their husbands and friends celebrated one last informal get together Sunday night before the Juniors concentrate their efforts on their annual Calendar Capers on Nov. 15 and 16.

The celebration took the form of a theatre party at the new Lake Wright Playhouse, and nearly 40 couples attended. Mrs. John Perry was chairman of the outing.

Attending were Mr. and Mrs. Philip Traverser (she is club president), Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Holland, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Gunter, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Nock, Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Smith, Mr. and Mrs. David Foxwell, Mr. and Mrs. John Menden, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Barte, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Carr, Mr. and Mrs. Sy Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Lyons, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Korn, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Shiflet, Mr. and Mrs. David Foster and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Winfree.

Others included Mr. and Mrs. Dale Bimson, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Bonney, Mr. and Mrs. John Cherry, Mr. and Mrs. Dan

DeHart, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Malbon, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McCloud, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Holladay, Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Barrell, Mr. and Mrs. John Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weigand, Mr. and Mrs. William Watson, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. McKeeler,

Mr. and Mrs. Sonny Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Mountie, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Wiley, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Browder, Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Mike Katsas, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Davis, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Levister and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lewis, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Bierowicz shared a table with Miss Ann Romeo and Paul Duda at the Cavalier Junior Woman's Club Neptune Ball last Friday night at Bow Creek Country Club.

Artists Add to Antique Showsale

Sixteen professional artists have shared their talents with the 10th Annual Antiques Showsale by giving pictures to be displayed and sold in the foyer of the Civic Center during the show.

In addition, members of the Princess Anne Woman's Club of Virginia Beach who have been taking art lessons for a year will also contribute some of their work. These ladies have just begun the second year of a two-year course in art taught by one of their fellow club members, Mrs. P. F. Woolard, professionally known as Anne Woolard.

The classes, after a summer vacation, meet weekly at Mrs. Woolard's workshop. "Not my studio," Mrs. Woolard was quick to point out. "Studios are to stand around and look pretty in. A workshop is where they really work and get dirty." Among those taking the course are Mrs. Eugene R. Godfrey, Mrs. J. Douglas Wilson, Mrs. Pern Hartman, Mrs. John R. Privette, Mrs. Mary Van de Wiele and Mrs. Tom Follary.

Among the artists who have contributed their works are the three Ives sisters, Miss Beattie Ives, Mrs. Bertha Tillet, and their sister-in-law, Mrs. Alice Ives, all of whose paintings indicate the artists favor the simple life at least for their pictures.

One artist offered a small painting which is a design he would like to be used as a pattern for material for a lady's dress. He calls this work "Hal-lucination." Cat lovers should be delighted with James Ferrell's "Cat" in start black and white, and many would like to move into Wayne Fletcher's "House" or taste Cleo Camp's "Bread." One very large painting appears to be an excellent portrayal of Dismal Swamp, but according to the artist the scene is a man-made lake in Arizona.

Miss Suzi Dean, well-known for her animal pastels and subjects of interests to children (young and old), will spend much time during the show with the art display in the foyer. She will explain the type of work and various media used. Miss Dean's art work graces the library and the General Hospital of Virginia Beach.

All art work will be offered for sale at prices suggested by the contributing artists. Dates of the Antique Showsale are Oct. 24-27 at the Civic Center. Hours are 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday and from 1 to 7 p.m. Sunday.

Other artists contributing paintings include Mrs. Barbara

Spector of Norfolk, Mrs. George Goldberg of Norfolk, Mrs. C. E. Camp of Norfolk, Miss Mary Kidd of Norfolk, L. Stayhorn of Virginia Beach, Thomas C. Wasley of Portsmouth, Mrs. Mary Chick of Norfolk, Mrs. Mildred Shelton of Norfolk, and a sculpture by Mrs. Helen Freeman.

Tickets ($1) are available from club members and at the door. All proceeds will go to the Atlantic Mental Hygiene Center to be built in Virginia Beach and to the Hospital House for servicemen.

Miss Suzi Dean watches as Mrs. Godfrey and Mrs. Woolard discuss a painting. On the chair are some of the donated paintings.

Church Plans Double-Header

Scott Memorial United Methodist Church at 409 First Colonial Rd. has scheduled a double-header—a two day bazaar.

The dates are Nov. 22 and Nov. 23, and the women planning the affair are promising more of the excellent dinners which have made the bazaar so popular the past two years. The bazaar is the joint effort of the Woman's Society of Christian Service and the Methodist Men's Club of the church. Hours will be 4 to 9 p.m. Nov. 22 and 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Nov. 23. Mrs. Milton Gerrell and Mrs. Glenn Gurganus are general chairmen.

Proceeds from the bazaar will go toward the installation of a divided chancel and restroom facilities and enlargement of the kitchen.

Featured in this year's bazaar will be a Fantasyland, Country Store, Bake Shop, Christmas Shop, Williamsburg Shop, Not New Shop and Snack Shop. In addition the Methodist Youth Fellowship, under the leadership of Lt. and Mrs. William E. Gilbert and James Bevan, will have a corner of allowance-budget priced gifts for children to buy for their parents—also keep the kids out of mischief while their parents shop.

Fantasyland, manned by Mrs. Patrick Cornelius and Mrs. William Gilbert, will feature dolls of all kinds and sizes complete with fashion wardrobes. There will also be odds of the very tiny dolls now so much in vogue with the younger generation, plus wardrobes for dolls needing a new fall outfit. Stuffed and soft toys will be in great evidence.

The Gift Shop, with Mrs. William Gornito, assisted by Mrs. Herman White, Mrs. Rosa Davis and Mrs. Ralph Mooney, will provide gift, box and wrappings for the most particular gift hunter, be it for Christmas, shower or what-have-you.

Squire Howard Ives will watch the cash register in the Country Store with the help of Ira Dorris, Robert Pearsall, Bob Edwards, Mrs. Stuart Mallory and George Schimmel. From lace for petti-pants to sorghum molasses for pancakes, the Country Store will have it—including water-ground corn meal. There will be Lynnhaven (See 'Church', p. 8)

Officers and their wives of the USS Rushmore enjoying themselves at the Annual Charities Ball at Little Creek Amphibious Base.

Fund-Raising Combines with Fun

The annual Charities Ball, sponsored by the Amphibious Force-Atlantic Officers' Wives' Club Executive Board was held Oct. 12 in Rockwell Hall at Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base.

It was an unforgettable occasion, combining fund raising with just plain fun. Sales made from drinks, pictures, and corsages will be used to support various charities.

There was a certain "Continental" atmosphere surrounding Rockwell Hall that evening, enhanced by the colorful flags and maps which decorated the building and tables. Adding to this atmosphere was the Grand March, which was in honor of Vice Adm. and Mrs. Luther C. Heinz, Rear Adm. and Mrs. Raymond E. Peet, Rear Adm. and Mrs. David F. Welch, Rear Adm. and Mrs. William R. McKinney and Col. and Mrs. William H. Souder.

The evening was a gracious one, where handsome men in dress uniforms and beautiful ladies in formal gowns socialized and danced to music supplied by the Philband Band.

District Federation To Have Busy Year

Mrs. Charles T. Benjamin, president of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs, Inc., thanked members of the Tidewater District Tuesday at the Lafayette Yacht Club for giving her the opportunity to attend the national convention in Dallas next year and brag on Virginia.

"Texas may be the biggest state," she said, "but we're doing the mostest." The convention will be May 8-14.

The Tidewater District will host the state federation convention next year. It will be held May 25-28 at the Golden Triangle in Norfolk. Mrs. John Y. Wright of Norfolk has been nominated for the office of state president.

The next fashion show sponsored by the Tidewater Federation and Miller & Rhoads will be in the spring of 1970. Two previous shows have been in the fall. It was reported that a profit of $825.56 was made on this fall's show. The District Federation has a balance of $2310.72 in its treasury.

It was reported that 35 campers from Tidewater attended Nature Camp which is supported by the state federation and its members.

Tidewater District received two first place awards from the state Tuesday. One was for sending the most "Seeds for Peace" in the state and the other was for selling the most subscriptions to Horticulture Magazine.

Mrs. David Stormond Sr., flower show chairman, encouraged clubs to place small or "capsule" flower shows in order to give student judges a chance to judge. She said a minimum of five classes are needed.

The women were told that the planting of lilies is still a project throughout the state. Tidewater club members planted 1,800 last year.

Mrs. Taylor W. Gray, past president of Thoroughgood Garden Club, was presented with a life membership in the Virginia Federation by her club.

Three Virginia Beach Clubs received charters as members of the Tidewater Federation and three more clubs were accepted as members. Those receiving charters were Lake Smith, Lake Smith Terrace and Lakeville Estates. New members are Kings Grant, May Farm and Kingston.

Guests at the meeting included Fred Huethe, George Baker, curator of Norfolk Botanical gardens who was presented an honorary membership in the federation, and Bob Matthews.

Mrs. G. W. Campbell, a life member of the Virginia Federation, presented a program on "Folk Music from the Appalachians."

Bazaar Adds Bonzai

The Virginia Beach Methodist Church is sponsoring their annual bazaar Nov. 9 from 10:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. at the church, 207 18th St.

According to Mrs. L. C. Brennan, chairman for the bazaar, there are several interesting features planned for the event. Some of the booths that will display goods are: the Homemade Baked Goods Booth; the Gift Booth (including items for sale such as aprons, towels, culotte pajamas, Christmas tree skirts and stockings); a Kitchen Booth (containing such items as aprons and potholders); and a Country Store with home-canned and preserved goods.

The Bazaar will have a White Elephant Sale. They will also be selling dolls with handmade wardrobes, and Bonzai arrangements by Frank Israel.

A snack bar luncheon is scheduled for the bazaar.

ed for the bazaar as well as a roast beef dinner, which will be served in the evening from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

Church Conference To Be Oct. 24

The 56th Annual District Conference of Elizabeth River District, Group II, Women of the Church of Norfolk Presbytery will meet Oct. 24 at Squires Memorial Presbyterian Church at Ingleside Road in Norfolk. Registration begins at 9:30 a.m.

The Rev. Fletcher Hutcheson, pastor of Bayside Presbyterian Church, will speak on "Worship and Work of the Congregation."

Women are asked to bring a sandwich for lunch. Drinks and dessert will be furnished. There will be a nursery, and mothers are asked to provide sandwiches for their children.

By Carolyn McAllen

Where's the Fairy Godmother?

Ever try to convince a little girl she can't be Cinderella? I'm just not the fairy godmother type, I'm afraid.

Seems her school is having a book fair. First there was a poster contest. The only day it's rained all month was the day she had to carry her poster back to school. I told myself I could survive anything once—including a hysterical seven-year-old.

But the next thing was an announcement (on Friday before they were due Monday) that there would be a costume contest. All the children were to come to school dressed as their favorite book character.

Now in the first place, my imagination along that line is nil. In the second place, my sewing ability leaves something to be desired also—especially at the last minute when I've got a weekend jam-packed with things that have to be done.

Anyhow, she wanted to go as Cinderella ready for the ball, notwithstanding the fact that we had no material or pattern in the house.

So, straining my ingenuity to the breaking point (with a little arm twisting on the side) I finally convinced her that she'd have a more original costume if she went as Cinderella before the ball. We always have rags around the house. She agreed, although not as enthusiastically as I had hoped.

First I made the basic dress, complete with patches all over it. Everything was great until she tried to put it on. She couldn't get it over her head. Then I cut the neck opening too big and had to sew it back up.

Next she had to have an apron to go with it. Her five-year-old sister then got into the act and demanded an apron too. Now there was just one problem—shoes. Not having any glass slippers handy, I started going through closets. Any other time we're knee deep in old worn out tennis shoes. But I couldn't even find one, much less a pair. Finally we settled on her school shoes with red stockings to match her apron.

She was perfectly happy until I tried to put black streaks on her face. I convinced her that if she sat in cinders, she'd have to be dirty, so off she went.

But that wasn't all. Going by the school later, I discovered that more than 300 kids had come in costume—and at least half of the girls were Cinderella, before or after.

At least she didn't want to be a character out of a Dr. Seuss book.

Pictures Don't Always Tell the Complete Story

This parking lot on Monticello Avenue in downtown Norfolk was deserted, as was the street Saturday morning.

Saturday morning was not too busy along Granby Street in the heart of downtown Norfolk.

Norfolk's Ocean View Amusement Park, another deserted spot at summer's end.

Recently the BEACON, a Virginia Beach supplement to the two Norfolk newspapers, printed more than a page of pictures showing the Borough of Virginia Beach deserted following the official end to the summer season on Labor Day.

The obviously staged pictures would lead the uninformed to believe that the entire city of Virginia Beach closes down when the children go back to school and the resort season officially ends.

In a city that sees a continuing growth of about 400 families a month and one that faces a critical school and housing shortage that must be met immediately, nothing can be further from the truth.

In the face of the large number of resort hotels and motels that now remain open all year to accommodate an ever increasing number of fall, winter and spring tourists, nothing can be further from the truth.

And in the face of an economic upsurge in the entire city during 1968 that helps to offset decreasing business opportunities in other cities of Tidewater, nothing can be further from the truth.

In a city that is working diligently every day to bring new industry and business to its confines, it is entirely possible the BEACON has done a great disservice. Anyone seeing just that picture story would have to believe that the entire city closes on Labor Day.

It is a simple task for a newspaper to show only what it wishes to show. Witness the pictures on this page of downtown Norfolk and of Ward's Corner taken on a Saturday morning. Obviously the photographer staged these pictures, but the fact remains that the traffic was not there.

And one has only to walk through downtown Norfolk to see the apparent decline of business there. The number of vacant stores along main arteries, the number of "For Rent" signs, the degeneration of several movie theatres to erotic havens, the number of questionable book stores that have opened and the general lack of a bustling climate for business are all in sharp contrast to the healthy thriving shopping areas of Virginia Beach, both in the resort borough and elsewhere.

It is also interesting to note the great number of onetime Norfolk stores that have realized this and moved to Virginia Beach, either entirely or as a branch. And Virginia Beach advertising keeps the BEACON in business. Whether the BEACON can see it or not editorially, Virginia Beach undoubtedly is "where the action is."

Could this be the "Times Square of the South?" Yes, this is Norfolk's Ward's Corner Saturday morning.

Local Pueblo Group Forms

A local branch of the "Remember the Pueblo" committee has been formed in Tidewater.

The purpose of the committee is to keep the circumstances of the USS Pueblo's crew alive in the minds of the American public. The organization began in San Diego, Calif. This is the first branch to be formed on the East Coast.

Mrs. Lillian White, head of the local committee, feels that there is a tremendous amount of interest in this cause here, particularly since the Tidewater area is the second largest Naval center in the United States.

Mrs. White says that the headquarters is open and bumper stickers will soon be available for all interested persons. Although the stickers are free, donations are being accepted to defray expenses.

The headquarters is located at 4224 Flowerfield Rd., Norfolk, telephone number 586-4232.

Retired Officers to Meet

The Hampton Roads Retired Officers Association will hold a dinner meeting at the Little Creek Officers Club Oct. 19 at 7 p.m.

All retired officers and their wives are invited to attend.

Orientation Program Presented

Several local high schools participated in the High School Orientation Program to be presented by the Virginia Association of Student Governments during the week of Oct. 13-19.

This week has been designated as "Educational Opportunity Week" by Gov. Mills E. Godwin, Jr. in support of the program, is being carried out state-wide by student representatives of 51 Virginia Colleges.

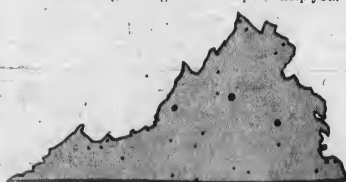

The Virginia Association of Student Governments program featured the benefits and availability of a post high school education. This program, endorsed by the State Board of Education, has been developed in response to the Association's concern that Virginia ranks third from the bottom in the South in the percentage of college-age youth who seek an education beyond high school.

George Drumwright, chairman of VSAG District II, announced that ODC students visited the following schools: Monday, Oct. 14, Kempsville High School; Tuesday, Oct. 15, Cox High School and First Colonial High School; Wednesday, Oct. 16, Kellam High School. Many of the college students presenting the programs were graduates of the high schools they visited.

In addition to brief speeches by the participating college students, a multiscene presentation covering all aspects of college life was shown. A panel discussion and question and answer period followed.

Handbooks, describing Virginia's growing number of community colleges and all other colleges in the Commonwealth, were distributed.

Chrysanthemums Date Back to Confucious

(Editor's Note: Here is another in the series on home horticulture by Wesley P. Jenkins of the horticulture department at Virginia Tech.)

Chrysanthemums, the glory of autumn and the football season, have a fascinating history. Although they were mentioned by Confucius about 500 B.C., they have been grown in the U.S. for only 170 years. This may seem like a rather long time to some of us mortals with our creaky joints, but in the plant world, two centuries is a short time indeed.

The chrysanthemum originated in China and was introduced in Japan in the fourth century A.D. It was not until 1688 that a few plants were brought by ship masters and traders around the Cape of Good Hope to Europe. The plants died and no further importations were made for a full century.

In 1789, one lonely plant survived the long voyage from China to France, and the chrysanthemum became established in Europe. The long warm summer of Marseilles was ideal for its growth. Cuttings and divisions were sold and within a few years an exhibit of a hundred plants was held in Paris. This fine flower was now well launched in the western world.

The chrysanthemum is a short-day plant which means it will not form flower buds and bloom except when exposed to the relatively short days of late summer, usually with 12 hours or less of daylight. This caused a serious problem in getting plants to bloom before frost and restricted the places where this plant could be grown outdoors.

In 1798, John Stevens of New Jersey introduced the first chrysanthemums into America. In those days gardening was a fashionable hobby of wealthy people. It was also during this period that flower shows were becoming popular, and garden clubs and horticultural societies were being organized.

Chrysanthemums first appeared in an American flower show in Boston in 1830. The popularity of the plant increased rapidly during the next 40 years, and in 1868 the Massachusetts Horticultural Society planned the first specialty chrysanthemum show. An elaborate schedule was planned, but the New England climate was terrible that year. Everything went wrong. The spring was cold and wet, the summer hot and dry, the frost came early, it snowed in October and there was no Indian summer to allow plants to recover. Only one exhibitor appeared, and the show was a complete failure. In the following years the climate was more favorable, and a succession of fine exhibits made Boston the center for chrysanthemum growers for the entire country.

And so the chrysanthemum gained in popularity and importance as a flower for home gardens and for commercial production. Many professional and amateur gardeners devoted their skill to this plant and contributed to the development of better varieties.

The many plant breeders who produced new varieties are too numerous to mention here, but a few should be named. Dr. Henry Walcott, a Boston physician, and Elmer Smith of Michigan, produced many fine varieties between 1880 and 1900. Special recognition also should go to John Thorpe of New York who introduced the use of chrysanthemums in flower arrangements and in 1890

Rose Show Opens Sat.

Roses will fill the Norfolk Botanical Gardens Administration building, Oct. 19 and 20, when the Tidewater Rose Society's 23rd Annual Rose Show will be held.

All eligible rose growers, amateur and rosarians alike are invited to enter their best specimens in the horticulture classes.

Show theme will be "Roses-Potpourri". Besides the horticulture entries the show will feature traditional and abstract designs, breakfast trays and capsule tables.

Entrants for the artistic division must register with Mrs. J. Edward Eller or Mrs. John V. Wright. Eleven classes will be open to the public and one for members only. There will be three classes for the Junior or Intermediate garden clubbers.

Entries will be received from 8 to 11 a.m. Saturday, in the administration building. The show will be open to the public Saturday from 3 to 6 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Trophies and awards will be presented Sunday at 5 p.m., and door prizes will be awarded at 4 p.m.

Tickets may be purchased at the door. Admission will be 75¢ for adults. Children under 14 will be admitted free when accompanied by a parent.

Members are taking particular note of how this year's show is being run, in preparation for the National Convention and Rose Show in 1969, when the club will be host to the American Rose Society.

founded the National Chrysanthemum Society.

A particularly important development in 1925 was the use of wild species from Korea by Alex. Cunningham of Connecticut to produce the Korean Hybrids which were hardy enough to live through cold winters. This has caused a new burst of enthusiasm for this fine flower. We now have blooms of many sizes and types and a wide variety of colors to satisfy the needs of every gardener.

VIRGINIA BEACH Garden Club News

Linkhorn Park

At the opening meeting of the Linkhorn Park Garden Club, held at the Capes Beach and Cabana Club, it was decided to accept the offer of the city to help with project Cape Myrtle, and to plant these trees in the Linkhorn triangles, under the supervision of Miss Mary Elizabeth Crump, beautification chairman.

Mrs. E. A. Hoffmeister, an associate member of the club and an active member of the Cavalier Garden Club, spoke on "Herbs" and showed slides of her own herb garden.

Another guest was Mrs. Gilmore Lee Tibbitts, who judged the exhibits of autumn leaves and flowers and the horticultural specimens.

Those winning ribbons were Mrs. J. Douglas Wilson, Mrs. Thomas Follary, Mrs. Pern Hartman, Mrs. Richard Barnes, Mrs. H. K. Hawthorne, Mrs. Jack Harvey, and Mrs. Major Pardee.

Two new members were welcomed into the club. They are Mrs. F. B. Wilhoit, a returning member, and Mrs. A. B. Midgett.

The next meeting of the club will be Nov. 1 at the Capes, when Mrs. Rolfe Williams will conduct a Christmas clinic.

May Farm

Mrs. C. W. Walkley spoke on drying flowers at the October meeting of the May Farm Garden Club which met at the home of Mrs. Russell R. Warner. Mrs. Robert J. Houser was co-hostess.

The club is planning to have a card party at 8 p.m. on Nov. 6 at the home of Mrs. J. W. Slawson. Donations will be $1, and reservations must be made by Oct. 30. There will be door prizes.

Blue ribbons in arranging were won by Mrs. John C. Brewington, Mrs. J. C. Chisholm, Mrs. C. W. McAllen and Mrs. Robert Hardesty. Horticulture blue ribbons went to Mrs. J. H. Costenbader, Mrs. Brewington, Mrs. McAllen and Mrs. B. T. Thompson (2).

Coffee Kicks Off Plans

Mrs. Clarence A. Dickerson of Baylake Pines entertained at a coffee at the Garden Center Educational Building in Norfolk on Oct. 9, in honor of chairman, vice chairman, as well as class chairmen of the artistic arrangement division of the Christmas Flower Show sponsored by the Federation of Garden Clubs of Norfolk and vicinity, Inc.

The 25th Annual Christmas Flower Show will be held Dec. 7 and 8 at the Municipal Auditorium in Norfolk. The name of the show is "Silver Bells". The show committee is headed by Mrs. Dickerson, chairman and Mrs. Harry L. Miller, vice chairman. Plans were discussed and formulated at a meeting which followed the coffee for staging of the show and for exhibiting of horticulture and arrangements. Much emphasis was placed on the need for garden club members to exhibit their horticulture as well as enter the arrangement classes.

The annual event has drawn as many as 10 thousand people from Florida to New York. Proceeds are used to maintain and operate the garden clubbers home away from home, the Garden Center Educational Building at 745 East 29th St., and to carry out the purpose of the Federation in promoting education, beautification and conservation in its member clubs in Virginia Beach, Chesapeake and Norfolk. The Federation has 10 clubs and 4000 members in Tidewater.

Adult advance tickets may be purchased from Mrs. Charles L. Todd, ticket chairman or members of garden clubs until Dec. 4 for $1. Tickets at the door for adults will be $1.25. Children's tickets will be sold at the door for 25¢.

Chairmen from Virginia Beach include Mrs. R. C. Dunaj, registration; Mrs. T. E. Fields, classification; Mrs. R. L. Payne, placement; Mrs. Troye S. Brown, registration; Mrs. C. J. Paschang, clerk; Mrs. William N. Hall, horticulture placement; Mrs. Robert L. Munn, judges; Mrs. L. A. Shinn, awards; Mrs. C. J. Paschang, demonstrations; Mrs. W. C. Hamilton, secretary; Mrs. W. C. Hamilton, program advertisements; Mrs. H. O. Freeman, program garden club sponsors; Mrs. J. A. Butler, decorating arena; Mrs. Robert L. Munn, door prizes; Mrs. C. A. Bamforth and Mrs. W. M. Newbern, decorating table ends.

Many people in Virginia Beach and the surrounding area have recently begun to notice a blackish fungus appearing on the tips and needles of their pines, especially young ones.

What they are seeing is, really, a fungus that is living on the secretions of pine leaf scale. This is a small scale insect that lives on the pine needles. The scale, itself, is white to gray in color and has a yellow spot at one end. It is about one-tenth of an inch long.

The objects you see at this time of year are the female scales under which the pest overwinters in the egg stage. The eggs hatch in May.

Control can be attained by using a dormant spray during the dormant period, or by spraying with Malathion during late May when the young scales are crawling about.

Park Glitters With Success

The Carolanne Farm Civic League and the Arrowhead Garden Club have taken a giant step in making Virginia Beach a "gem of a city," one of the bywords of this year's HANDS projects.

HANDS is the nationwide community improvement effort sponsored locally by Sears Roebuck. The local chairman for the Council of Garden Clubs of Virginia Beach and vicinity is Mrs. Arthur Gallagher, who initiated her own theme for the year, "Make Everything Glitter," or MEG.

In an impressive ceremony Saturday afternoon, Harold Whitehurst, director of parks and recreation, officially cut the ribbon across the arched gateway to open the new neighborhood park behind Arrowhead Elementary School along the Elizabeth River. Included in the 27-acre park is a picnic shelter, playground and hiking trails.

On the program with Whitehurst were Randolph Payne, president of the Carolanne Farm Civic League; Mrs. Gallagher; Mrs. William M. Austin, HANDS co-chairman of Arrowhead Garden Club; The Rev. Gary B. Thompson of Carrow Baptist Church gave the invocation.

Featured on the program were the Kempsville High School band and Cadet Troop 156, who gave a flag ceremony. The scouts also mapped and marked the trails, giving them Indian Advance tickets will be needed for the Saturday night dinner from 4 to 8 p.m., however. It will feature a choice of Smithfield ham, turkey and dressing with green beans corn pudding, rolls and coffee, for $1.75. Dessert is 20 cents extra. Children's tickets are 75 cents, and Mrs. Gerald Beck is in charge of ticket distribution. For reservations call any member of the WSCS or Scott Memorial Methodist Church at 428-3720.

It's up to mothers to see that their children have an adequate breakfast before they go dashing off to school. Cooked prunes, hot cereal, cocoa and buttered toast are about right. Cover the prunes with water, add a sliced orange and cook 10 minutes. Prepare them the day before so they'll be ready to serve.

Eileigh Higgins, Angelick McCormick and Terry Boyle with one of the signs their Cadet Troop put up in the park to mark the hiking trails.

Two years ago when the Arrowhead Garden Club was formed, the club decided to make the park their primary beautification project. The club discussed plans and proposals with Whitehurst and decided to start with the entranceway. Plans included the erection of the entranceway and landscaping of the area near it. The club entered this project in the HANDS program along with their "Yard of the Month" program and school beautification

Club Gives Gifts on Birthday

The Woman's Club of Chesapeake Beach celebrated its 28th anniversary at a luncheon on Tuesday, Oct. 8, 1968 at the Commodore Country Club.

Special guests included the club's first president, Mrs. J. H. Harrell, who is supervisor of Elementary Education in Virginia Beach. Also attending were Mrs. D.J. Parkerson, a past president and presently the principal of Bayside Elementary School, and Mrs. H.W. Fulford, immediate past president.

They presented a program, entitled Thumb Nail Sketch, which was given in three parts and covered the history of the Chesapeake Beach Woman's Club from the time of its inception in 1940 to the year 1968.

The highlight of the birthday celebration was the giving of gifts. Mrs. M.Q. Roper, president of the club, presented two separate checks to Mrs. Carolyn Strickland, Mrs. Strickland heads the Tidewater Association for Retarded Children and is endeavoring to organize a full time school program for retarded children over the age of seven. Due to lack of funds, the school is presently operating in Norfolk. The program is designed to keep these un-

In keeping with this plan, the Arrowhead Garden Club solicited funds in this manner in addition to holding lake sales, rummage sales and bazaars. fortunate children out of institutions by helping them to adjust to the home environment and the world around them.

The checks included one for $1000 to be used for the full-time program, and another for $500 which will aid in providing transportation for all mentally retarded children in Tidewater.

It is the aim of the Chesapeake Beach Woman's Club to create new interest among other women's clubs and service organizations to raise the additional $6000 needed to put the school on a full-time schedule.

A third check for $400 was presented to Mrs. S.W. Beda, head librarian for the Bayside Library, for the purchase of additional reference books. The reference room, which will house the new books, was made possible through a $15,000 donation by the Chesapeake Beach Woman's Club when plans were completed for the new library two years ago.

VIRGINIA:

In the Circuit Court of the City of Virginia Beach, on the 23rd day of August, 1968, Regarding: Petition for a referendum under the 1950 Code of Virginia, as amended, Section 4-98.12

ORDER

This day came more than 4,000 qualified voters of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, by counsel, and filed their petition, pursuant to the Virginia Code of 1950, as amended, Section 4-98.12, requesting that this Court order that a referendum be held on the question "May mixed alcoholic beverages be sold in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, by restaurants licensed under Chapter 1.1 of Title 4 of the Code of Virginia?"; and this cause was heard upon said petition and also upon a certificate of the Clerk of this Court, certifying that 23,442 votes were cast by qualified voters of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, in the last preceding presidential election, which was held November 3, 1964, and were counted, and that 15% of said number is 3,517, and upon a certificate of the General Registrar of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, certifying that the petitions filed with this Court contain the signatures of at least 4,000 duly qualified voters of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia; and was argued by counsel.

It appearing to the Court that said petition conforms to the law in such cases made and provided and that said petition contains the signatures of duly qualified voters of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, equal in number to at least 15% of the number of votes cast by qualified voters of said City and counted for presidential electors in the last preceding presidential election in said City, do hereby ADJUDGE, ORDER and DECREE that a referendum be held on the question as set forth in said petition, to-wit: "May mixed alcoholic beverages be sold in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, by restaurants licensed under Chapter 1.1 of Title 4 of the Code of Virginia?"; and the Court doth further ADJUDGE, ORDER and DECREE that the regular election officials of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, on the 5th day of November, 1968, shall open the polls and take the sense of the qualified voters of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, on the question herein provided.

The Court doth further ADJUDGE, ORDER and DECREE that the Clerk of this Court shall cause a notice of said election to be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, once a week for the three weeks next preceding the election to be held on November 5, 1968.

The Court doth further ADJUDGE, ORDER and DECREE that the regular election officials of the said City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, upon the date designated herein, shall open the polls at the various voting places in said City and conduct said election in such manner as is provided by law in other elections insofar as the same is applicable, and that said election shall be by ballot and that said ballot shall be prepared by the Electoral Board of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, in accordance with the provisions of Section 4-98.12 of the 1950 Code of Virginia, as amended.

The Clerk of this Court is hereby directed to send a certified copy of this Order to the Electoral Board of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia.

VIRGINIA:
In the Clerk's Office of the Circuit Court of the City of Virginia Beach on the 7th day of October, 1968
In the Matter of the Estate of Imogen Stuart Ficklen, Deceased

ORDER OF PUBLICATION
The object of the above styled suit is to have the Court determine and adjudge whether Sloan-Kettering Institute for Cancer Research or Cornell University or anyone who claims the bequest contained in paragraph Four of the Will of Imogen Stuart Ficklen is capable of complying with the terms of said bequest, and to obtain the advice and guidance of the Court in the administration and distribution of the estate of Imogen Stuart Ficklen.

And it appearing by affidavit that the defendant, Cornell University, is not a resident of the State of Virginia, its last known post office address being Ithaca, New York, and that there are or may be persons interested in the subject matter of the said suit whose names and addresses are unknown and who are made parties defendant by the general description of "parties unknown", it is, therefore,

ADJUDGED, ORDERED and DECREED that the said non-resident defendant, Cornell University, and the said persons who are made parties defendant by the general description of "parties unknown" do appear within ten (10) days after the due publication of this order and do what is necessary to protect their interests; and it is further ORDERED that this order be published once a week for four (4) successive weeks in the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, a newspaper published in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia.

Kempville SCA Elects Officers

By Debbie Bowman
Kempville High School

The student body at Kempville has recently elected its officers. The sophomores elected Jack Sjogren, Maryanne McConville, Janet Seagland and Susan Carman. Freshman representatives are Annette Camp, Pete Balne, Rinda Meadow and Galle Crunk. Mrs. West, sponsor of the SCA says there are some fine representatives from the student body. She also believes the SCA is the most productive Kempville has had. These members are Randy Waid, Leslie Falls, Jenny Meredith, Linda Land and Debbie Bowman.

Mrs. West, who is also the sponsor of the Drama Club, held tryouts for the school play. It will be a comedy and will probably be the best produced at Kempville so far. Sandy Morris, Cindy Dome, Ivan Grady and Darcy Morrison were among some of the cast. With the help of the art club and the support of the cast, it may prove to be a great play. Their debut will be announced later.

Several new clubs have been formed at Kempville during the past weeks, including the Surf Club, Chess Club and History Club.

Hay Fund Started

By WCMS

The day after the late George D. Hay of Virginia Beach died last May, a newspaper in Norfolk carried only a small writeup.

The following day a wire story and picture (not local but from Nashville) told of the death of the founder of the Grand Old Opry, a fact apparently overlooked by local papers.

Now WCMS radio station is planning to conduct a drive to have a monument placed on his grave in Forest Lawn Cemetery. Irvine Hill, executive vice president and general manager of WCMS, is chairman of the Hay Monument Committee. Hill said WCMS is spearheading the project and is receiving the backing of other radio stations across the country and the Country Music Association of Nashville, Tenn.

Hay, who retired to Virginia Beach, began a program on WSM radio in Nashville 40 years ago called Barn Dance. From this evolved the Grand Old Opry, the fame and popularity of which made Nashville the country music center of the nation. WCMS is known as a country-western station locally.

W. Hugh Kitchin Disputes 'Facts'

A weekly newspaper published in Norfolk the VIRGINIA OBSERVER, claimed in its issue two weeks ago that a firm headed by former Virginia Beach City Councilman W. Hugh Kitchin, "escaped payment on city business taxes that may total over $2 million."

Last week the same newspaper said that based on the initial article Virginia Beach Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans had ordered a "thorough and complete investigation."

The same front-page article quoted Evans as having said his investigation "resulted in the same facts" contained in the story and that "retribution is in order."

Kitchin, who has operated the firm in question for over ten years along with Graham Himmant, said he was out of the city when the two articles were published and did not know of the accusations against Beach Umbrella Service, Inc. until he returned.

"I still don't know exactly what it's all about," he added "because I haven't gone into it too deeply."

The articles stated that the Virginia Beach City Code requires a city license tax on each chair, umbrella or float that is used for rental purposes and that employees of the company told the writer they had stored "over 3,000 chairs, 1,500 umbrellas and 1,000 floats...for a total of 5,500 units of rental equipment" at the end of the season!

The article went on to say that 400 units are taxed at the rate of $5,000 and that all others over that number are taxed at $100 each, which was called "prohibitive in nature...for some reason."

According to the records in tax offices, the article continued, the company had paid $4,125...

Report Might Favor Beach

The 103-page consultants' report presented to the City of Norfolk Tuesday concerning a two-stadium complex may have recommended that the facility be built in Virginia Beach with the Norfolk Landside Circle area, as a secondary suggestion.

Opinions Turn Down Apartments

An overwhelming percentage of those who responded to the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN's first survey answered in the negative. The question which appeared on the front page of last week's paper asked "Should continued apartment and townhouse development be allowed in Virginia Beach without regard to the cost of building new schools since this will almost certainly result in another large bond issue and increase in taxes?"

Of those who answered the query, 77 per cent said "No," and 23 per cent said "Yes." While the SUN SURVEY does not profess to represent the entire thinking of the residents of Virginia Beach, it does represent the thinking of a cross section of the people who took time to clip out the survey and return it to us.

Your attention is called to the lower left hand corner of this week's edition and to that same spot in future editions for SUN SURVEY. The questions will be timely, and the more answers we receive the more correct and responsible the opinion.

QUESTION: Should the proposed cultural-convention center for Virginia Beach include among its facilities a multi-purpose sports arena to seat 12,000-14,000, as recommended by the feasibility study of the City Planning Dept.?

Housing Code Comes Up Monday

City Council Monday takes up at long last the minimum housing code for Virginia Beach. The long delayed discussion comes up for public hearing at 10 a.m. at City Hall, and a large number of people are expected to be on hand to observe and to speak.

While most who are directly concerned with the proposed ordinance appear to favor it there are still those who strongly oppose it. Most of the objection at present seems to come from rural areas where considerable upgrading of homes for migrant workers, for instance, will have to be seriously considered to comply if and when the matter becomes law.

Earlier objections regarding the right of entry for inspection purposes have apparently been overcome to the satisfaction of most. And other objections regarding review have also been overcome with provisions in the proposed code when any violation is noted.

Virginia Beach is one of the few cities in the area which does not have a minimum housing ordinance and has been criticized in many quarters for its failure to pass one. This time the law is expected to pass. Additional federal funds are also available to cities which have the law over those which do not.

More than a year ago the earlier version of the code was presented for discussion at public hearing and delayed indefinitely while objections were reportedly being ironed out. But it was not until Councilman Lawrence Marshall again brought the matter up that it was again placed on the Council docket and a public hearing set. Marshall said at the time he had been asked by a number of persons to bring the matter to Council again.

Good news came to the informal meeting of City Council last Monday, Dr. Dana B. Hamel, director of the Virginia Dept. of Community Colleges came from Richmond to explain further the community college program and to inform the Council that a decision on a Virginia Beach site would be made at a Nov. 20 meeting.

Hamel said he would then inform Mayor Frank A. Dusch and Councilman George Ferrell, who headed a committee to find a suitable site, for release at that time.

This removed some doubt concerning a site selection, which was reported to have been delayed indefinitely. Site selection board members visited Virginia Beach some months ago and looked over three possible sites which would be donated for the two-year college. No indication was given at the time of any preference.

The city's responsibility in the matter will be to provide streets and utilities, as well as a few other improvements on the 100-acre site selected. The state will then spend about $1.7 million on the first phase of the school, according to Hamel.

Hamel also requested that the city appoint one councilman as a member of an ad hoc committee he will head which will set up administrative policies of colleges in this area, including Fredericks, already operating. This committee with one member from Norfolk, Portsmouth, Chesapeake and Virginia Beach will then pick the single board of directors which will govern the three or four community colleges in the four cities with an "executive dean" governing the individual campuses.

It was also pointed out by Hamel that the Virginia Beach college, as well as all others now in the planning stages for the community college program, is contingent upon passage of the state $81 million bond issue for higher education and mental health.

The first item on the agenda Monday was held in closed session which lasted for an hour-and-a-half. Council met with A. P. Grice, hired consultant, and L. Dean Curtis, Industrial Authority Director, concerning a prospective bid on the Peninsula Railroad property at Little Creek up for sale on bids.

The bids are due by Oct. 30 after one 60-day delay asked for and received by the city.

Grice appraised the property at slightly more than $775,000, but the railroad values it at about $950,000.

It has been reported that several private industries are interested in the property, which was once used partly for the Little Creek Ferries and Pennsylvania Railroad, but was considered surplus after the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel opened. It is the last available industrial tract available in the area.

The long discussion apparently revolved around the amount of the bid. Several Councilmen said they felt the property was worth about $550,000, and a bid somewhere in between that and Grice's figure is expected to be made before the deadline.

In other action Council agreed to accept the 18th century Dr. Robert E. Whitehead home in

UCF Drive Proceeds Towards Top

The 1968 United Communities Fund is continuing in eastern Chesapeake, Norfolk and Virginia Beach, excluding the resort borough where the campaign was conducted earlier. The active campaign began Monday with a goal of $2,287,322.

The campaign collects contributions in a once-a-year canvass for 52 separate charitable and service agencies, then distributes those funds according to need.

Operators of the fund say that one out of every three families in the areas covered benefits directly from the contributions. The agencies include the American Red Cross, as well as other health, youth, child and family welfare and armed forces services; Funds also go to nations, health and community services and agencies.

Just three of the agencies in Virginia Beach which benefit are the Hospitality House for Servicemen, the Y.W.C.A., and the Virginia Beach Service Center.

The campaign, both in business establishments and in residential areas, is in full swing. Contributors are being asked to give their "Fair Share", based on annual wages. Fund officials say volunteer workers are doing an excellent job, and the goal is expected to be reached.

The slogan being used by UCF is, "No other gift does so much for so many." About one-third of the goal has now been reached.

Gala Occasion to Honor Kellam

Virginia Gov. Mills E. Godwin, Jr. will be among the distinguished guests for the dinner honoring Sidney S. Kellam at the Civic Center in Virginia Beach next Wednesday, Oct. 30.

The "Gala occasion" will honor Kellam for his long service to Virginia Beach, but the committee which planned the $15-a-plate dinner has stressed from the beginning it is not a "political affair" and not a way of bidding farewell to Kellam.

One member of the committee said, "I'm sure there is all kinds of speculation as to why we're having this dinner, but it's only meant as a gesture of thanks. There's nothing else to be read into the reason we're having it."

He added that it had been under consideration for some time, and early plans began last year, long before word leaked out and was published in a Norfolk newspaper during the summer.

"We really weren't trying to keep it secret, just non-political," said a member of the committee. "And we had hoped to keep it from him (Kellam), but that was impossible."

Although the "Friends of Sidney Kellam Night" is no longer a secret to the longtime political leader, the committee does have a few surprise guests lined up, according to a committee member.

Attendance is by invitation only, and the committee expects a near capacity crowd at the dome. Lester Lamm and his international orchestra will provide music for the evening and headline the professional talent.

A special souvenir menu, prepared by the John H. Lewis Advertising Agency, features pictures and words of "Mr. Democrat," as Kellam is known throughout Virginia.

The retiring Democratic National Committeeman will also be presented a gold guest book, which will have been signed by everyone who attends the gala.

Besides the Governor, other head table guests include

Kellam, his wife, his two daughters and her husbands, Rep. Thomas N. Downing, Mayor and Mrs. Dusch and Clayton Shoemaker, chairman of the committee which planned the affair.

Mystery Surrounds School Census End

That school census that City Council asked be expanded into a full citywide census and which was supposed to be finished in June is still going on.

Virginia Beach School Board administrative assistant J. J. Owens, who has been handling the matter, now says that tabulation is being completed and results of the survey should be known by the end of next week.

Reasons for the delay in completion of the census have not been fully explained, but Owens said about a month ago the machines being used to tabulate the findings were not working exactly as it had been hoped. He had said at the outset no progress reports would be issued since they would not be meaningful. Later he would say it was "coming along fine" and "should be finished soon."

Delays are not new to the survey. They began almost as soon as City Council asked school officials to enlarge their required census into a general one to settle once and for all the population of Virginia Beach.

Owens said at that time the questionnaire forms were not ready two to three weeks after the scheduled start. By law school funds from the state are based on population figures. Since the last general census was in 1960 and the consolidation of Princess Anne County and the old city of Virginia Beach in 1963 has resulted in great growth and expansion, no one is sure of the city's population.

State funds to the city are based on figures supplied by the University of Virginia which places Virginia Beach's population far below the City Planning Commission June 1968 estimate of 172,586.

Since the schools must make

Answer Is Expected On Airport

"We're still counting on Governor Godwin to help us out in this matter," said James Sadler, chairman of the Mayor's special Airport committee. "But so far we still haven't heard any more from him."

Sadler and members of his committee climaxed a long and often frustrating search for an acceptable site for a general aviation airport in Virginia Beach with a visit with Gov. Miles E. Godwin Jr. on Oct. 2. The governor was quite helpful, according to Sadler, but wanted to check with several persons before contacting Sadler concerning the possibility of the airstrip on land now owned by the state as a part of Seashore State Park.

"He was very helpful to us," said Sadler, "and I am optimistic."

He conceded there may have to be additional meetings before any decision is final, but Sadler said he expects some sort of tentative decision by the first of next week.

An earlier site near City Hall was turned down because of reported interference with flight patterns of NAS Oceana.

Sidney Kellam to Head Tidewater Health Council

Sidney S. Kellam is president of the newly organized Tidewater Health Planning Council, which has been created to coordinate planning for health services and facilities in the area.

Representatives in the council are from Norfolk, Portsmouth, Virginia Beach, Chesapeake, Suffolk, Franklin, Southampton County and Nansemond County.

Council officers in addition to Kellam are: Dr. John Murray, a member of Franklin City Council, vice president; Pretlow Darden of Norfolk, second vice president; and Robert A. Versprille, administrative director of the Tidewater Red Cross Blood Center in Norfolk, who is acting secretary.

According to Versprille the first undertaking of the council will be to prepare an area-wide health plan for submission to Washington, requesting federal funds to help carry out the plan.

Upon approval of the plan, the federal government would provide 50 per cent of needed funds for localities included in the plan.

Club, Not Coast Guard Seeks Rudee Inlet Home

The city is at present negotiating with private developers for a permanent marina on Rudee Inlet.

Negotiations for the proposed $500,000 154-slip Virginia Capes Marina is complicating action by the Rudee Inlet Authority in leasing land to the Cape Henry Billfish Club for a $15,000 16-slip marina. The land requested by the Billfish Club, which is at the end of Arctic Avenue at Winston Salem Drive is in the area being considered for the larger marina.

The Billfish marina would solve the main problems facing the private club, Earl Dusham, the club's president, listed these problems as: The lack of a central meeting place in the city, requires club members to run about two hours extra to fishing grounds, creating a fuel problem; Many club members moor their boats in Hampton, Norfolk and Portsmouth, thereby patronizing facilities in those cities; the club provides no facilities for visiting boats during tournaments.

The site requested by the club would be situated between the city's present 13-slip temporary Capes Marina and the proposed site for the larger 154-slip marina.

The Authority engineering consultant George Langley of Langley, McDonald and Overman has suggested that action be delayed until January, which is agreeable with representatives of the club.

Another issue confronting the Baja Marimba Tickets to Sell

Tickets went on sale Oct. 15 for performances of the Baja Marimba Band, scheduled to be at the Civic Center Nov. 9. The tickets can be purchased at the Civic Center, the Ticket Stall at Pembroke Mall, Wards Corner Record Shop, the Clothes Horse in Portsmouth, the Red Barn on the Peninsula, and Claytons Men Shop on the Peninsula.

Admission prices will be $4 (reserved seat), $3.50 (reserved section), $3 (general admission).

Performances for the Baja Marimba Band are at 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

The Baja Marimba Band, a colorful conglomeration of musicians, cigars, and extinct Mexican costumes, formed in Hollywood only three years ago. Under their leader, Julius "Spanish Flea" Wechter, they have created a singular sound which has produced one of the most consistent instrumental album sellers in the world.

The band formed as a unit under Herb Alpert.

Vietnamese To Study Music Here

Maj. Le Phuoc Quang and eight Warrant Officers of the Army of the Republic of Vietnam will arrive at Little Creek School of Music this week to engage in a six month's course of study with the U. S. Army Element at the School.

The Officers arrived at Norfolk Municipal Airport Tuesday morning where they were met by a band from Little Creek. Capt. Marvin Keefer, Commander of the Army Element of the School of Music, was on hand to welcome the group to the School and the Tidewater area.

The officers, all from the Vietnamese School of Music, are enrolled in a special advanced music course, with emphasis on rehearsal techniques, band arranging, and drum majoring. Upon return to Vietnam, the group will be arrangers for the entire Army band field. Maj. Quang, Deputy Commandant of the Vietnamese Music School will be observing administrative methods employed at the School.

While in the area, the officers will be introduced to local industrial, social and military organizations, and will tour historical and cultural sites.

Senior Chaplain Reports

Cdr. Arthur W. Dennis has reported to Naval Air Station Oceana as the station's new senior chaplain.

He was previously assigned to the Amphibious Command Flagship, USS Taconic (AGC-17), where he had additional duty on the staff of Commander Amphibious Group Four.

The Chaplain is a member of the Virginia Conference of the United Methodist Church, and a native of Franktown, Va. He is married to the former Miss Mary Elizabeth Fuqua of Cape Charles, Virginia.

Cdr. Dennis and his family reside in quarters at the Naval Air Station Oceana. The Dennis family will continue to reside in the Virginia Beach area after his present tour of duty. Upon his retirement Chaplain Dennis plans a teaching career at one of the local Tidewater Colleges.

Opening Play Is Well Done But Not Funny

To call the new Lake Wright Playhouse merely "beautiful" and "luxurious" would not do it justice. It is a magnificent addition to the Tidewater theatrical scene, and will likely become a social center of attraction. It must be seen and appreciated. But the choice of the first play leaves something to be desired.

"Goodbye Charlie," by George Axelrod, has rather ticklish subject matter, but the grand opening night black-tie audience was either too sophisticated or too stuffy to laugh. It's a funny play if one can accept the premise of a young devil-may-care playboy shot and killed by a jealous husband then coming back as a beautiful girl as punishment for his sins.

Obviously all this takes a lot of explanation, but it also presents some very funny situations. Imagine Charlie's shock when he sees a voluptuous female looking back at him from the mirror. But the lack of laughs from the opening night audience made it all seem terribly tedious, unfunny and terribly slow.

Timothy Jones' direction is excellent. He has put together a well-balanced and nicely paced production. It is a shame it is not fully appreciated. Actually what may very well be wrong is that the play can more easily be appreciated by men than women. All the talk about sexual escapades somehow are funnier to a man than to a woman, we are told.

Lynn Howard, a s Charlie-turned-girl, is outstanding. She never overplays the obvious masculine traits called for, nor does she overdo the vampish female traits that would be so easy to give into. Her relaxed characterization fits the role perfectly.

William Jon Camp apparently had difficulty trying to decide how to play the role of Charlie's best friend and the only one that Charlie tells of his new identity. Granted it is a difficult role too—from best friend to possible boyfriend. But Camp never seems to relax enough and is too pompous. He appears more out of sorts at the entire situation than he should be.

Theresa Stallings, as the wife whom Charlie was shot over, plays the uninhibited role very well. There is lots of fun in the role, and she gets it all out.

Byron Perkins and Judy Case, as Charlie's only two mourners, at a memorial service, add nice bits at the beginning of the play.

Perhaps the choice of play was not the best for a premiere production, but it is well done and deserving of great praise. The setting itself on the large stage is worth the price of admission.

Perhaps the next show and a better opening night audience will show off the Lake Wright Playhouse to better advantage. HJL.

4 Recommendations Made For Police in FOPA Study

A four-month analysis of the operation of the Virginia Beach Police Department has just been completed by members of the Fraternal Order of Police Associates Lodge #8.

The study, conducted by Nathaniel J. Cohen and Gus Riganio, states that definite action is needed on the part of citizens and City Council to provide for the continued operation of the Police Department at its present high level of proficiency and to continue to retain and attract the caliber of personnel required.

The study recommends concrete steps be taken to provide improvement in at least four areas: the size of the department; the continued education of police personnel and continued modernization of equipment; raising the salaries of police officers and providing them with better protection in the event of their being accused of false arrest; and creation of a realistic retirement system.

During the next several weeks the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN will interpret the findings of the study in the hope that appropriate action will be taken to strengthen the Virginia Beach Police Department.

The report indicates the present size of the department at approximately 180 full-time officers. The city also maintains an auxiliary force of 120 men, who devote some 12,000 to 15,000 hours annually, without compensation to assisting the regular police. They are available primarily on special assignment requests to support regular police officers.

The city also employs some 40 law students each summer who devote most of their time to assistance of patrolling the resort portion of the city.

The full-time police strength includes the number of men engaged in supervision of the department, those assigned to important jobs within the confines of precinct stations, and the constant manning of the communication center. These assignments further curtail the number of men able to continually patrol the city and to conduct exhaustive necessary investigations. Considerations must be made for required relief of police officers due to sick leave, days off and annual vacations, according to the report.

Figures from various city government bureaus indicate the city of Virginia Beach encompasses some 255 square miles, containing 735,61 miles of streets, roads and highways and a population of some 172,000 persons. The study committee also indicated their findings showed the crime rate in Virginia Beach increased at an annual rate of 10% between 1960-1966, another 16% increase in 1967 and a 17% increase this year over the same period of last year.

The Uniform Crime Report of 1967 as compiled by the Federal Bureau of Investigation says that cities the size of Virginia Beach would do well to maintain a police force which provides two full-time officers per 1,000 residents. The Virginia Beach full-time police force falls below this figure.

The F.O.P.A. report recommends the city take steps to enlarge the Virginia Beach police department by a minimum of 10%, or an additional 20 full-time officers, thus providing for closer security for all areas of the city and a more efficient method of attacking the ever-growing crime rate. But it is up to City Council and city officials to evaluate these facts and decide.

Next week the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN will outline F.O.P.A. recommendations regarding education of police personnel and continued modernization of the police department.

Dealership Sold by Roy Alphin

J. Roy Alphin, owner for 18 years of the Mercury new-car dealership here, has sold the dealership, formerly known as Alphin Motors, Inc., located at 857 Virginia Beach Blvd.

According to Alphin, he reluctantly decided to sell due to the necessity of relocating at Ford Motor Co. request.

Alphin will continue operating his used-car business, Alphin Motors, which is located on Virginia Beach Blvd. at Chinese Corner. Plans are underway at the present for expansion at this location, which include putting up another building.

The franchise formerly held by Alphin Motors, Inc., has been bought out by a corporation headed by James J. Hayden. The dealership, now known as Colonial Mercury, will relocate within the next six months on property recently owned by Ford Motor Co.

Colonial Mercury will move to property at London Bridge opposite King's Department Store, Hayden says the land and facilities cost approximately $400,000. Present plans call for a building of 14,000 square feet.

Hayden has lived with his wife Reba and their three children in Thoroughgood for four and one half years. Prior to heading Colonial Mercury he worked for Ford Motor Company in Baltimore. He has also served in the Navy here for 18 years.

Census

a survey every three years anyway, Council appropriated the money to make the census a full one. About 70 teachers of the Virginia Beach school system were supposed to conduct the survey, which regardless of tabulation, was still being conducted in a Lynnhaven Borough neighborhood as late as Monday. A number of other persons in the same borough say they have never been contacted. Also reportedly children under one year old are not being counted in the census.

Attempts to contact Owens concerning the survey failed, and word was sent through his secretary that the results would be completed by the end of October, some four months later than Owens said in April. He told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN at that time the census would be finished in June.

School officials are being close-mouthed on the subject. All queries are guided to Owens' office. One City Councilman also said he did not know why it had not been completed.

One high school administration official refused to comment on it at all. "I'm washing my hands of the whole thing," he said.

City Planning Director Patrick Standing confirmed the machine problems and said that the reader which had been designed to read the mark-sense cards containing the information had not been working properly. He added that enumeration problems had caused some complications but said he was not sure of the full reasons for the long delay.

Standing also said that some call-back interviews are still being made and some persons who were missed entirely for some reasons are currently being interviewed.

Reportedly teachers are still doing most of the canvassing, as they did during the summer, but their time is limited to after school. Through some unexplained problem, a large number of completed reports had to be gone through to find out what areas were missed, according to one official.

Complete reasons for the long delays remain clouded in mystery on a project that was first assigned in January by former School Supt. F. W. Cox before his retirement. Present Supt. E. E. Brickell, who inherited the census, said the first real deadline he had set for the completion of the survey was Aug. 1. Other school board personnel said they have offered their help on a number of occasions but Owens had said the matter was moving along all right.

Not only is City Council, the Planning Department and the general public interested in the results of the survey, the top school officials are also very much interested because of the reported need of a new school bond issue expected within a year. Privately officials are saying as much as $6 to $10 million may be involved for new schools. This comes on the heels of a $14.5 million bond issue for schools last January, which was highly responsible for the increase in real estate taxes to balance the operating budget.

City Manager Roger Scott has said he hopes there will be no tax increase next year, but the school census, whenever it is finished, could also have a bearing on that thinking.

The Nov. 1 deadline is now awaited with great anticipation by all concerned.

RADGES & RANTER

The stork made a low swing over the Bailey Lane home of police officer R. T. Munford and his wife Eunice during the week. The Munfords proudly announced the arrival of their first child Ruth Taylaia. Officer Munford said their daughter weighed-in at 8 pounds 13 1/2 ounces. Mother, father and daughter are all reported doing fine.

Robert E. Lee, chief of the Princess Anne Courthouse Volunteer Fire Department, is inviting the public to attend an open house at the unit's new fire station at Princess Anne Courthouse on Sunday Nov. 3.

Chief Lee says the event will get underway at 2 p.m. and feature refreshments, tours of the new building, equipment displays, appearances by various city officials and live band music.

Capt. W. W. Davis, acting assistant chief of the Virginia Beach police department says he hopes to be back on the job next week. Capt. Davis has been confined to the General Hospital of Virginia Beach this past week, but says he is making good recovery and wishes to thank everyone for the many well wishes he has received.

W. Irving McClanan has been appointed a full time Justice of the Peace for the City of Virginia Beach. McClanan, who has served as a substitute J. P. for the City since Oct. 10, 1967 will take up full time duties at the 1st Precinct J. P. Office in the City Jail building.

A request for making 21st Street one-way from the terminus of the expressway to Pacific Avenue was turned over to Traffic Safety Chief Reeves E. Johnson. The street now has two blocks which carry two-way traffic while the rest is already one way eastward.

The request for two Virginia Beach members to the Hampton Roads Stadium Authority was also made again, and Council indicated that appointments would be forthcoming next Monday.

A resolution adopted by the Chamber of Commerce endorsing the building of a new cultural-convention center in the city as soon as possible was also read.

Councilmen will again discuss the new water chambers with Norfolk with assistant city manager for finance Giles Dodd and assistant city manager David Norman, who conducted the meeting while City Manager Roger Scott was attending municipal meetings in Detroit.

Council will hold another public hearing, probably in December, on a recommendation of the Planning Department to rezone all of 21st and 22nd Streets in the Beach Borough because of the change in the street since the opening of the expressway. The Planning Commission hears the matter on Nov. 12, following a meeting of about 100 persons last April, most of whom strongly agreed with recommendations which would use the area as a controlled commercial corridor of entrance to the city.

AMVER System Provides Valuable Service to Ships

A merchant ship off the coast of Virginia Beach is being tossed by heavy seas. Suddenly the cargo shifts violently causing extensive damage and the taking on of water. The ship's master radios the Coast Guard for help. Within a maximum of 15 minutes help can be on the way.

This is possible through AMVER the Coast Guard's Automated Merchant Vessel Report system, which has plotted more than a half million voyages in its decade of service to the maritime community.

AMVER, a world-wide free and voluntary maritime mutual assistance program, can provide aid to search and rescue efforts on any ocean of the world. This is accomplished by plotting the voyages of merchant ships representing 62 different nations. The vessels voluntarily radio their sailing plans to the AMVER Center on Governors Island in New York. There the information, concerning the ship positions, is kept continuously up-to-date by an electronic computer system.

When emergencies arise at sea, the AMVER Center will provide Surface Pictures (SURPICS) to any international search and rescue agency upon request. A SURPIC is a listing of ships which are known to be within the area of a distress, and which contains the ship's position, course, speed, destination, communication and medical capabilities. Then the ship or ships nearest the distressed vessel can respond instead of the costly "All ships distress call."

AMVER came into existence in the summer of 1958 when the U. S. Coast Guard activated the computerized program. At that time the system was plotting vessels in an area covering only a portion of the North Atlantic Ocean. With the value of AMVER being quickly affirmed, there followed a gradual expansion. In 1963 the plot area was expanded to cover the entire North Atlantic; the South Atlantic, the North Sea and the Mediterranean were included in 1964. The finally in 1965, with the addition of the Indian and Pacific Oceans, AMVER became a world-wide merchant vessel report system.

Participation of merchant vessels in the AMVER program has shown a steady increase. Since 1958 when 4,800 voyages were plotted, the figure has grown to 114,764 passages plotted for 1967. Since the program first began, 725,625 voyages have been carried on the AMVER computer. Even Iron Curtain countries participate to varying degrees.

Operationally, AMVER has proven its worth time and again during the past 10 years, many times pinpointing ships to assist others off Virginia Beach.

The AMVER computer also aids those at sea who need medical assistance by furnishing SURPICS of ships carrying doctors. Should there be no ships of this nature in the area, a SURPIC can be requested listing vessels headed for nearby port.

By checking the SURPIC, the master of the requesting ship can easily arrange a rendezvous with a vessel that is enroute to a port where medical facilities are available.

AMVER also offers assistance to aircraft encountering difficulties during transoceanic flights. If an emergency should arise and it is doubtful as to whether the craft can remain airborne, a Trackline SURPIC is immediately made available. The SURPIC listing provides the positions of ships along the intended route. Then, should the pilot deem it necessary to ditch, he can set his plane down in the vicinity of a ship.

On historic Governor's Island, in the shadow of Manhattan just a five-minute Coast Guard-operated ferry ride away the AMVER center contains the electronic computers and communications equipment which can get the desired information back to the Coast Guard station requesting the information as soon as possible, or the information can go directly to the ship in trouble so that the master may call for help.

AMVER operates on the oldest tradition of the sea—"That no call for help shall go unanswered."

At the present time the list of ships operating throughout the world is being updated; new equipment is being designed and built; new highly skilled personnel are being trained; and the entire program is being enlarged.

Oddly enough there has been an increase in sea tragedies in the ten years of AMVER's existence, and the need of service in the future would seem to be even greater.

AMVER is only one part of the massive Coast Guard Complex on Governor's Island, which is only a mile long and a quarter-of-a-mile wide. It became the home of the Coast Guard in 1966, after serving as Headquarters of the First U. S. Army from 1934 to 1966. It now serves also Headquarters U. S. Coast Guard, Eastern Area.

sion, originally built for the old Dutch Governors dates back to 1708. The island was bought from the Indians for two axes, a string of beads and some nails. Castle William, built in 1811, and used as a maximum security prison by the Army until 1966 is another historic part of the island. The gothic stone chapel, built in 1864, is named St. Cornelius Chapel.

The British also used the fort before the Revolutionary War, but the cannon, still trained on Manhattan, have never been fired.

A tremendous amount of activity is going on at Governor's Island. The Coast Guard is building new buildings while being careful to preserve the historic charm and suburban nature of the post a stone's throw from the bustle and bustle of New York City.

NEXT WEEK: GOVERNOR'S ISLAND SEARCH AND RESCUE SCHOOL.

A Coast Guardsman makes his request of the AMVER computer. The answer is back in seconds.

His Head Is in the Clouds

William M. Bruner, son of Chap. and Mrs. William D. Bruner of Virginia Beach, has been chosen for the 1968 Virginia Youth Flight sponsored by the Virginia State Corporation Division of Aeronautics.

Bruner, a 17-year-old senior at Cox High School, is one of two students in Virginia who was picked for the honor. The other student is Lon Rhoades from Waynesboro High School. They will be flown on a four day tour, from Oct. 27-30 to several points of interest which include Kitty Hawk, Cape Kennedy and Atlanta, where they will visit the Atlanta Air Route Traffic Control Center and Lockheed Aircraft Corp.

Accompanying Bill is Mrs. Ruth Husk, the head of the Science Department at Cox.

The two students were chosen for the trip by Franklin D. Kizer, the state Supervisor of Science and the division of superintendent of state schools.

Bill, an outstanding student at Cox, is planning to major in Physics at college. He is not certain where he will attend college but is considering Brown University.

This trip is especially intriguing for Bill since he is interested in the space program. He said, "I'm particularly looking forward to Cape Kennedy. . . . Apollo 8 is on the pad right now. I would like to see that."

Scout Night Is Success

Nearly 500 boys and prospective leaders were signed up for Boy Scouts during School Night, held Oct. 14 at a number of Virginia Beach public schools.

The total for School Night, the second annual, for Virginia Beach was higher than the other Tidewater cities combined. "We did much better than the other councils in the district," commented Herb Coleman, PAVAB District Scout executive. He attributed part of this to having sent an informational fact sheet home on the back of flyers distributed to school boys. The other districts just sent the flyers.

School Night, which featured Scouting activities to show prospective scouts just what Boy Scouts do, served as an introduction to Scouting for boys and men interested in joining the Scout program.

Elmer Tarrall of the Virginia Beach public schools was chairman of School Night for PAVAB District.

In Support of Humphrey

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN has traditionally supported the nominees of the Democratic party in all elections, national, state and local. And we firmly believe that a stand should be taken, regardless of what that stand may be. Those who do not support and vote for the men who best agree with their convictions are shirking their responsibilities as citizens.

We therefore endorse and support the national Democratic ticket and the candidacy for president of Hubert Humphrey. These are troubled times and while no national election of change in government is going to end that immediately, we believe that the vice president, along with the erudite Sen. Muskie, is best equipped to cope with the multi-faceted problems we face.

This nation is in more of

Not Really a 'Rumble'

Some persons were quick to criticize the newspapers in Norfolk for what they called undue publicity of an "almost fight" in Lineberry Park last week between students of two Virginia Beach high schools.

While we would question the use of the sensational word "rumble", as it was called in the news reports, we do not question publicizing it for what it was. The word "rumble", however, leaves the impression of intense gang fights of "West Side Story". This fight that never came off could hardly qualify.

We would indeed criticize the students for such insane action that could have resulted in bodily injury or worse, and while we cannot actively criticize their parents, we wonder

The All-Important Hearing

City Council holds an important public hearing Monday morning, one that has been much discussed and long awaited. The subject is a minimum housing ordinance for the city.

This is a much needed law and one that should have already been on the books for some time. The fact that it is not calls attention to effective lobbying against and the grasping at any loophole by those whom the new law is going to cost money.

Granted there may have been some legal problems in the law as originally presented over a year ago. Hopefully these have now been corrected, but it is a pity it has taken so long.

Rural area residents are reported to be upset by some of the standards that must be set up in this law. Certainly this is going to cause money to be spent to upgrade even the lowest type of housing for migrant workers and the like, but it must be pointed out these are MINIMUM standard of not only housing, but also common decency. The new ordinance will not cause problems for conscientious homeowners and a state of turmoil than most can remember. The national and international crises we face have not been brought on by any one man or any one party, nor can they be solved by any one man or any one party. No matter who is elected we can only look toward a period of strong reflection, then the setting of a course that is in the best interests of all of us.

While the major candidates are worthy gentlemen, well-qualified for the position they seek and are capable leaders, a choice must be made. We have chosen Mr. Humphrey to guide these next four important years in our future. We have chosen Mr. Humphrey to continue those policies that have been so successful and to bend those that have not. We must look to him as the best man in the race for the world's most important job.

how so many young people could be at a given place at a given time while their parents supposedly did not know or conceivably care where they were.

We would also praise the quick action of the Virginia Beach police in stopping the fight before it started. They acted on information given them by some responsible students. A number of arrests have been made, and we hope the guilty will be punished. They have made a terrible mistake.

But it could have been worse. Cool heads and excellent police work did not allow that, fortunately. May this be a lesson to all. Such foolish and impulsive action cannot be tolerated in a city as fine as this. May it never happen again.

fortunately they outnumber the others manyfold.

Passage should not be delayed any longer. Monday City Council must take positive, favorable action.

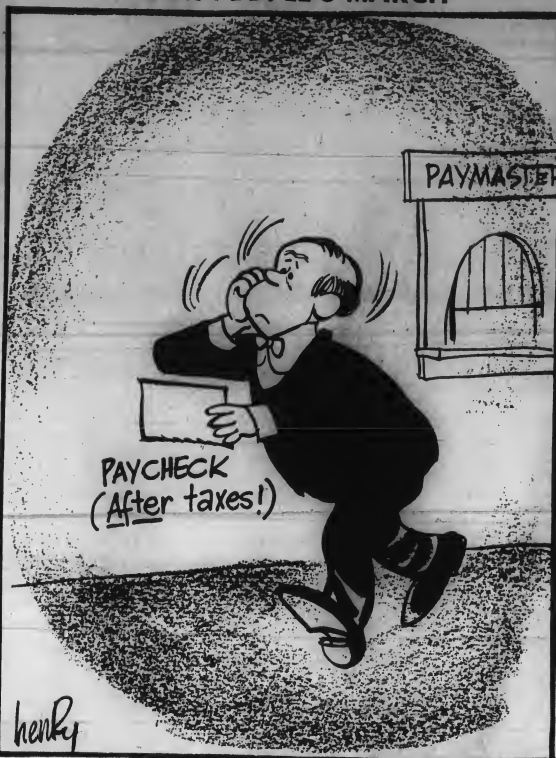

But then it must be enforced. It is shocking to note that too often even neighboring cities ignore minimum standards even though they do have the law.

Stadium Report

Is it really possible that the report given to the City of Norfolk recommended the building of a stadium not in Norfolk but in Virginia Beach? Is it really possible that some 16 pages of the report in which that recommendation was included were missing when the report was made public?

That's what a reliable source tells us. It could easily be true, and certainly officials of Norfolk would not want that to be known. But what a disservice not only to the City of Norfolk but also to all of Tidewater that would be. And think of the political overtones in suppression of the entirely tax-paid-for consultants' report.

POOR PEOPLE'S MARCH

Guest Editorial

"Now Is the Time For All Good Men..."

The following editorial was written by Clifford Dowdey and appeared in the October issue of the VIRGINIA RECORD. It has been edited slightly to comply with space requirements. The editorial deals with Virginia Politics.

We all hear much today about the separation between organized politics and the voting public. We have seen in the rise of McCarthy a vigorous, active protest against the present political structure of the nation. As has been written in millions of words, this protest represents a deep and growing discontent with a situation in which the voter feels that he lacks any significant participation in the choice of candidates who will run for national office. The candidates are said to have been selected for the voter by organizations whose chief concern is to maintain themselves in power.

There is, of course, nothing new about the selection of candidates by political organizations whose concern was the perpetuation of their power. Something of this sort was practiced as early as Jefferson's period of control, although in his case and in those days this control was maintained in the conviction that his candidates were the best qualified to govern. Governmental control solely in the interests of perpetuating a political party in power was established by the radical element of the Republican Party during the Civil War a full century ago. Long after the radical element had died off, the political machinery, manipulated by party bosses, continued the party in power for all except sixteen of the next seventy-two years.

Toward the end of this reign, the party in power reached the cynical low in selecting Harding as a presidential candidate—coming along the way the phrase and the concept of "the smoke-filled room." We had a more unsophisticated electorate in those days. Incomparably fewer citizens were educated; there were no television and radio analysts of the political news; newspapers gave far less space to political coverage, and columns such as (Winchell's and O. O. McIntyre's) selected for the pundits who now repeat themselves and each other in endless variations on a single theme. Most of all, young people were not as politically conscious as they are today.

Today voters under forty, the majority of the voting population, have no memory of life other than the control of the Democratic Party, except for the eight-year interlude of Eisenhower. The Democrats had gotten in finally only by the collapse of the economy, in the Depression, which frightened the populace into changing parties.

Now, the populace is in a condition of growing fear—over the devaluation of money with increasing tax-burdens, over the plight of the cities with "crime in the streets" as its most obvious symptom over the seemingly insoluble problem of inter-racial relations, and inextricably involved with everything else, over the bottomless entanglements caused by the nation's assumed role in world affairs. But the difference from 1932 is that a more enlightened electorate is by no means convinced that a change of political parties will affect significant changes in the fear-arousing ills of the nation.

In Virginia we hear less about the gulf between our representatives in government and the voting public. Part of this is caused by the enormous nature of the society which characterized the state through most of her history, by which our elected representatives could serve the whole rather than segments of special interests. Today the state is less homogeneous ideologically, with the gulfs existing in viewpoints of the majority of their constituents. In its entirety the state is still without those fragmentations which cause representatives to seek blocs of special interests.

Because of the traumatic experience of Republican rule during Reconstruction, until recently Virginia did not participate actively in the two-party system, but today—except in certain areas—conditioning from the past would scarcely be a major contribution to voting habits. But, as a result of the long existence of what amounted to a one-party system, among other factors, the state voters do have the habit of acceptance of things more or less as they are.

Whether or not the party system as now known does provide the voters with a real choice in candidates is a point which could be argued from many angles.

The real point is that the system is what we have, for good or ill, and meaningful participation can be most effectively taken within the operational system—including, of course, that of any new party which emerges.

In Virginia, political theorists would be further confused by the seventy-five years from 1700 to the Revolution when the greatest glory of Virginians in government was created by a no party system.

Certainly in this coming election, the candidates are in the main tradition in the representation of their constituents. In the responsibilities they have assumed in a period that can be regarded as critical, these Virginians deserve to be supported for their participation in the realities as they exist today. They deserve to be supported by a voter participation which considers these realities and is not diverted by the current rise of political theories which stress alienation between the electorate and organized parties.

Because the electorate of today is more enlightened is the reason that Virginians should demonstrate the enlightenment by participation. For, if the often-described gap has grown between the younger voters and the standard operations of party politics, the gap will be closed by voter participation within the only system which is at present functioning.

Changes, as desired, can be wrought within the structure within which the Virginia candidates have offered their services as national representatives of the state. Whatever changes the future may bring, for the present hour of growing fear at the nation's course, Virginia needs the participation of its citizens by which its representatives can know the expressions of the electorate's attitudes. Only by making known their wishes, their hopes and fears, their convictions and beliefs, can the voters assure their representatives of the extent to which they are truly representing Virginians according to the best traditions of Virginia.

"The only thing I'm sure she's doing at school is playing in the sandbox," she said. "Every day when she comes home I empty a tremendous amount of sand out of her shoes."

"Have you ever thought of saving it and making our own sandbox?" he asked helpfully.

"Now stop that, I'm serious. I really can't find out what she does at school."

"I know exactly what you mean. Every time I ask her what she did in school, all she'll say is that she played," he said. "Played what . . . she won't tell me. She just says, 'I played. That's all.'"

"But then it was the next day she came home and told me she had to stand in the corner because she talked to a boy. The teacher put both of them in the same corner."

"Yes, I know," he said. "I asked our little criminal if she enjoyed her punishment, and she said she did. She said they stood in the corner and smiled at each other."

"It's the same thing here when I try to punish her. I yell at her and tell her I'm going to take away her favorite doll. She screws up her face and says tearfully, 'Okay. How do you fight that?'" she wanted to know.

"I don't have the slightest idea," he said. "She handles me better than that. I told her I was going to spank her and she lay across my knee and cried while she said, 'I'm so sorry. Go on and spank me.' I just couldn't do it, and don't think she didn't know it."

"Sometimes I get the feeling she's really a 32-year-old midget anyway," she said. "Who ever heard of a three-year-old getting up in a bad mood and saying, 'don't talk to me I have a headache?'"

"You know how many times I've told her to stop telling me her tummy hurts when she's trying to get out of eating?" he asked. "Well, this morning when I was trying to rush her with breakfast, she looked at me very tragically and said, 'My leg hurts.' Then as further proof she picked her left leg up and said, 'Just this one, not the other one.' I looked at her with a scowl and she got this devilish grin on her face and said, 'At least I didn't tell you my tummy hurts.' I gave up and told her to get down from the table and did."

"If she's like this now at three, what's she going to be like as a teenager?" she asked.

"I don't know," he said. "Probably as devious as her mother who does much the same thing when she's trying to get her way."

"I do not," she yelled at him. "Where do you think you're going?"

"I'm going to my room," he said with a big grin. "My tummy hurts."

Mrs. Bolling Praises Mrs. Philip Moonves

Mrs. Philip R. Moonves, president of the Women's Democratic Club of Virginia Beach, was highly commended yesterday for her fund raising work in a speech by Mrs. A. Stuart Bolling Jr., Democratic National Committeewoman of Virginia.

Mrs. Bolling, who was speaking to a meeting of the Women's Democratic Club at the Ocean Heath, said that not only was Mrs. Moonves a delegate to both the state and national conventions, but she had raised more money for the Humphrey-Muskie campaign than any other woman in Virginia.

In her speech Mrs. Bolling said that Gov. Godwin had passed a resolution structuring a state federation of women's Democratic clubs. This has not been done before because of little or no representation in some congressional districts, but how efforts are being made to form clubs in each of the congressional districts.

Mrs. Bolling stressed the importance of fund raising, particularly by individuals in a group. She thanked the Virginia Beach club for their contributions to the Humphrey-Muskie campaign.

She also spoke of the important role women can play, even before the beginning of the campaign. Mrs. Bolling, who was one of 110 Democrats who drafted the party platform at Chicago, told of women, many times mothers, who appeared before the committee and presented testimonies concerning such issues as hot lunch programs and air pollution. The women were extremely well-informed and presented their cases effectively, she said.

There are many things a woman can do without even leaving home in supporting the candidates, according to Mrs. Bolling. She suggested answering various poll, questionnaires and most importantly, getting out to vote.

"The closer the race comes numerically, the closer it comes to being thrown in the House of Representatives. We must do our hardest to elect our Democratic congressional representatives."

"This year if Virginia should have its six to four ratio dropped to five, we would not have a vote for the President of the United States. If ever it were important to vote, it is important to vote in this election . . . for both Democrats and Republicans."

Mrs. Bolling praised the Democratic nominees Humphrey and Muskie, emphasizing their qualifications. She also said what a capable man Downing is, having brought in $2 million worth of contract work to Newport News.

She ended by saying, "When Nov. 5th comes, I think we are all in for a wonderful surprise as Democrats . . . with your help and concern we will have victory."

Mrs. Thomas J. Cummins, education chairman of the Suburban Junior Woman's Club, unveiled department plans for the near future, at her home on Lawson Hall Road.

Four Members of the Suburban Juniors will be doing volunteer part-time teaching at the Florence Crittendon School. They also plan to have a librarian from the public library speak there next month on library services in this area.

The Education Department will also be giving time and service to the public library as another important project this year. This will involve four hours a week in the children's room, plus extra duty at Christmas decorating branch libraries.

This busy group plans to honor club members who are teachers during National Education Week.

Now Possible To Shrink Hemorrhoids

And Promptly Stop Itching, Relieve Pain In Most Cases.

Science has found a medication with the ability, in most cases, to relieve pain, itching and shrink hemorrhoids. In case after case doctors proved, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction took place. The secret is Preparation H®. It also soothes irritated tissues and helps prevent further infection. Just ask for Preparation H Ointment or Suppositories.

Miss Sidwell Marries Mr. DeJesu

Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Brown, Jr. of Virginia Beach announce the marriage of her daughter, Miss Patricia Shelton Sidwell, to Francis James DeJesu of Bayville, N.Y., on Oct. 19 at the Chapel of the Virginia Beach Methodist Church at 7:30 p.m. Miss Mildred Long officiated.

Mr. DeJesu is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph DeJesu of Bayville, N.Y.

The bride was given in marriage by her step-father, M.W. Brown, Jr.

The maid of honor was Miss Irene Wilson of Virginia Beach, and Miss Debra Shelton, sister of the bride, was the junior bridesmaid.

Nicholas DeJesu of Bayville, N.Y., was his brother's best man. Groomsman were Tony Elliott of Hodgenville, Ken, and William Earle of Locke, N.Y.

A reception was held in the church social hall following the wedding. After a wedding trip to San Juan, Puerto Rico, the couple will reside at Virginia Beach.

Chart Checks Hand Washing

Mothers may teach the importance of frequent and thorough handwashing to youngsters by posting a chart on the bathroom wall. Brightly-colored stars, posted under appropriate columns, such as "Before Meals" or "After Play," are awarded each time the child washes his hands.

Morton Myles, designer for Jeunesse, won the 1968 dress citation from the Corduroy Council of America for this two-piece design of thick 'n thin wale cotton corduroy. In smoke white, it's styled with raglan shirt sleeves, high collar, and a skirt swinging from an inverted front pleat.

Children Should Dress Like Children

Today's smart mother looks at more than price when shopping for children's clothes. With all of the modern developments in fabrics and fabric care, plus the mushrooming variety of fashions for the young, she has more to choose from—and more reasons for choosing—than ever before. Where does she start? Home economists advise: look first for maxi-wear and mini-care.

Children may grow out of their clothes, but clothes that grow out of children, because of shrinkage, are a needless waste of money. So the experts recommend that mothers shop first for washability. Washables save time, money and temper!

From the fashion angle, the main thing to watch for in clothes for both boys and girls is simplicity. Avoid the "adult look" in clothes for children, the authorities say. Florence Eiseman, one leading designer of children's clothes, says that the biggest mistake a mother can make is to dress her child to look too old for his or her age. She says there's only one thing worse than a five-year-old boy in long pants, and that's a five-year-old girl in a fur coat.

Children are fetching enough just being children. So Mother is advised to avoid ruffles, frills, trimmings, tiny buttons and other such clutter that just make clothes more complicated to care for. Today's styles offer a wide range of such non-clutter. There are washable cotton knits in simple shifts for little girls and in pants suits for little boys; turtle neck shirts for both; dirndl dresses in drip-dry synthetics; sturdy jeans and jackets in heavy washable corduroys or denim and even the ultra-new washable synthetic leathers in skirts, jackets, pants, vests and caps.

Clothes that require dry cleaning are better left to the adults, who aren't expected to get them soiled as much or as often as youngsters. And the range of washables today is unlimited because modern science has ended the shrinkage nightmare with the development of cold water laundering for everything from heavy duty blue jeans to delicate slips and children's party dresses. The cold treatment also protects the man-made fibers, like Dacron, Orlon and the many other popular synthetics, from stretching.

How about colors in children's clothes? Is there an advantage to pastels over the vivid colors? There used to be. Mothers used to have to beware of bright hues because of the hazards of fading and running. But colors are safer with modern cold water laundering, so the only question to be concerned about when it comes to fashion colors today is that of good looks. Designers say, don't overwhelm the little tots with so much color that they are lost in it. But do remember that most youngsters—and teenagers—are lively, active individuals who are suited to lively active colors and patterns.

Another smart shopping tip is that many of the garments being shown for school and play this year are made of the new durable press fabrics, which are truly a boon for Mother since they lessen the need for ironing. However, it's best to remember that hot water laundering can set wrinkles.

One of the newest shopping innovations is the concept of Active youngsters, whether at play at parties or in school, call for smart clothes—shopping on Mother's part. Modern cold water laundering makes these three designs easy to keep bright and new: (l. to r.) Florence Eiseman's imported Dutch poplin in navy, yellow and white stripes, Joseph Love's captivating Indian look in deer-skin brown cotton Buc-Swade, and Oxford Boysewear's highbilled coverall in glen plaid pinwale corduroy.

guaranteed wear. Some children's clothes are now guaranteed to last for a year from the time of purchase.

All of these modern developments in fabrics and fabric care should make one thing clear to the shopping mother:

there are countless maxi-wear, mini-care advantages today that will save her time, trouble and money!

Lotus: International Attraction or Forgotten Flower?

By Carolyn McAllen

What does the future hold for Virginia Beach's stand of American lotus growing in Tabernacle Creek?

Well, for one thing, the lotus will be featured in a pool in an educational exhibit at Expo '70 at Osaka, Japan in 1970. The Japanese have long taken an interest in the American lotus and its propagation.

For another thing, the local stand, one of the few in the United States, is in serious jeopardy because of stagnant water. In recent years fewer plants and fewer blooms have been produced.

Very aware of the situation are members of the Cape Henry Woman's Club who adopted the lotus as their club flower when the club was formed almost 45 years ago. For 14 years they have sponsored the annual Lotus Festival in cooperation with the Virginia Department of Conservation and Development.

The exact cause of the demise of the lotus has not been pinpointed, but it is suspected that the combination of salt and still water is the main factor. The salt content of the water has risen steadily from 400 to 1000 ppm (parts per million) since Tabernacle Creek near Edgewater was blocked when farm drainage ditches were dredged some years ago. There is also a possibility that the water is polluted, but no test can be made locally, and water samples will have to be sent to Richmond.

The Lotus Gardens, several years ago... (Boice Studios)

The club has been corresponding with the Longwood Gardens in Kennett Square, Pa., a gardens devoted to water plants. Experts there said that 400 ppm is considered brackish and is too high a concentration of salinity for fresh water plants, which the lotus are.

Mrs. Cecil Reed, research chairman of Cape Henry

Woman's Club, wrote an article on the lotus in the summer issue of the American Horticultural Magazine, at the request of the magazine, in which she pointed out that more than six acres of the lotus have disappeared completely from North Bay and "the lotus in the winding creek produces less and less bloom each year." The lotus stand recovered from an earlier setback when it was flooded by salt water during a storm in 1933.

The Cape Henry Woman's Club is seeking a solution. The U. S. Corps of Engineers have pledged their cooperation and have provided maps. At the present time estimates are being taken on the cost of dredging an opening in the creek at the north end to allow circulation of fresh water into the creek. This was the suggestion of the U. S. Department of Conservation. However, Mrs. C. E. Upton, club president; Mrs. Arthur B. James, Lotus Gardens chairman, and Mrs. Reed said the club is open to any help or suggestions it can get from the public.

"This is the best time of the year to do it," said Mrs. James. "We've been told once it's dredged then it won't have to be done again in our lifetime."

"As a club we're interested in conservation of the lotus," added Mrs. Upton.

Since the Cape Henry Woman's Club began sponsoring the Lotus Festival, more than $35,000 has been back into the community by the club by donations to public libraries, the General Hospital of Virginia Beach and scholarships. This year the club awarded $1,200 in scholarships: two for $400 each for teachers, one $400 scholarship for nursing and a $400 grant. "The money is a gift to the recipient, and we do not expect repayment," Mrs. Upton explained.

The club has also purchased land along the creek bank for a small park and picnic area dedicated to the first colonists who landed at Cape Henry.

In addition, Tabernacle Methodist Church, which provides lunches for visitors to the Festival, has painted its church inside and out and almost built a parsonage from their luncheon profits.

When settlers landed in Virginia in 1607, they found the Indians using the lotus starch, tubers and seeds as food. The tubers are supposed to taste much like sweet potatoes.

Lotus are sacred in India. American lotus are the only ones that are yellow. Others are pink or white. The American lotus used to grow all over the southeast and west to Texas, said Mrs. Reed. But people, industrialization and pollution have caused their disappearance from all but a few places. Other known places where they grow in the U. S. are in Cayuga Lake, N. Y., Monroe, Mich., Boston, Mass. and Wabash, Minn. Our local stand is the largest.

Mrs. Reed said that the lotus is often confused with the water lily, although the lotus is not a member of the lily family. Water lily leaves float on the water, and the native species have white to pink flowers. The flowers of the American lotus stand on stalks elevated three to four feet above the water. The leaves, nearly as tall as the flower stalks, are circular, one to two feet in diameter and are depressed or cup-shaped.

Fred Huette, formerly with the Norfolk Botanical Gardens, told the club that the gardens could be made into an international attraction. He tried unsuccessfully to establish some in the Norfolk Gardens by the Sea, but they were eaten by muskrats. Traps were put out and 250 muskrats were caught in one winter.

Through her research efforts, Mrs. Reed learned of Dr. Ichiro Ogawa, an architectural engineer at the Bureau of Reclamation in Denver. Dr. Ogawa became interested in lotus through the experiments of the late Dr. Ichiro Oga of Japan, who successfully planted and grew lotus from 2000-year-old seeds.

and as they were this year...

Dr. Ogawa arranged to have both plants and seeds of American lotus sent to Japan. The plants did not survive, however the seeds did, but when they bloomed they were white instead of yellow. After testing the water, it was determined that brackish water was required for the yellow blooms. The water was brought close to the level of Tabernacle Creek without salt and yellow blooms were achieved. The plants have done well there and will be used in Expo 70.

A dried lotus is also on display in a shadowbox in the British Museum in the John Clayton collection of early colonial flora of Virginia in the early 17th century. Mrs. W. Emmett Kyle of the club personally delivered it to England.

What is the future of the lovely, yellow blooms? Only time will tell.

This was the scene Wednesday morning as antique dealers began setting up their displays for the Antique Showsale which opens today.

This Is the Weekend to Shop

Today (Oct. 24) is the big opening day for two events in Virginia Beach—the 10th Annual Antique Showsale and the 2nd Annual Pembroke Charities Bazaar.

The Showsale, put on by the Princess Anne Woman's Club of Virginia Beach for the benefit of the Atlantic Mental Hygiene Center, Hospitality House and scholarships, opened at the Civic Center with a ribbon cutting ceremony at 11 a.m. The hours are 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Oct. 24-26 and from 1 to 7 p.m. Oct. 27.

Forty-three dealers from nine states have space in the show. Other features include art donated for sale by professional artists and Angie's Kitchen for snacks.

The Bazaar will be open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Oct. 24 and 25 and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on the 26th. Approximately 120 civic, cultural, recreational and service organizations will participate.

Among the fund raising activities will be boutiques, art sales, country stores, bake sales and many more.

Go to either or both and get your Christmas shopping done early.

Pausing for a cup of coffee at the annual card party and fashion show presented last week by the Women's Club of Chesapeake Beach are, seated left to right, Mrs. J. J. Zepp, Mrs. E. L. Beasley, Mrs. J. C. Gallamore and Mrs. William E. Anderson. Mrs. J. F. Bogdanski, hostess, is pouring. The event was for the benefit of Bay-side Library.

McAllen's ALLEY

By Carolyn McAllen

Grandpa Is a Hippy

"Is Grandpa a Hippy?" asked the seven-year-old innocently, as well she might after we received the new picture of my father.

Grandpa not only has grown a long white beard but a long black mustache to match, the result of a two-week vacation with nothing better to do while staying home.

Now mind you I'm not criticizing my elders, but it has always been my understanding the parents should set an example for their children. My father at 70 is definitely not senile—he still works full time with no intention of retiring.

He claims he started growing it as a joke. Then my mother liked it. What really convinced him was when he ventured into the outside world and a clerk in the neighborhood drug store told him he looked "distinguished".

Then he returned to work. A bunch of the younger men and copy boys had been growing mustaches and sideburns for some time. On my father's second day back at the office there wasn't a pair of sideburns or a mustache left.

He went into the editor's (he works for a newspaper too) office to get a paper signed, and the editor told him he wouldn't sign it until my father shaved off the beard.

This isn't his first attempt. When he was in his 30's he had a beautiful mustache (he grew that one to attract attention too). But it turned gray while the rest of his hair remained black, so he shaved it off. Now the rest of his hair is gray and the mustache is black.

At least he's not letting his hair grow long in back—at least not yet.

Anybody for love beads?

Mrs. John Lilly, Mrs. Lee Beasley, Mrs. W. S. Harwood Jr. and Mrs. Joseph Gawrys display some of the items to be sold in the B.C.A. booth at the Pembroke Charity Bazaar Oct. 24-27.

Hair Today, Gone Tomorrow

By Yatta Jones

For the past few years there has been one innocuous subject that has made almost as much news as the war in Vietnam: long hair. What is it? Hair—long hair, that is... well, long hair on a male to be exact.

How can anything be innocuous that causes such a disturbance? Think... be truthful... when was the last time long hair did anything harmful or useful? After you get past Sampon and Lady Godiva you probably have a hard time recalling any real activity on the part of hair.

As a matter of fact, scientists tell us that hair is on its way out. At one time it had a practical use as protection, but lately it seems to have become just an ornament, and you know what happens to something you don't use.

Now that the fact has been established that hair does nothing and is of no use, you might ask, "Why is it such big news?" On its own, hair isn't news, but somewhere along the way hair has gotten mixed up with character analysis. Many people now think that they can look at a head of hair and tell immediately what kind of person lies at its roots.

This type of reasoning doesn't bother the so-called adults in our society. They are used to being sized-up by the kind of car they drive, the residential section they live in, the clothes they wear. But this type of reasoning does both the teenagers who have yet to learn that a person's value lies not in what he is, but what he has.

Hair seems to be causing more trouble at high schools than anywhere else. It isn't unusual at all to read about, or hear about, some poor, unsuspecting boy with long silky locks who is ejected, threatened and in some cases even taken to the barber by an H.P. (Higher Person) on account of his hair. These H.P.'s may be mothers, fathers, principals... anyone with power enough to make the victim do what he wants to do even if he doesn't want to do it. (A note: "Roger's Thesaurus" lists the word "martyr" as a synonym for "victim".)

There is nothing definite in school policy that determines the length of hair. As long as it is "neat and presentable" it is in line with school policy. (There is a bit of a problem here, for the policy is so loose at Virginia Beach that it leaves itself wide open. What may be "neat and presentable" to the students will be, nine times out of ten, appear to be so to the teachers and principals.) If hair presented no problem in our education system for many years, why now?

Maybe, because hair gets heavy as it gets long, it pulls on the students' brain cells and prevents his learning processes from operating efficiently.

Or, maybe long hair swings more freely and causes a lot of noise, thereby creating a disturbance.

Perhaps the real basis for the argument against long hair goes something like this: "Long hair is bad. Anyone who has long hair is bad. He is bad because he wears long hair. If you wear long hair you will be bad."

Isn't that logic magnificent? Of course long hair is a fad, which probably began with the Beatles. And yet it might have begun with George Washington... he had long hair, too.

As a fad, or a teenage fashion, what is wrong with it? Every other age group has styles and modes, why not the teenagers?

Several students in our local high schools were asked to find out what their contemporaries were thinking along these lines.

Deborah Peebles of Union Kempsville reports that some boys say they are short of money for hair cuts, but most of them wear long hair, or want to wear long hair, because it is the style.

James McCracken of Cox found out that the students themselves place limits on the length of hair. The students agreed that the hair should not hang over the ears, but they did not mind if it grew over the back of the collar a bit.

Most students seem to wish their hair were just a little longer, but they wear it at a length to please their parents and other H.P.'s.

Some students have a real problem. These are the ones who play with one of the various bands in the area. Many of them pay for their school books, buy their clothes and make their spending money this way. For some of them it is a livelihood. They are told by their agents that they have to have long hair. Then they are told by H.P.'s that as long as their hair is long they will be watched for any movement on their part which might be construed as a Wrong Step. Some have been forced to cut their hair, job or no job.

Youth doesn't rebel against authority so much as against useless authority. Hair seems to be creating what might be called "a situation."

Some students may have hair a little too long, since the H.P.'s don't seem to be able to see the student for the hair in a lot of cases.

Rob McCausland, a student at Bayside High School, has a good perspective on the situation. According to him, "... a boy may wear his hair to his wrists or below. It matters not. He is still very much a person. And he is still very much loved... by God."

Libraries Sponsor Contest

The Virginia Beach Public Library System is sponsoring an art contest to celebrate National Children's Book Week Nov. 17-23, for children in grades 1 thru 7.

Three first prizes will be awarded; one from each of the three libraries—Bayside, 22nd Street and Windsor Woods. The winning entry and a number of the better drawings will be exhibited in each branch library during National Children's Book Week.

Contest rules are as follows: (1) The picture must be of a character from a favorite story. (2) The name of the character and the story in which the character appears must be written at the top of the sheet. (3) The entire name, grade, school and home phone number must be at the bottom of the sheet. (4) The picture should be returned to the nearest Branch Library. (5) The contest begins Oct. 30 and ends Nov. 13. (6) Prizes will be awarded on Nov. 15 at 4 p.m. at each Branch Library.

YFC to Lead Teen Study

Youth for Christ is conducting a three day adult seminar, entitled "Adult Institute on Teen Dynamics" at Frank W. Cox High School beginning Oct. 31. The sessions will be from 7-10 p.m. October 31 and Nov. 1, and from 9 a.m. to noon on Nov. 2. They are designed to benefit ministers and youth workers, parents of teenagers, Sunday school teachers, youth advisors and adults working with such groups as Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Pioneer Girls and Christian Service Brigade.

The seminar is an exhaustive study on teenagers. Jim DiRaddo, associate director of Manhattan Christian Youth Service, will be one of the featured speakers at the seminar. Gary Dausy, associate director of Leadership Training for YFC, and Franklyn Miller, regional director of YFC, will also speak at the seminar sessions.

A registration fee of $10 per person will be charged. This fee will include admission to all classes, a Teen Dynamics Notebook, The Youth Leaders' Resource Digest and a bonus of one year subscription to "Campus Life Magazine."

There is an associate registration fee of $5 for each subsequent member of a family attending, which will provide admission to all classes.

Lions, Libraries Seek Book Needs of Blind

Donnell Davis of the Golden Plaza Lion's Club has announced a two-fold year's project for the club: acquainting the public with the Library of Congress' books-for-the-blind and physically handicapped program and purchasing large print books and periodicals for the local library.

Davis feels that many people are unaware of the facilities provided by the Library of Congress program. Requirements for eligibility in the program are simple—person eligible for the program needs only to submit certification of his disability, which may be obtained from a doctor, optometrist, registered nurse or hospital staff member. Any of the Virginia Beach branch libraries has detailed information on this program.

The program supplies reprint record players, talking books and books and magazines in Braille. The program is so complete that even the postage is paid on the books by the Federal government.

The talking books and the large print books which the Lion's Club is interested in purchasing are available in current best sellers as well as classics. "In Cold Blood" by Truman Capote and "A Story of Nat Turner" by William Styron are examples of books of interest to adults. Elizabeth Speare's "The Witch of Blackbird Pond," a Newbery Medal book, is a young adult book and Hugh Lofting's "Story of Dr. Doolittle" is available for children.

At present there is an average of 10 large print books at each branch library here, according to Mrs. Doris Finnegan, a librarian at Windsor Woods. The Golden Plaza Lion's Club will purchase more of the books as well as large print periodicals as soon as they have had a chance to study the needs of the community.

Mrs. Finnegan and Davis have both stressed the importance of having interested Virginia Beach residents contact the library in reference to the proposed purchase of the large print books and periodicals.

Dome Set for Winter

Samuel W. Scott Jr., director of the Virginia Beach Civic Center has released the following schedule of events to take place at the Civic Center in October: Oct. 22-27, Princess Anne Women's Club Antique Show, all day each day; Oct. 30, "Sidney Kellam Night" dinner from 6 p.m. to 12 a.m.

This schedule is subject to change. Further information may be obtained by calling the Civic Center office, 428-8000. Events scheduled for November include: The Baja Marimba Band (Nov. 9), the Annual Cabaret Follies (Nov. 15-16), and the Firemen's Ball (Nov. 30).

Conventions scheduled at the Civic Center for 1969 include: the Virginia Baptist Men's Convention, March 14-16; the International Association of Arson Investigators, April 14-18; the Southern Conference of the United Church of Christ, April 22-23.

Other conventions scheduled for the area in 1969 are; the First Annual Meeting of the Virginia Conference, Women's Society of Christian Service and Wesleyan Service Guild at their headquarters hotel, the marina; the Elementary School Principals Conference of Virginia at their headquarters hotel the Americana; and the State Jaycee Convention, May 16-18, at their headquarters, The Cavalier.

The Virginia Association of Rescue Squads will convene Sept. 24-26, 1970 at the Virginia Beach Civic Center.

Tentatively scheduled for 1970 are: the Virginia Commonwealth Bankshare Annual Meeting, May 23; the Virginia Bar Association, June 11-13; and the Mid-Atlantic Shrine Convention, Sept. 17-20.

Definite commitments for 1971 include: the State Lions International Convention, May 20-22; the Virginia Methodist Conference, June 14-17; and the Virginia Municipal League, Sept. 26-28.

Safety Group to Give Programs

Dr. Robert W. Waddell, president of the Virginia Beach Safety Council, announced at the October luncheon meeting last Thursday, at Bow Creek Country Club, that a speakers bureau has been set up within the Council.

The bureau consists of members of the Safety Council and will be available to any club in the area upon request. Films covering all the facets of safety at home, at the office, on the road and in the water are invaluable and easy for the bureau to obtain from various safety-oriented institutions.

If a club or civic organization would like a speaker from the

Dr. Waddell

Safety Council Speakers Bureau, address the request to: P. O. Box 6163, Princess Anne Station, Virginia Beach, Va. 23456. The above address is also applicable if a club or civic group wishes to make a donation to the Safety Council. The Council is supported only by contributions which are used to insure a well-functioning Council.

5 Trustees Join Board

Five new members joined the Board of Trustees of Virginia Wesleyan College Oct. 16. The Board held its annual fall meeting at the College at that time.

The five new Trustees are the Hon. Porter Hardy, Jr., Bishop Paul M. Herlick of Richmond, Edwin C. Kellam, R. Cosby Moore and Mrs. H. W. Rogers, all of Norfolk.

This brings the total number on the Virginia Wesleyan Board of Trustees to 26.

Any disease or ailment an expectant mother has should be known to the doctor to avoid possible complications for both the mother and child.

Mail Parcels Overseas

The time to think about mailing Christmas parcels to members of the armed forces overseas is now, according to Virginia Beach Postmaster Joseph T. Crosswhite, Jr.

The following periods have been designated: (1) Surface Transportation—Oct. 14 to Nov. 9 (2) SAM (Space Available Parcel Airlift)—Oct. 21 to Nov. 23. When appropriate gift parcels weighing not more than five pounds and measuring not more than 60 inches in length and girth combined, addressed to members of the armed forces overseas, will be provided air-lift service on a space-available basis from the postal concentration centers even though prepaid at the surface rate. Such parcels will be endorsed with the large letters SAM by accepting postal employees. (3) PAL—Oct. 28 to Nov. 30. PAL parcels will be endorsed as such upon payment of the $1 fee. (4) Airmail—Nov. 30 to Dec. 11.

Addresses must be legible and complete and should be prepared by typewriter or pen and ink. The APO and FPO numbers must be shown on all mail.

Crosswhite explained that the term "Armed Forces Overseas" includes personnel of the Armed Forces, members of their families, and the U. S. civilians employed overseas who receive their mail through an APO or FPO, New York, San Francisco or Seattle.

All articles should be packed in boxes of wood, metal, solid fiberboard or strong double faced corrugated fiberboard. All fiberboard boxes should be securely wrapped in heavy paper and well tied with strong cord. Sufficient cushioning material should be used to prevent any rattling or loosening of articles within the package. A slipshowing list of contents, and name and address of sender and addressee should be enclosed. Forms 3968 of 3976-A, Customs Declaration, completed by the senders are required on parcels to many destinations.

Police To Display New Flag

Further prestige and honor will come to the Virginia Beach Police Department on Nov. 11 when the police honor guard will display, for the first time publicly, during Veteran's Day ceremonies the recently approved police departmental flag.

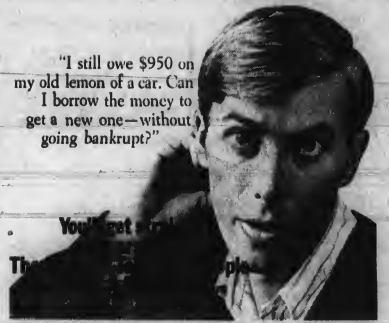

The flag, which has been completed at the expense of members of Princess Anne F. O. P., Lodge #8, was designed by Sgt. Kenneth A. Belanga of the Traffic Bureau.

The flag consists of the shoulder patch worn by all uniformed police officers, containing the official seal of the City, resting on a field of grayish blue, the color of the police uniforms, and is trimmed in a gold piping. Officials said Veteran's Day was chosen for the first official display of the flag as an additional means of paying tribute to police officers who gave their lives in the line of service to their country, as well as the city of Virginia Beach.

Will Apples Replace Toothbrush?

(Editor's note: Here is another in the series on home horticulture by Wesley P. Jenkins, extension specialist in horticulture at Virginia Tech.)

Can you watch a young boy eating a crisp juicy apple without having your own mouth watering? There is nothing quite like the sweet and tangy taste of this fine fruit.

The apple has become a delightful American heritage even though it is not a native of this continent. Like many of the fine people in this country, the apple is an immigrant from Europe.

The apple is so old historically that we do not know of the single wild form, to which its ancestry can be traced. It is one of the oldest of cultivated fruits and was grown in Greece as early as 600 years before the time of Christ. The wild ancestors of the apple probably originated in the mountainous regions between the Black and Caspian seas in southwest Asia. Large forests of apple trees, showing great variation in fruit characteristics, are found in this area.

The small wild apples were such good food that they were carried by animals and man into Europe before the dawn of civilization. The prehistoric lake dwellers of northern Italy and Switzerland used dried apples as an important item in their diet.

Virginia is one of the most important apple producing states in the U. S. The crop is usually in excess of 10 million bushels per year. Over half of this huge crop is processed into applesauce or apple slices and canned for use during seasons when fresh apples are not readily available.

Apples are among the most healthful of fruits. They are relatively low in vitamins which we hear so much about, but have two very unique and outstanding health promoting qualities which no other fruit possesses to the same degree.

The chewing of apples cleans the teeth better than any brush and dental cleanser you can buy. This has been demonstrated in several experiments. Therefore, for a healthful, tooth-polishing snack after school, let the young folks eat apples.

Another important benefit from eating apples is the bulk which is added to the diet. This improves the digestion processes of people of all ages, especially for infants and our senior citizens. Apples are also excellent for figure watchers. Their relatively low nutrient value is a welcome addition to the menu of those who wish to stay slim and active.

Apples can be used in many ways to add interest and variety to meals. Start the day right by putting some applesauce in your pancake or waffle batter. It adds moisture, lightness and flavor which will delight your family, or, make your pancakes and waffles as usual, but use applesauce on top instead of syrup. It is tasty and less fattening. Fried apples are also an excellent breakfast treat.

Apple pie is always a favorite dessert, but try some cobbler or baked apple for variety. A quick and easy dessert may be prepared from applesauce with a scoop of vanilla ice cream. Regardless of how you use them, apples are good and good for you.

VIRGINIA BEACH Garden Club News

Thalia Garden Club
The members of the Thalia Garden Club had their speaker this Oct. 16 the landscape designer of the Norfolk Botanical Gardens, Mrs. E. W. Timmons who is a graduate of VPI. She used slides to show the beauty that can be achieved by proper planning.

Members present were treated to a lunch planned and served by Mrs. J. F. Eaton, Mrs. J. W. Fowles, Mrs. L. L. Kee and Mrs. R. D. Morrisette.

Birchwood Garden Club judged the arrangements this month and awarded the following ribbons: (Gold) Mrs. Walter Englett Jr., (Blue) Mrs. O. W. Self Jr., (Red) Mrs. J. R. Cromwell, Mrs. O. W. Self Jr., Mrs. A. V. Kuhn, Mrs. Walter Englett Jr. and a yellow one to Mrs. Walter Englett Jr.

Thalia Garden Club will have an array of lovely things on display to sell within Pembroke Mall during the 2nd Annual Charities Bazaar Oct. 24-27.

Birchwood Garden Club
The members of the Birchwood Garden Club will have a rummage sale Saturday, Oct. 26 to raise money for club projects.

The sale will begin at 8 a.m., in front of the S. G. Hampton Produce Co. at Virginia Beach Blvd. and Birdneck Road.

Thoroughgood
The Thoroughgood Garden Club met Oct. 9 at the home of Mrs. M. F. McAfee on Wakefield Drive with Mrs. W. H. Harrison presiding.

Plans for the Club's Annual Christmas Bazaar were presented and accepted by the Club. The Bazaar will be held at the Hermitage Elementary School on Saturday, Nov. 9, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Thoroughgood Garden Club will sponsor a Junior-Intermediate Garden Club with Mrs. M. A. Glass as counselor. The following officers were elected, President, Beverly Glass; Vice-president, Susan Lindemann; Secretary, Carol Hanna, and Treasurer, Jane Simmons. This club will be known as the Thoroughgood Junior-Intermediate Garden Club and will meet monthly at 4 p.m. on Fridays.

An interesting program was given by Mrs. P. C. Morris on "Flower Arranging as You Like It". Mrs. Morris is a National Accredited Flower Show Judge, and she later orally judged the monthly exhibits and awarded ribbons to Mrs. L. W. Tilt, Mrs. F. A. Manning, Mrs. R. E. Brinkhouse, Mrs. H. M. Jordan, Mrs. A. R. Brunell and Mrs. M. A. Glass.

Cape Henry-by-the-Sea
Cape Henry-by-the-Sea Garden Club was presented with a citation from the National Council of State Garden Clubs in recognition of its 100 per cent participation in the Permanent Home Fund. The award was given at the meeting of the Tidewater District of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs last week in Norfolk.

The club also has honored its president, Mrs. Delmar John Dee Sr., with a Life Membership in the National Council and 100 per cent Life Membership for all members in the Virginia Federation.

Mystery Adds to Festivities

If you and your friends enjoy mystery stories and fancy yourselves experts in the art of sleuthing, give a "Whodunit?" party for Halloween. To give it a costume-party touch, ask each guest to wear or carry some object which will identify him with his favorite murder-mystery characters.

Set up quiz or guessing games and decorate your home with mysterious objects. Keep your arrangements simple... but be sure to plan some special eats for those keen appetites.

Set up your food buffet-style, in another room if possible. "Mystify" your guests with individual golden-brown pastries which look and taste extra-special, but are actually only portions of stew baked in pastry. Prepare and serve them from an automatic buffet skill that keeps them at just the right serving temperature. You don't have to worry about potatoes and bread with these pastries, just some colorful vegetables. For dessert, something special and sweet will top off the whole evening.

When a patio joins house walls directly, the harsh right angle can be softened by setting large wooden planter boxes against the house.

The cuttings, after they have rooted, should be transplanted to regular potting soil, watered well to firm the soil around the roots and placed in a bright light, but not in direct sunlight.

For those who like to "watch things grow", rooted cuttings are a rewarding experience.

Oceana Wives
The Oceana Wives Club held an Open House Oct. 9 at Bell-Taylor House, the residence of the Commanding Officer of the Oceana Naval Air Station.

Proceeds from the event went to TARC, the Tidewater Association for Retarded Children and the Ocean Base Nursery.

Prunes fit into menus easily all through the day. Cover cooked prunes with Port wine and allow to stand several hours. Serve for dessert with a scoop of soft ice cream on top. Quick and easy and a good dessert after a full meal.

For Halloween or anytime in the fall, a perfect dinner might include a Meatball Pie topped with cheese pumpkins and with iced peanut butter cookies for dessert.

Treat Family on Halloween

Delight your family, young and old alike, with a really autumn menu for Halloween.

Start with a cheesy Halloween Meatball Pie and add Pumpkin Cookies for dessert.

HALLOWEEN MEATBALL PIE Crust:
2 c. flour
1 tsp. salt
1 c. shredded Cheddar cheese
1/3 c. plus 2 tsp. shortening
4 tsp. water.

Mix together flour, salt and cheese. Cut in shortening thoroughly. Sprinkle with water, a tsp. at a time, mixing with fork until flour is moistened. Gather into ball. Roll half of pastry 1/2" larger than inverted 9" pie pan. Ease into pan. Pour filling into pan. Cover with top crust which has slits in it. Seal and flute. Cover edge with 1/2 inch strip of foil to prevent excessive browning. Bake 30 minutes in 425 degree oven. Trim with pumpkins molded from processed cheese and score with wooden pick. 6 servings.

FILLING
1 lb. ground beef
1/4 c. fine dry bread crumbs
2/3 c. chopped onion
2 tsp. salt
Dash of pepper
1/2 c. milk
2 tsp. margarine
1/3 c. chopped onion
1/4 c. chopped green pepper

1 can (1 lb.) tomatoes
1/2 c. sliced pimiento-stuffed olives
1/4 tsp. pepper
1/4 tsp. garlic salt
1/8 tsp. crushed red pepper
1 can (6 oz.) tomato paste
1/4 c. peanut butter.

Mix ground beef, crumbs, 2/3 cup onion, salt, pepper and milk. Shape into 20 meatballs; brown in margarine in large skillet, turning occasionally. When brown, push meatballs to side. Add 1/3 cup onion and the green pepper; cook until tender. Stir in remaining ingredients except peanut butter; heat to boiling. Remove from heat and stir in peanut butter.

PUMPKIN COOKIES
1/2 c. soft shortening (half margarine)
1/2 c. peanut butter
1/2 c. granulated sugar
1/2 c. brown sugar (packed)
1 egg
1 1/4 c. flour
3/4 tsp. soda
1/2 tsp. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt.

Mix shortening, peanut butter, sugars and egg thoroughly. Blend flour, soda, baking powder and salt. Mix into creamed mixture. Chill. Heat oven to 375 degrees. Roll half of dough at a time 1/8" thick on lightly floured surface. Cut with pumpkin or 3" round cutters. Bake on ungreased baking sheet 6 to 8 minutes. Cool. Frost with icing (below). Add stem of green frosting and score pumpkins with wooden pick. Or decorate with black gumdrop slices in cat shapes. Makes about 4 1/2 doz.

CREAMY ORANGE ICING
In small mixer bowl, blend 2/3 cup soft margarine and 6 cups sifted confectioners' sugar. Stir in about 1/3 cup orange juice concentrate. Reserve 1/3 cup frosting for stems; color green. To remainder, add red and yellow food color to obtain desired shade of orange.

Cards Give Enjoyment To Children

Cards are royally good entertainment for any age.

Children have their own favorite card sets—Animal Rummy, Authors and such—but they soon go on to grown-up decks.

Kings and queens and jacks become as familiar as the juvenile pictures on their early play sets. Card playing remains a popular pastime all through the years.

Did you know that various attempts have been made to change playing card designs?

A useful book called Card Games for Children, published by Whitman Publishing Company of Racine, Wis., contains many game ideas and fills us in on some card lore, too.

For instance, when Americans began to print their own decks it was decided to do away with all traces of monarchy. One patriotic manufacturer used the picture of George Washington as President of Hearts, while John Adams' picture replaced the King of Diamonds, and Franklin and Lafayette headed Clubs and Spades. The goddesses of Love, Wisdom, Fortune and Harvests substituted for the four Queens. Four Indian chiefs replaced the Knaves.

But English cards were so popular that the democratic deck never made headway. Today we still use the fifty-two-card pack with its colorful old symbols.

One of the simple games pre-schoolers can play with the standard deck is war. A pack is divided and stacked face down. The object is to win all. Each youngster plays a top card and the high takes the others. Decks of cards are always in favor for fortune-telling. Making up fortunes adds to the fun.

Magic tricks, too, are easy to learn with brief instructions and a fresh deck for practice.

Luckily, cards are widely available at local stores, and if you bring a new deck home you'll get a cheering reception.

Kings and Queens enjoy a happy reign in the household hobby room.

Keeping ice cream, under any conditions, calls for care. Meadow Gold home economists point out. Well-made ice cream, whether homemade or purchased, loses some of its velvety texture if it is handled too much. Remember, the richer the ice cream mixture, the lower the freezing and storing temperature required. So keep the control turned as low as possible, especially for long storage.

LIVESTOCK-PETS

Race for Team Standings Shape Up

The 1968 football season for Virginia Beach high schools is already more than half over and the races are beginning to shape up. As the seventh game approaches for most city schools, only First Colonial figures in major contention for the Eastern District crown.

The Patriots currently lead the district with six consecutive wins, having scored 130 points in all games against only 19 for all their opponents. But First Colonial still ranks behind Maury in the statewide standings. Maury is ranked eighth, tied with Tazewell, while First Colonial this week grabbed the tenth spot in the standings, up one rung from last week.

Granby is ranked 11th statewide and also just behind the Patriots in the Eastern District. Patriots in the Eastern District. Granby has played one less game than First Colonial and is undefeated, as is Maury, which has played only four games. Behind Granby comes Norview, which has lost one game, followed by Kellam and Cox. The other three Virginia Beach schools in the district, Bayside, Kempville and Princess Anne are winless and bring up the rear.

Oddly enough, Princess Anne is placed dead last in the district, having scored only 27 points, against 123 for its opponents. Last year at this time Princess Anne was undefeated and on the way to an undefeated season and a share of the state crown.

The eastern district championship may well be decided on Nov. 1 when First Colonial meets Maury on the Patriots' home ground. Should the Patriots win that one an undefeated season is a distinct probability, since First Colonial does not play Granby this season. However, should Maury win it, the district championship may have to wait until Thanksgiving Day and the traditional turkey day clash between Maury's Commodores and Granby's Comets. If First Colonial can get by Maury, the district crown, as predicted before the season began, will be closer to a reality, and a high ranking statewide berth should also be a result.

This weekend First Colonial takes on the Southeastern District's cellar dweller, the Churchland Truckers, who have not won a game and have only scored 12 points all season. Last weekend the Patriots overpowered Indian River 32-6 on a sharp attack by the Patriot offense. As usual Les Whiteborne, John Crimstead and Bob Wareing led the ground attack that turned the tide, especially in the second quarter, when the Patriots scored 20 points.

First Colonial should win easily over Churchland this weekend the Commodores of Maury will undoubtedly be trying to stop that ground attack and force the weaker passing offense into action.

The Kellam-Princess Anne game last weekend was a real disappointment to Cavalier fans, who hoped to see PA win its first game of the season for Homecoming. The Cavaliers built up an impressive 13-0 halftime lead, but an inspired Kellam team held them scoreless in the second half while scoring 19 points to win it 19-13. The Knight's versatile quarterback, Mike Futrell was again a standout, especially on the final touchdown pass to John Grady. Ironically enough, the son of the PA coach. Interceptions spelled defeat for the Cavaliers in the second half.

Mike Futrell (12) races through the Cavalier defense on the way to one of the three second half touchdowns that won the game for the Knights.

Ball? Ball? What Ball? Both Cox and Kempville players appear to be looking everywhere but the right place for the football.

Kellam, now with four consecutive victories after two defeats, takes on a highly improved Cox team this weekend, and while this may be a close one, the Knights should run their victory string to five. Cox last weekend romped to victory over Kempville, 32-13, after being shutout in the last two games. The Falcons won their season opener over Bayside, then went down to four straight defeats before downing the Chiefs. But don't count Kempville out yet. The Chiefs could win at least one ball game yet, even if it had to be the last one of the season against Bayside. The Chiefs are young and inspired and this weekend could give Princess Anne more competition than the Cavaliers bargain for.

No matter who wins that game, one team will have broken the losing streak and will finally register one win. The way these two teams have been playing, it's anybody's ball game, but the Cavaliers should finally score a win against Kempville, which incidentally has no senior class and can be looked to as a future power of the Eastern district.

Bayside's Marlins take this weekend off, conceivably to heal the wounds, suffered at the hands of Cradock last weekend. The so-so Admirals stunned the Marlins in a first half scoring spurt. The first half ended with the score the same as it was at the end of the game, 20-0. The Bayside team finished the game with an embarrassing minus 8 yards offensively, while Cradock moved easily on the ground and in the air. It was all the Marlins could do to hold the Admirals in the second half. The following weekend Bayside meets a serious Norview team.

Susan Woolf is crowned homecoming queen of Princess Anne High School at halftime by Biff Pearson. Robert McBurney is her escort.

Michele Wood was crowned homecoming queen of Cox High School at halftime ceremonies. Her escort is Bill Rea. Cox also won the football game.

Union Kempville was supposed to play G. W. Carver of Newport News last weekend, but the date was never settled and UK had the weekend off after scoring three wins and one loss. The wins have been impressive and the loss was by one touchdown. The cancellation of last weekend's game was explained by Coach Josh Darden who said it was difficult for his team to get a match since this is to be the last season for the school. This weekend, Union Kempville takes on Westside and is expected to win in spite of the layoff. Last week's scores: Kellam 19, Princess Anne 13, Cox 32, Kempville 13, First Colonial 32, Indian River 6, Cradock 20, Bayside 0. Predictions: Kellam over Cox, Princess Anne over Kempville.

Spanish Club Visits Ship

By Ouida Byington
First Colonial High School

Memorizing everyday Spanish expressions is certainly helpful when attempting to converse with South Americans, as the Spanish Club members of First Colonial High School learned recently.

Welcomed aboard as the guests of the crew of the Columbian destroyer Admiralante Tono, the members had an opportunity to practice the Spanish they had learned in two to four years of class drills.

After being greeted the students were lead through narrow passageways to the stateroom of Capt. Uribe. There they were served Columbian coffee, coke for the non-coffee drinkers, and a dissertation on Columbian culture. Capt. Uribe talked to the students in "slow" Spanish while Mrs. Stone, Spanish teacher at First Colonial, translated that which they did not understand.

The students were given an opportunity to question Capt. Uribe about the teens in Columbia and were surprised to learn that their activities were much the same as ours. They like pizza, hotdogs and short skirts.

When Capt. Uribe had answered all the questions, the midshipmen invited the students to their mess hall where they presented two Spanish record albums to the club. Some of the students chatted in Spanish with the men, while others danced to the music of the crews improvised band.

Before the students departed they gathered on the fan tail for pictures and final good-bys and "Gracias".

Kempville Club Is Busy

by Debbie Bowman

Kempville High School

One of Kempville High School's newest and most active clubs is the Keyette Club, whose main objective is to aid the community.

The Keyettes were formed in April at Kempville and completed two successful projects before the year's end, which consisted of an Easter egg hunt and a bake sale.

They have begun this year under the direction of their president, Kaye Halsey, by holding a car and window wash. The Keyettes have plans for bake sales, collections for needy persons, Christmas parties for underprivileged children and various school projects.

Club officers, in addition to Kaye Halsey, are Jeanie Yost, vice president; Kitty Turner, secretary; and Patti Tullock, treasurer. The club sponsors are Mrs. Gavin and Miss Franklin.

Local Dancer Joins Company

Barbara Fisher of Virginia Beach has joined The Atlanta Ballet, America's newest professional dance company and the only professional dance company in the Southeast, announced Robert Barnett, artistic director of the company.

Miss Fisher studied dance at the Atlanta School of Ballet, the Janice Ferguson School of Dance and the Norfolk Civic Ballet in Virginia Beach. She has previously danced in The Atlanta Ballet's productions of "Giselle" and "Aida."

Miss Fisher will be a permanent member of The Atlanta Ballet company and will make her first appearance on the stage of the Alliance Theater in the new 13-million dollar Atlanta Memorial Arts Center. "This year, our first year, as a professional ballet company, is an important one to us," stated Barnett, "and we have searched extensively to find the most promising dancers in the country, and I am delighted to say that I look for great things from Miss Fisher."

The surgeon general of the U.S. estimates that 18 million Americans have quit smoking since 1964.

Travel Directors to Visit

Virginia Beach is being visited this month by five of the foremost travel directors in Canada.

The group, who will be guests of the Virginia Travel Council and its members, will inspect Virginia Attractions, accommodations and facilities for eight days. This is the fourth tour conducted by the Council exclusively for Canadian travel personnel.

The directors, representing oil company, tour bureau, newspaper vacation and travel bureau, motor club tour offices and the Ontario Provincial Travel Office visited the Winchester and Northern Shenandoah Valley area on Oct. 19 and other sections of the Valley later in the week.

They have then been scheduled to proceed to Richmond, Williamsburg, Newport News, Norfolk, Virginia Beach and the Eastern Shore. Following their visit to the shore the group will turn North again, seeing Fredericksburg and Northern-Virginia before returning home Oct. 27.

According to Robert Porterfield, president of the Virginia Travel Council, camping areas and outdoor recreation facilities as well as major attractions will be featured, due to the demand for outdoor recreational information from Canadians, who are furnishing the South with an increasingly large percent of autumn and spring business.

Teen Dance Is Saturday Night

A Teen Dance has been planned for Oct. 26 from 8 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. at the Aragona "Rec" Center. Music for the event will be supplied by "The Barracuda's". All teenagers are invited to attend.

The center is located at 595 DeLaura Lane.

Rumors Still Back Beach Stadium Site

While Norfolk City officials, including Community Promotion Director Deniz Skinner, are categorically denying a report in last week's edition of the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN concerning the recently completed stadium study in Norfolk, strong rumors still persist that would support the claim.

The SUN reported last week that the report which was presented to Norfolk City Council by consultants was not complete and that Dr. Alfred Gobar's consulting group had recommended a primary site in Virginia Beach for the two-stadium complex rather than the Landsdale Circle in Norfolk site in the original report.

It now appears that the study as presented to City Council was in effect complete, but it is reported it did not agree with the original draft which took regional needs into consideration and recommended a site in Virginia Beach.

Dr. Gobar did talk with Virginia Beach Planning Director Patrick Standing about stadium sites in Virginia before drawing his report. The consultant also told Council in Norfolk that he was an economist and did not care about city lines. He added that he was interested only in finding the best site. It was at this point that Skinner pointed out that Norfolk had ordered and paid for the study and the stadiums would be built in Norfolk, according to a Norfolk City Councilman.

One Norfolk City official, who asked not to be identified, said, "The final report mentions Virginia Beach a number of times, and if you read between the lines, it says Virginia Beach would be a better place to build than in Norfolk."

Meanwhile the Norfolk City Planning Commission has approved the Norfolk stadium site, in spite of objections raised by the Southeastern Virginia Regional Planning Commission, which is more interested in regional stadium needs.

Last week's SUN SURVEY asked, "Should the proposed cultural-convention center for Virginia Beach include among its facilities a multi-purpose sports arena to seat 12,000-14,000 as recommended by the feasibility study of the City Planning Dept.?"

Of those who responded, 54 per cent said "No" and 46 per cent said "Yes."

While the public opinion survey does not profess to represent the entire thinking of the residents of Virginia Beach, its does represent the thinking of a cross section of the people who took time to clip out the survey and return it to us. Your attention is called to the lower left hand corner of this page in this edition and in future editions of the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN. The questions will be timely, and the more answers we receive the more correct and responsible the opinion.

Virginia Beach now has a minimum housing code, pending another favorable vote by City Council on Nov. 14 at the next regular meeting. With only one dissenting vote from Pungo Councilman Kenneth Whitehurst, the ordinance was passed on first reading Monday.

The public hearing was considerably shorter than had been expected and few persons appeared to speak on the matter. Nearly all of those who spoke or who sent letters, including representatives from the Tidewater Association of Home Builders and the predominantly Negro Virginia Beach Council on Human Relations, approved the long-sought measure with few reservations.

Some clarifications of language were asked and City Attorney Harry Marshall requested that anyone with a question or anyone suggesting amendments could get in touch with his office. He said that if any amendments were to be made they could be done at the time of passage on second reading.

Whitehurst's objections apparently came because of the lack of consideration for rural housing and housing for itinerant or migratory workers. Otherwise he said he approved of the measure.

The right-of-entry clause for inspection purposes was also discussed, and City Councilman Lawrence E. Marshall, long an advocate of the code, said that houses would not and could not arbitrarily be entered for inspection unless there was a reasonable cause noted from the outside. He also said the new ordinance protects the homeowner from illegal entry because a search warrant is needed. Also it was pointed out that exhaustive appeal procedures are built in, in the event of a violation. These two points were basically responsible for holding up passage of the ordinance for nearly two years after it was originally introduced. Additional federal money will now be available to Virginia Beach upon final passage of the code.

City Manager Roger M. Scott said that personnel are now being trained in the handling of the new code and that methods of enforcing it are now being worked out. Several Councilmen and Scott added that the law will be strictly enforced after some period of time and some surveys have been completed.

Councilmen met in closed session for about a half hour prior to the general meeting and agreed to submit a sealed bid on the Penn-Central Railroad property at Little Creek. The deadline for submitting bids was yesterday and the bids were expected to be opened today or tomorrow.

CBS Keeps Eye on London Bridge

Next Tuesday night one precinct in Virginia Beach will be watched nationwide, London Bridge precinct, which has about 1,200 voters, has been selected by the CBS network as one of its national key precincts.

Edward Brogan, Virginia Beach campaign manager for the Humphrey-Muskie-Downing Democratic ticket will report the results of the London Bridge precinct to CBS via computer. Brogan said he has to follow a given procedure and that the computer had to be programmed to his voice. It will accept no other voice, and the message must be read exactly as programmed.

Brogan added that CBS is holding a rehearsal of the system before election day to make certain all is working well. He said he was not certain exactly why London Bridge precinct had been chosen, but that he thought it was because of the cross section of economic and racial elements living within the precinct. He also said that the density of population in the relatively small area could be a factor.

According to Brogan the London Bridge figures will be fed into the national computer and used in an early prediction analysis by the Columbia Broadcasting Corp.

This election marks another first in Virginia Beach. The early bird prognosticator, Wash Woods precinct, is no more. It was combined with Sigma Precinct with the advent of voting machines in all precincts in Virginia Beach.

The entire voting population of Wash Woods usually voted at one time and usually in a bloc. Since the precinct had less than ten registered voters the results were known quite early in the morning. Those results were sought after statewide and even nationally, since the voters had an uncanny record of voting for winners, even if the rest of the city or state did not. Many have bemoaned the loss of Wash Woods precinct as another loss of Americana, but voting officials point out the folly of putting an expensive voting machine in a small precinct.

With voting machines now installed citywide, results of all races at stake in this election are expected to be fully known by about 9:30 at the latest, according to estimates of voting officials. That could be subject to change if there are many absentee ballots to count. The absentee ballot activity was brisk in the closing days before election.

While campaign activity has been brisk in Virginia Beach in the presidential race, none of the six major candidates ever visited the city and there were few large campaign demonstrations on the part of any candidate.

Most of the work was handled in the precinct. Workers representing all three candidates for President canvassed neighborhoods drumming up votes for Vice Pres. Hubert Humphrey, Richard Nixon or George Wallace. The campaigning was considered quiet in the wake of other recent campaigns in Virginia Beach.

A record turnout of voters is expected to go to the polls Tuesday from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m., but not even seasoned prognosticators are making an estimate concerning who will win in the city. They say too many are either undecided or just not saying.

Congressman Thomas N. Downing, opposed for re-election to his sixth term in the House of Representatives by Rev. J. C. Fauntleroy, Jr., and James S. Stafford, both of Newport News, did visit Virginia Beach two weeks ago for a campaign rally at Bow Creek Country Club. The meeting was attended by Democrats from all factions of the party in Virginia Beach. Downing's campaign in Virginia Beach was handled by Del. Kenneth Whitehurst, Jr., and B. R. Middleton. A Downing victory is considered a certainty over the token opposition.

Gala Honors Kellam

Nearly a thousand people filled the Virginia Beach Civic Center last night for the $15-a-plate gala honoring Sidney S. Kellam of Virginia Beach.

The committee which planned the event for more than a year as a testimonial for Kellam noted that it was quite pleased with the turnout. Attendance was by invitation only.

The Lester Lanin orchestra provided music for the evening, which was billed as the "Friends of Sidney Kellam" night.

Kellam was presented with a gold guest book signed by all those who attended. Notables from all over Virginia came to honor Kellam for his long service to the Democratic Party, the state of Virginia and Virginia Beach.

A special souvenir menu featured pictures and words of Kellam, often referred to as "Mr. Democrat".

Kellam

Besides the Kellam family head table guests included First District Congressman Thomas N. Downing, Gov. Mills E. Godwin, Jr., Mayor Frank A. Dusch and Clayton Shoemaker, chairman of the planning committee for the occasion.

Kellam said he was grateful so many of his friends turned out to honor him in this manner.

Beach Gets U.S. Funds

The Office of Education in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare announced Oct. 24 that $91 million of impact funds would be released, thereby giving Virginia Beach Schools their allotted $484,000 of the funds.

Virginia Beach School Supt. E. E. Brickell received the news of the release of the funds Thursday morning from Oscar Rhodes, superintendent of schools in Midwest City, Okla.

The funds are not an addition to present operating expenses for the schools, since the money had already been figured into the year's budget. The move means that schools will get money which they had depended on in the first place.

The federal impact aid has been held up since an economy drive by Congress last year. The appropriation was passed twice; once with a time limit which was allowed to lapse, and a second time minus the time limit and with a clause exempting the funds from the economy cut.

Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans explains to Council the problem concerning the alley at his home.

Zoning Headaches Grow

Zoning, land and land use, as usual, consumed much of the time of City Council Monday, and the prospect for even more time is likely. One important matter was deferred for 30 days, and Council faces a 24-item zoning docket at its next regular meeting on Nov. 14.

In addition the City Planning Commission faces a 44-item docket which will reach Council in December.

Council Monday approved after a two week deferral a request of the Thalia Wayside Corporation for a zoning change on property north of Virginia Beach Blvd. and east of Thalia Road for 458 high-rise, high-rent apartments and townhouses.

The matter was delayed when School Supt. E. E. Brickell said the 150 to 300 children that might live in the apartments could not attend the already full Thalia School, in approving the action Council pointed out that school officials had agreed that Thalia School could be added to in the next four to six years in which the development will be built to accommodate adequately the number of students. A meeting was held between developers, Council and school officials to work out the problems.

An application of William M. Campbell for a zoning change from residential to commercial on Smoke Road and Independence Blvd. was denied.

The opening of an alley or part of an alley behind homes on Atlantic Avenue between 51st and 52nd Streets was deferred for thirty days when it appeared all residents could not agree on the alley opening. Council had recommended that only a part of the alley be opened to allow all residents normal ingress and egress, but Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans, who lives in one of the homes, asked that Council move the entrance a few feet to help his property. Another resident then objected. Had the alley been opened all the way it would have passed within two feet of Evans' house. An apparent error was made when the house was built. Because of objections the matter was delayed.

Residents of the Great Neck Manor Civic League appeared before Council to protest past and future expansion of the Frere Jacques School Inc. at the end of Harbour Lane, also the entrance to Great Neck Manor.

While some confusion developed between Inspections Division Supt. John Gibbs, Planning Dept. representatives and Council on the school's right to build two new buildings to accommodate more students, (See "Zoning", p. 2)

The 19-year Burroughs Veteran served two years as district manager in Atlanta, Ga., prior to his recent appointment.

Davis to Manage Branch

Donald D. Davis has recently joined the staff of Atlantic Permanent Savings and Loan Association of Norfolk.

Davis, a lifelong resident of the city was graduated from Cranby High School and attended Old Dominion College. He comes to the association after seven years as account executive with Association Mortgage Co. of Virginia. He is also a graduate of the School of Mortgage Banking, Northwestern University.

According to H.L. Dougherty, president, of the 74 year old Tidewater firm, Davis will manage the association's new branch office to be built at Great Bridge in Chesapeake.

Davis

The turning of a guy into a doll as a retribution for his life-long love-and-leave-it tactics, is the amusing theme of "Goodbye Charlie", the comedy being presented at the Lake Wright Playhouse.

Lyn Howard is the star of this play by George Axelrod, author of "The Seven Year Itch". She is appearing in the role that Lauren Bacall played when "Goodbye Charlie" first delighted New York audiences with its tale of a $3,000-a-week Hollywood screen-writer and his co-maintenance for having made successful passes at every dame he met, until one outraged husband finished him off with a pistol as he was trying to wriggle through a yacht's port-hole.

The comedy's fun stems from the fact that this good-time Charlie doesn't stay finished off. Through a twist of sardonic fate, he is reincarnated as a lovely woman in order to see what it's like to be a cool Don Juan's uncherished conquest.

William Jon Camp Portrays the friend whose old comradship with Charlie turns into romance as Charlie himself learns to be a lady. Other members of the cast of this comedy include Theresa Stallings, Judy Williams, Bryon Predike, Timothy L. Jones has directed the production.

This production will run through Nov. 3, nightly, except Monday, with two shows on Saturdays.

Navy Day Concert Set

A musical event, part of special "Navy Day" festivities in the Tidewater area, will be held in the Little Creek theatre at 3:15 p.m. on Oct. 27.

Featuring the School of Music Faculty Concert Band, the program contains music written by Navy men and civilians. The annual concert serves to foster relationship between the Navy and the community.

Nikolai Rimski-Korsakov's "Scherzade", is the story of a Sultan who followed her husband's plans to kill each of his brides after one night of marriage. She saved her life by telling him stories that diverted his attention for 1,001 nights.

Conducted by Lt. Thomas W. Adcock, Commanding Officer of the school, the 62 member School of Music "Wind Symphony" will perform parts III and IV of Korsakov's composition.

Russell Stanger, noted maestro of the Norfolk Symphony, will serve as special guest conductor.

In his third consecutive appearance at the annual concert, Stanger will conduct the ensemble in Hector Berlioz's "The Roman Carnival Overture" and John Philip Sousa's "Hands Across the Sea". A former lieutenant, Sousa entered the Navy upon request, at age 62.

A special tribute to all military men will be presented during the "Armed Forces Medley" conducted by a member of each branch of the Armed Forces. The concert is open to the public.

Harvest Festival Planned

Woodstock Elementary School will hold their Harvest Festival Oct. 26 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the school.

Several events are planned for the day, including a raffle that will give 100 prizes throughout the day, and a Teacher's bake-off (Miss Virginia Beach, Linda Gayle Phillips, will be one of the bake-off judges).

Music will be supplied for the occasion by Sherman Hawley and the Third Level. There will be clowns to keep the young and young-at-heart happy.

At least 31 booths will be displaying wares at the Festival. Some of these are: Charlie Brown Pumpkin Patch, Country Store, Ring Toss, Pitch-a-Nickel, Bean Bag Toss, Duck Pond, White Elephant Sale, Needlework Shop, Bake Sale and Cake Shop and a Novelty Shop.

TVDC to Have Annual Meeting

The Tidewater Virginia Development Council has scheduled its annual meeting Nov. 22 in the "Colonial Room" of the Monticello Hotel in Norfolk. A reception will be held at 6:30 p.m. and dinner at 7:15 p.m.

Officers will be elected at the meeting and a report will be made on the Council's activities for the year. According to W. Fred Duckworth, president of the Council, many changes are taking place in the industrial development of Tidewater Virginia and many new programs must be studied and utilized in order to take advantage of the rapid advancement of all industrialization.

Report Points Up Needs

The recently completed analysis of the Virginia Beach police department by the Fraternal Order of Police Associates (FOPA) contained recommendations for additional modernization of the department's equipment.

One of the major items recommended by the FOPA study is a mobile crime laboratory. Such a laboratory would help police officers with the technical evidence required in criminal investigation at the scene of a crime. A mobile lab would also provide more complete processing of evidence at crime scenes, better preservation of evidence and a much more complete record of conditions as they existed at the time of the crime.

In discussing the FOPA recommendations, police officials of the city's police department

It was indicated that such a laboratory could be obtained and put into operation, for about $5,500. The final figure would depend on the type of laboratory and the equipment it would contain. Several men now employed by the police department are qualified in the use of a mobile crime laboratory and could serve as instructors to train other officers.

Other modernization suggested includes providing the department with remote data processing equipment. Such a unit would allow a more minute cataloging of information obtained through police investigation and provide for immediate cross-reference of computerized information in conjunction with the recently initiated Central Criminals Records Exchange system linking law enforcement agencies together.

Another improvement suggested by police officials is in the Special Weapons Range. In addition to providing facilities for firearms training for officers of the Virginia Beach police department, the range is also used by agents of the Norfolk FBI Office, the Tidewater Police Academy, and members of the local Alcoholic Tax Unit. While the range is one of the finest in the state, additional improvements are indicated as being necessary to maintain the range at a maximum state of usefulness.

Police officials also pointed out that another area of future improvements involves the department's communications system. Various plans have already been discussed in this area and will be outlined in greater detail in future issues of the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN.

While the FOPA recommendations acknowledge the cost factor involved, the study also points to the fact that President Johnson signed the Omnibus Crime Act on June 19, 1968 which contained appropriations authorized by Congress to assist law enforcement agencies in obtaining funds for continued modernization of their agencies. The report indicates, however, these funds can be obtained only through proper action being taken by local government officials, and/or their respective state legislators.

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN next week will outline the FOPA recommendations regarding necessary continued education of the Virginia Beach police department and the benefits to be derived from such a program.

Shaw Family Sentencing

Leslie George Shaw, Jr., is awaiting sentencing after being convicted of possession of narcotics and a simulated drug. Shaw, 18, of 77th Street was found guilty of possessing quantities of marijuana, a concentrated form of marijuana, and STP, an hallucinogenic drug. The items were found in a station wagon in a parking lot, according to police. Shaw received at the Atlantic City branch post office after being mailed from an overseas address. Vice Squad Sgt. Carl West and Detective Joseph Vitek said they arrested Shaw as he left the post office on the basis of information supplied that regarding the packages' contents and scheduled arrival.

Woman Not Guilty

Circuit Court Judge Robert S. Wahab, Jr. has found Mrs. Carolyn D. Humphries not guilty of the 1964 murder and attempted murder of her children by reason of insanity. The woman was charged with the fatal stabbing of her 16-month-old son, Randy, and the shooting of her 3-year-old daughter Jackie at the family's Aved Road home. She was hospitalized after the incident with multiple self-inflicted stab wounds. In rendering his decision Judge Wahab also ruled Mrs. Humphries continue undergoing psychiatric treatment at Southwestern State Hospital in Marion, where she has been committed since the incident, to determine if she poses any future danger to society or herself.

Police Seek Victim

Police investigators said they have charged Malcolm West, 20, of Ferry Station Road, and James Stallons, 21, formerly of Virginia Beach with a strong arm robbery which occurred at Peninsula Mall last Friday. The robbery allegedly involved the forcing of a wallet from the victim of the money from the victim, and the discarding of the wallet as the assailant fled. The crime reportedly was witnessed by a Virginia Beach detective leading to the identification of the suspect. In past reports police were still investigating the victim of the crime, who fled the scene, to contact them. The youth is described as a white male 16 to 17 years of age, with brown hair, wearing a blue windbreaker, gray slacks and loafers.

Woman Killed

A Norfolk woman was killed in a Tuesday accident during the construction of the new Polaris Marine Building at the Dam Neck Navy Anti Air Warfare Training Center. Authorities said Gerald D. Grover, 34, was fatally injured when he fell from a beam on which he was working to a concrete slab. Grover was taken by an ambulance to the General Hospital of Virginia Beach where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Traffic Toll Rises

Virginia Beach recorded three traffic fatalities between the hours of 9 a.m. Friday and 10:30 p.m. Saturday last weekend. Investigators said that Gladys Spruill, 38, of London Bridge Road, was fatally injured when struck by a car while crossing Holland Road near the intersection of Landstown Road. A two-car accident on Northampton Road near Diamond Springs Road took the life of a woman, according to police Bayside High School cast of "Peter Pan".

'Peter Pan' to Be Presented

The Hurrah Players of Bayside High School are presenting "Peter Pan" a children's play, Nov. 2 and 3 at 2 p.m.

Members of the cast are Jean Powers, Jimmy Dexter, Judy Barnhill, David Dexter, Debbie Whiteside, Diane Hill, Susie Tarkenton, Debbie Vandenbroek, Becky Cantrell, Melody Willison, Rena Sims, Calvin Wall, Carolyn Poulter, Pam Barnette and Nicky Wall.

Admission to the play, which is open to the public, will be 25¢.

Local Radio Club Helps Others

Residents of the city who have citizens band radios are being invited to join the Virginia Beach Citizens Band Radio Club.

Membership is open to both men and women who wish to help when needed in the event of fires, accidents, or similar emergencies. The primary function of the club is to make available individuals who will be able to relay radio messages to summon help in the event of an emergency and to provide what assistance they may be able to until additional help arrives at the scene.

Many members of the club have equipped their autos with flares, jumper cables, and similar items which may be required to assist a motorist stalled on a lonely stretch of highway. Other equipment includes first aid kits.

The club is a non-profit organization and most of the equipment used by club members is furnished at their own expense. While the purpose of the club is of a serious nature, members of the club enjoy the lighter side of life through "club socials", which are held each month.

The club holds a regular business meeting on the second Tuesday of each month at the Pembroke Recreation Center. Classes are also conducted at various times of the month to refresh members on the latest techniques in first aid, traffic control and related subjects.

One of the major activities at the present time is maintaining a radio watch. Club members, working in two hour shifts, monitor an emergency radio channel from Friday evening to Sunday night on every weekend. This allows for rapid receipt of emergency messages and prompt dispatching of assistance.

Those who would like to participate in the club's activities should contact either of the following club officers: John Green, president, 340-5383; Ray Painter, vice-president, phone 497-3768; or Rick Taylor, radio officer, phone 499-1878.

Vandals Hit Park

Vandalism was an item of major concern at the October meeting of the Parks and Recreation Commission Monday.

Shingles have been torn off the roof of the picnic shelter at the recently opened Arrowhead Park twice and have been replaced twice. In addition fires have been set under the swings, and one picnic table was burned then thrown into the Elizabeth River.

Commented Commission Chairman Maury Rignato, "If parents and people who develop the property don't do something to protect this property, I don't think they deserve to keep it."

It was reported that several new parks are open in the city and several more planned. Open are Northgate Park off Bow Creek Blvd., Pembroke Meadows and one at the end of Romney Lane in Aragona in addition to Arrowhead.

Transplant Decision Made

A Norfolk police officer may have become a heart transplant donor as a result of an auto accident on Northampton Blvd. last Saturday morning.

Authorities said patrolman William Peyton Ford was critically injured in the two car collision which also claimed the life of Patricia Anne Jordan of Portsmouth.

Dr. H. H. Karntsching, state medical examiner, was quoted with saying Ford was transported to the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond as a possible donor in a heart-transplant operation. The decision apparently followed the ruling by a team of surgeons at Norfolk General Hospital that the injured Ford received in the accident resulted in his life being declared "irretrievable."

Officials at the Medical College of Virginia indicated that Ford's death occurred Wednesday a.m. in Richmond, but an official ruling on the cause of his death would have to await the outcome of an autopsy report.

Vandals Arrested

Three Navy enlisted men stationed at Oceana Naval Air Station convicted in Virginia Beach Municipal Court on Oct. 25 of disorderly conduct were apprehended while vandalizing a telephone booth, according to L. F. Patrick, manager of the Virginia Beach office of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co.

Patrick said William Stallons, Thomas R. Harrison and Fernando A. Triano were arrested near the intersection of 25th Street and Pacific Avenue on the night of Oct. 13 by Virginia Beach Police as they were destroying telephone company property.

The prosecution of the three came as part of a company policy "cracking down" on vandals whom he said are destroying a large amount of telephone company property.

Finnamore was fined $50, and Stallons and Triano were both fined $25.

Patriotism Promoted

By James McCracken

The Second Annual Cox S.C.A. Patriotism Week will be held Nov. 1-6.

The week will feature assemblies and a Patriotism March-activities which will promote patriotism and national pride as well as encourage parents and other area residents to vote Nov. 5. Sherry Goldberg is the chairman of the week, and George Francisco is chairman for the Patriotism March.

The first event of the week is tomorrow's in-school assembly featuring the Sing Out Virginia Beach group. Then, on Saturday, Cox students will march in Pembroke Mall and the adjacent residential area with banners encouraging local adults to vote. Delegations from other area schools have also been invited to participate.

Monday and Tuesday this year will see the annual Mock Elections program incorporated into the week. Monday, selected students will speak for the presidential candidates in assembly and debate the election issues. Two assemblies will be held for this, one for 8th graders and seniors and another for freshmen, sophomores, and juniors.

Tuesday morning homerooms will elect a delegate to the "convention" assembly and vote for the presidential candidates. During the assembly, the electoral college system will be explained and delegates will cast their homeroom's votes, voting as did the majority in the homeroom. Following tallying of the votes, the winning candidate in each assembly will give a short acceptance speech. The final program of the week will be a lecture and slides on Vietnam on Wednesday.

Etheridge Is Guest Speaker

V. A. (Jack) Etheridge, City Treasurer of Virginia Beach, was the guest at the October meeting of the Virginia Beach Chapter #974 of the National Association of Retired Civil Employees.

Etheridge spoke on the operation of the City Treasurer's office, regarding the sources of city income and distribution of funds.

The next meeting of NARCE will be Nov. 21, according to Mildred D. Wrobel, publicity chairman.

Hospitalman Charles M. Grill, USN, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. Grill of Back Bay Station was graduated from the 14-week basic Hospital Corps School, Great Lakes, Ill.

New System Fast Returns Expected

To Speed Telephone

First Colony Telephone Company will place its new Centrex System into operation this Saturday in the City of Virginia Beach.

The new system will allow direct dialing into many of the offices within the Virginia Beach City Administration, the police department, public utilities offices, Public Works Department, Safety and Traffic Engineers Bureau and School Administration.

The Centrex System has resulted in the installation of new switch boards in the Municipal Court Building at Princess Anne Courthouse, replacing the previous location at police headquarters, and adding new telephones in many offices of the city administration and police headquarters. Several of these offices have contained two telephones in recent weeks—the old dial type and new push button type—in order that service would not be disrupted during the changeover to the Centrex System.

A listing of new telephone numbers for offices which will be affected by the Centrex System have been published in the current telephone directories, which were distributed last spring. The new listings can be found on page 487 of the directory.

An up-to-the-minute communications system, combined with some old-fashioned legwork, will make it possible to report the Nov. 5 general election returns faster and more accurately than ever before, said L. F. Patrick, local manager for the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia.

The returns will be fed from each community through a sophisticated communications network which combines the resources of the telephone company, the news services (Associated Press and United Press International, etc.), radio and the major television networks. It is called the "News Election Service," (NES).

The telephone will be the first link in the reporting process, said the local C&P manager.

Votes cast here in Virginia for the $81 million bond referendum and liquor-by-the-drink will be called direct to the headquarters of a news center in Richmond so votes can be tabulated quickly and results fanned out over the Commonwealth.

In each of seven regional centers throughout the U.S., vote totals from NES reporters will be translated into computer language and transmitted by Data-Phone over the regular long distance network to NES computer headquarters in New York City.

The central computer will sort votes and keep running results. Results will be given at intervals—one minute for the presidential race, five minutes for senatorial, gubernatorial and congressional races—to each of the NES members simultaneously.

Trantwood To Sponsor Book Fair

Trantwood Elementary School will sponsor a Book Fair in the school library from Nov. 4 to Nov. 7, 8 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. each day.

The Book Fair committee is working with Educational Reading Service.

Planning Agenda Is Record Length

Among items to appear on the Virginia Beach Planning Commission agenda for the public hearing Nov. 12 are use permits for the construction of 763 apartment units and townhouses, 99 motel efficiency units and 340 motel units. The agenda, which is composed of 44 items, is the longest presented to the present Commission.

Application will be made by Marcus M. Weinstein for a change of zoning from Limited Commercial District 10 to Multiple Family Residence District on property located south of Laskin Road across from Victor Road in the Mazy Manor-Hilltop Area. Application will be made on the same property for a use permit to construct 427 apartment units.

Kernal Realty Co. and Selma Properties, Inc. will apply for a change of zoning and a use permit to construct 336 townhouses and apartment units on property located south of Virginia Beach Blvd. east of Clearfield Avenue.

Hado Development Corporation will make application for a change of zoning and a use permit to construct 45 motel efficiency units on property located on the northwest corner of Pacific Avenue and 27th Street. Hado is also applying for a use permit to construct 54 motel efficiency units at the northeast corner of Ninth Street and Pacific Avenue.

Bow Creek Inn will apply for a change of zoning and a use permit for construction of 40 motel units on property located east of Duplin Street on the southside of Club House Road.

Stadium

In addition both Norfolk newspapers have urged Norfolk officials not to move too quickly unilaterally. The VIRGINIAN-PILOT suggests that "Norfolk would do well to touch base with officials in sister cities about the outlook for a regional stadium, although their capital outlay funds appear committed too heavily to other needs."

The LEDGER-STAR suggests a broader stadium approach. It says the present findings should be helpful in investigating all regional needs, and adds, "...this certainly seems a logical stage at which to get together with the city's close-lying neighbors to see if all the area's efforts can't somehow be geared together."

A number of Norfolk officials privately agreed that a site in Virginia Beach or even in Chesapeake would be better for present and future stadium needs, when questioned by the SUN.

Norfolk City Councilman

Joseph Jordan said, "I have no knowledge of there being any deletions from the report." Jordan had been informed of the rumors.

Council critic Berry Willis said, "I wouldn't surprise me if they left something out, with Mayor Martin on record favoring the announced location. It also wouldn't surprise me if the consultants had favored a location outside Norfolk as being best for the entire region. Undoubtedly there are locations off the expressway in Virginia Beach that would be more suitable."

The SUN's original source still contends that the report was altered and that Norfolk officials are upset about the leak of such information.

the league representatives said that the original use permit did not cover these buildings or adjoining academy and was for only up to 100 students. They contended also that a proper screen had not been built as ordered, that the playground had been moved illegally, that buses sped through the street, creating a hazard and that parking was a constant problem.

No representative of the school was present. Council referred the matter to Scott's office when he promised to investigate the matter fully to see if there had been any infractions of the use permit and to report to Council. He also said he would pass along the information to the civic league and its lawyer Joseph Canada.

At its next meeting Council will approve its own application for a boat launching ramp on Owl's Creek, to be paid for by the state and an application to build the city golf course adjoining Redwing Townhouse and apartment units will also come up and may or may not cause a problem as far as schools are concerned. There is growing interest in planning for school sites and for schools near such proposed developments.

Representatives of the home building industry in Virginia Beach have met with Council in private session to discuss problems and have basically agreed. At the same time school bond issues is being discussed to meet the needs of the new housing. All agreed that growth cannot be stymied, but that a solution to the high cost of building new schools must be found to keep taxes from rising again too sharply in the near future.

Code

Co. appeared before the meeting to discuss the importance of the city's bidding on the property. Wales also met with reporters briefly and asked that the bid price be withheld since it could jeopardize the sealed bid. Earlier, newspapers in Norfolk were first to publish a speculative bid price based on conversations with officials. Wales said this served no useful purpose. The railroad has appraised the property at about $450,000 but the city's bid is expected to be under that. Council authorized the issuance of a check for five per cent of the bid in open meeting. That check accompanied the bid.

In other money matters Scott read Council a letter from the Virginia Outdoor Recreation Commission turning down the city's request for $145,250 for development of a permanent marina and related recreational facilities at Rudee Inlet. The federal government would have provided more than $1 million had the state approved, and the city's share would have been the same as the state.

While the denial had put a new crimp in the already muddled plans for future development of Rudee Inlet, talks are proceeding with private interests in the hope they will build the marina. Officials admit, however, that the talks are not yet bearing fruit and that they are not certain what plans will be made for future and additional development there. Meanwhile the temporary marina, built and leased by the city, is expected to operate again next year.

Council also approved a transfer of funds to City Sgt. John E. Marr to hire a new matron and deputy as had been recommended in a state report. Appointment to the Tidewater Recreation Stadium Authority was delayed for two weeks. Other requests for funds were approved for additional equipment for the Dorser's Mt. project of landfill, as had previously been discussed with Council in informal session.

Mrs. Hester Waterfield, police traffic bureau secretary appears confused over two telephones on her desk. The confusion will end Saturday when one phone is removed as the new push-button Centrex phone system goes into operation in city offices.

Motel Owner Asks Change Savoyards To Present Musical

Russell Wilson Chaplain, owner of the Kona Kai Motel, has requested relocation of a proposed booster pumping station which is to be erected in front of his motel at 18th Street.

The booster station was first discussed two years ago. At the 18th Street location, the station would replenish the beach as far north as 34th Street, according to Joseph McDonald, the commission's consulting engineer.

Stage Door Has '1 of Best'

The production "What Did We Do Wrong?" at Stage Door Dinner Playhouse is billed as a contemporary comedy. The title asks the proverbial question parents have been asking each other for generations as they take a look at their emancipated offspring who have reached alleged maturity.

The program does not list the name of the very clever author, but whoever he (or she) is he can "tell it like it is", at least from the parents' standpoint. The action revolves around a typical middle-aged successful businessman about to enter a proxy fight, his wife and their sophomore-in-college son who has become a "hippie".

Their whole world is turned upside down when the son and his hippie friends are expelled from school for rioting at the college, and the item is picked up on national television. The hippie group comes to the businessman's home to hide; the stockholders go up in arms; and everyone tries to figure out what they did wrong.

The play then spoofs the entire hippie life, and while it never satisfactorily explains the hippie movement or their form of protest, it certainly does make the parents look pretty good as they find ways of settling the mess.

Mac McManus works hard and makes a valiant attempt at the father-businessman role, but is much better disguised as a hippie than he is in more conventional garb and characterization.

Edith Smart, as his befuddled wife, plods through the not very funny role well, but even at its best it is merely a pawn role for her husband.

Andrew Erwin is not strong enough to play the hippie son. He is just too clean-cut and nice in the role to fit the character, but he does a pleasant job with a meaty role.

Burton Richman, as the unconvertible hippie leader, is too bored with it all and not angry enough to be a real-life protester. Sandra Brewer plays the hippie girlfriend well, but the role is not a particularly well-drawn one. Walter Carter the Negro who just can't resist picketing and protesting whenever someone else starts, handles the delicate role very nicely. The confused honesty he gives the character is funny and touching at the same time, even in the poor taste lines the author has tossed in just to point out race problems.

David Lang and Lorri Shurtliff handle the stuffy rich folks roles easily and give a convincing interpretation to the stockholder and wife social climbers roles.

Jon Dawson's direction moves his cast fairly well, but at times the play could stand to move a little faster. The production, however, must qualify as one of Stage Door's best.

New Church Sells Bonds

According to Rev. W. Jerry Holcomb, pastor of the Kings Grant Baptist Chapel, $101,500 worth of bonds have been sold out of a $150,000 bond issue which has been delegated for construction of a new building. The L-shaped construction will consist of an educational building and a temporary sanctuary (eventually this will become a chapel). It will be erected on a four and half acre site on Little Neck Road in the Kings Grant section. The building, which will encompass approximately 8,000 square feet, will be built in colonial style.

Bonds went on sale Oct. 16. At present there are some $1,000, $500 and $250 bonds to be sold. Rev. Holcomb has emphasized that the general public may buy the bonds by contacting him at 486-3543.

The bonds are six per cent coupon-bearing bonds. Virginia National Bank is the paying agent for the bond issue.

Officer Leo W. Guye, attached to the police department's communication room, has won an all expense paid four day trip for he and his wife to Palm Beach, Fla. Guye says the trip, which includes a visit to the set of the T.V. program "Treasure Island", will be like "old home week". Guye is remembered in the Palm Beach region from the days of "big bands" when he made many radio appearances as Lee Starr directing a popular dance orchestra.

Two members of the Virginia Beach Shore Patrol Detachment took to the woods of Chincoteague State Park last Friday during the annual opening of the park to deer hunters. ADJ Jesse Self reportedly missed out on having any luck, however, SMI L. E. Duval says he came out of the woods with his first deer of the season.

Inspector Fred Quist, of the City's Fire Prevention Bureau, is making good recovery in his recuperation from recent surgery. Quist was able to drop into his office for a few moments but has not as yet returned to full time duty.

Police officers S. F. Bennett, Jr., and F. R. Scarborough have taken on a side-line venture, Bennett and Scarborough say they have opened a bicycle repair shop at the old ice plant on Norfolk Avenue.

Game Warden James Ogden says hunters are rapidly putting the finishing touches on their duck blinds in the Back Bay region. Ogden says he feels the coming season will be a good one because of the large number of ducks and geese returning to Back Bay.

Floyd Waterfield, Chief of the Creeds Volunteer Fire & Rescue Department, says the unit has just purchased a new ambulance.

The age of the switchboard which for many years has handled telephone calls coming into the offices of Virginia Beach City Hall perhaps may never be known. Several persons allege the equipment goes back to a date which could possibly make it eligible for display in the Smithsonian Institute. Then there are others who say that their inspection of the equipment turned up a faded note tucked away in a small crevice. The note, which some say appears to have been hastily scrawled on a piece of parchment, reportedly read "Sgt., call Martin—tell her to hurry up with that flag. (signed) G. Washington".

Beach Impresses Canadians

Virginia Beach was host to five of the foremost travel directors from Canada on Oct. 24. They were on an eight day "Tom Thumb" tour conducted by the Virginia Travel Council by which they were shown accommodations, facilities, and attractions in Virginia.

The Canadian visitors were: Mrs. Jacolyn Maulson, director of the Toronto Star Travel Center; Mrs. Audrea L. Costigan, manager of the Shell Touring Service; J. K. Slater, operations manager of Imperial Oil Limited; O. U. Qasim, manager of Domestic Travel of the Ontario Motor League; and F. Alan Venn, director of the Information Branch of the Dept. of Travel and Publicity of Canada. The group was conducted on their tour in the city by Mrs. Laura Lambie.

They arrived about 12:15 p.m. and were taken to lunch at the Bay Harbor Club, where a special table was set up for them.

decorated with flags of Virginia, America and Canada. There they were given press kits with folders and releases of past and upcoming events in the area.

After leaving the Bay Harbor Club the visitors were taken to Rudee Inlet to the Virginia Capes Marina and were taken on a boat tour and then given information on the proposed plans for the marina and detailed fishing information.

The group were driven through the city so that they could see close at hand what Virginia Beach has to offer.

During the afternoon three of the group went swimming and then they all took a walk on the beach. After the walk Mrs. Lambie took them to the roof of the Virginia House for a view of the city. They left about five o'clock to go to the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel.

According to Mrs. Lambie the travel directors were extremely impressed with what they had seen. They expressed particular interest in the fishing opportunities of the area, as well as the beautiful beach. They felt that the beach was particularly attractive at this time of year and found the warm temperature of the water incredible. After leaving here the group was scheduled to see Fredericksburg and northern Virginia before returning home Oct. 27th.

UCF Drive Ends Fri.

The 1968 United Communities Fund officially ends tomorrow with victory in sight. The victory dinner is scheduled for tomorrow evening. Reaching of the $2,267,222 goal is expected to be announced at that time.

Last week at this time about half of the goal, or slightly better than $1 million, had been raised in Norfolk, Virginia Beach and part of Chesapeake, the areas where the fund operates.

Contributors have been asked both in business and residential campaigns to give to this one fund, which encompasses 52 charitable and service agencies, including the Red Cross and USO, as well as welfare, health and youth service agencies.

The slogan used this year in the campaign has been "No other gift does so much for so many." In previous years the traditional campaign slogan has been "Your one gift works many wonders."

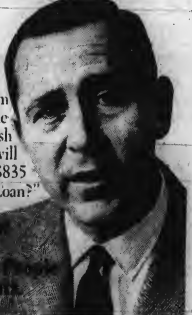

Auxiliary To Serve

The Ladies Auxiliary of Chesapeake Beach Volunteer Fire Department will serve a spaghetti supper from 4:30 to 8 p.m. on Nov. 2 in the Fire Station on Pleasure House Road in Bayside.

Prices are adults $1.25 and children 65¢. Money earned in this event will be used for fire and ambulance equipment to better serve the area.

"The line at our bathroom every morning looks like the turnpike tollgate at rush hour. How much will it cost me to make an $835 New Bathroom Loan?"

You'll get straight answers from The Straight Talk Loan Program at First & Main.

Don't let anyone kid you. A vote for mixed beverages is not a "wet" vote. Chesapeake, Norfolk, Portsmouth and Virginia Beach are already "wet." They have liquor by the gallon, the fifth, the quart, and the pint. Vote for moderation . . . and put an end to hypocrisy that makes it possible to buy liquor only in large quantities. Vote ☐ yes ☐ for mixed beverages.

We Support Downing

We support and highly endorse the re-election of Thomas N. Downing to the Congress of the United States as our representative. His record over the past ten years has been outstanding.

He is known as a serious legislator who can get results. Never has he backed away from his responsibility to the First District, and never has he backed away from any given issue.

His continuing efforts in the fight for the rebuilding of the merchant marine are about to pay off after long months of hearings and debates. He is also greatly interested in the future of the space program in the United States.

His service on Congressional committees has always guaranteed conscientious and capable accomplishments of those committees. His experience is invaluable in these troubled times.

Personally Tom Downing is one of the most pleasant men we have ever known, always willing to take time out of a busy schedule to cooperate fully with the press and to help any of his constituents with a problem, minor or major.

While he resides on the Peninsula side of the First Congressional District he maintains an office in Virginia Beach and is available when needed.

Congressman Downing has two opponents in this race who, regardless of their conscientiousness in running could never fill the shoes of this outstanding man. His re-election is important to Virginia Beach, the First Congressional District, the State of Virginia and to the United States of America.

What Price Secrecy?

Landmark Communications Inc., publishers of the two Norfolk newspapers, apparently puts a high price on secrecy. Why was it so important that word did not leak out that the corporation was about to buy 34 acres in Virginia Beach? Why was it necessary to hide behind the original owners' names until the land was zoned industrial? And why does the company need the 34 acres already owned and the reported several more acres it is trying to buy just for a satellite printing plant? Could it be the entire Norfolk operation is coming where the action is . . . In Virginia Beach?

Reporters of the two papers

Get Out and Vote

Never before have the voters of Virginia Beach been asked to go to the polls to make so many momentous decisions. Not only are we electing a new president and vice president of the United States, but we are also electing our member of the House of Representatives.

And we are being asked to vote on a mammoth $81 million statewide bond issue. In addition we are asked to vote on local option sale of liquor by the ounce in qualified restaurants and hotels and motels in Virginia Beach.

In recent weeks we have voiced our support for the Humphrey-Muskie Democratic national ticket, and in an editorial above we have given our unqualified support to the re-election of Thomas N. Downing to Congress.

We have also supported the bond issue for higher educational needs and for the upgrading of the state's mental institutions and agencies.

Further, for nearly four years we have supported liquor-by-the-drink in Virginia Beach, and we still do.

Now the time has come for the people to make up their minds and to pull the appropriate levers. We hope we have presented a fair appraisal of the facts in each issue at stake.

It is for this reason that we urge all qualified voters in Virginia Beach to get out and vote next Tuesday for the men of their choice and for progress.

The future of Virginia Beach is at stake. Only the voters can shape that destiny, with no regard to factionalism or party.

Impact Funds

Thankfully President Johnson has felt the pressure and released the federal impact funds he held frozen for so long. The loss of those funds could have been felt deeply in Virginia Beach.

First District Congressman Thomas N. Downing was probably the most effective Virginia legislator in Washington helping to obtain the release, although the efforts of Senators Harry F. Byrd and William B. Spong are greatly appreciated.

But those most directly concerned deserve much of the credit. The school officials and superintendents worked diligently for the release, and they got it. One superintendent from the midwest, Oscar Rhodes spent long hours on the project. He notified Virginia Beach School Supt. E. E. Brickell of the success of the campaign some hours before Sen. Spong's office was even aware of the release.

Freezing was wrong, but that is over. Let us hope it does not happen again.

Against Liquor

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun: For several months I have observed the debate that has centered around the question of liquor-by-the-drink. Sometimes the opponents have shown more emotionalism than fact. Sometimes the proponents have manifested a maximum of wishful thinking and a minimum of sound evidence. This letter is an attempt to call to the attention of readers a fact seldom introduced.

Should the advocates of LBD (liquor-by-the-drink) be defeated at the polls on Tuesday, Nov. 5, they will have an opportunity to have another referendum 47 months later. On the other hand, should those who advocate LBD be successful on Tuesday, Nov. 5, the opponents of LBD cannot instigate another referendum in Virginia Beach under the provisions of the current legislative authorization. This is sheer discrimination against those who seek a negative vote on Nov. 5.

Because of this discrimination, among other reasons, I respectfully ask for a "NO" vote against liquor-by-the-drink on Nov. 5th.

Those who have sought LBD have produced an enormous volume of premises supported only by innuendos, deceit, collusion and derogation. Unfounded statements have been their hallmark.

There is a preponderance of evidence that with LBD there may be expected an increased burden for our fine police department, our courts (already restricted by higher court decisions), our penal, welfare and rehabilitation institutions, and our community and family life. This conclusion is based not upon nightmares, but upon hard cold irrefutable evidence compiled in those communities which have inaugurated LBD. A majority "yes" vote on Tuesday, Nov. 5, will be followed by increased consumption of alcoholic beverages which will be followed by conditions which Virginia Beach citizens may wish to remove, but will be restrained from doing so by provisions of the present bill which contains NO reciprocating removal provision.

Again, I respectfully urge every qualified voter in Virginia Beach to vote "NO" against liquor-by-the-drink on Tuesday, Nov. 5. You will be proud you did! Although I live in Chesapeake, I am a qualified voter in the City of Virginia Beach.

Sincerely Yours,
Leroy Davis

Special Report

1969 Election Already Is in Planning Stage

With election day 1968 still a few days away and the outcome of numerous important issues still unresolved as a result, plans are moving ahead in Virginia Beach for election day 1969.

Two members of the House of Delegates from Virginia Beach must again be elected, and, of course, a new governor for the Old Dominion will be chosen in 1969. While the general election in both races does not come until November, the July Democratic primary races are already beginning to shape up. Some of that shaping has already been made public. Some will be made public soon, and still other shaping is being done quietly behind the scenes.

Within the next few days both of Virginia Beach's incumbent members of the House of Delegates are expected to announce they will seek re-election, subject to the July primary. But it is reliably reported that many of the backers of B. R. Middleton are encouraging a coalition of their candidate and Kenneth Whitehurst, Jr. The two, while recently working together as co-chairmen of the Downing campaign, were on opposite sides of the Democratic party when nominated in 1967.

It has also been reported that Middleton's ex-running mate for the House of Delegates in 1967, Joseph Gawrys, is again planning to enter the primary as a House candidate. Gawrys ran a good race in 1967, but came in third. Where Gawrys' support lies is unclear at this time, but it is thought that Whitehurst-Middleton ticket is being considered to either force the hand of any potential opposition or to force out of the race entirely all opposition. At the same time attorney Joseph Canada, ex-assistant Commonwealth's attorney, is also reportedly about to announce his intentions to run for the House of Delegates. Other sources say that the Henry Howell for Governor forces in Norfolk are also quite interested in fielding at least one Virginia Beach candidate for the House of Delegates.

Republican leaders also say they plan to field a strong slate for the House of Delegates, that slate likely to be decided in a primary for the first time. Linwood Holton, defeated by Gov. Mills E. Godwin Jr., in 1965, is expected to emerge again as the GOP standard bearer for governor in 1969.

This picture is not as clear on the Democratic side, with three already announced candidates and one more possible entry within the next ten days or so. Howell, Lt. Gov. Fred Pollard and William Battle are already in the primary race, and VPI president Dr. Marshall Hahn may yet announce his intentions to run. A four-way race in the primary would represent every possible faction of the Virginia Democratic party.

Behind the scenes political maneuvering in Virginia Beach is apparently already underway. A few days ago forces of V. A. Etheridge, City Treasurer, attended a fish fry given by Etheridge. Both fish and politics were on the menu, according to one of the approximately 50 guests.

While there has been no publicity of the event, one of the guests was a reporter of the Norfolk VIRGINIAN-PILOT, Morris Rowe. One of the other guests said, "He writes what we want him to write. We fed him during the '67 campaign and he wrote it our way."

When the truth of this statement was questioned and doubt duly noted, the source added, "Have you seen a story in the PILOT about the meeting? Do you think 50 Organization people could meet for any kind of meeting without Rowe finding something sinister in it and putting a story in the paper about it?"

This leads to speculation that forces loyal to Etheridge are already planning campaign strategy for 1969 and that overpolitical action can be expected soon. In 1967 Etheridge split with the Organization forces during the races for Constitutional officers for Virginia Beach and for the State Senate and the House of Delegates. The new opposition forces at that time elected four to offices following a hot primary.

Since that time however, there has been some reported defection from the opposition ranks and some reshuffling of the opposition power structure. While its relative strength is not considered as strong at present as it was a year ago, 1969 promises once more to offer a great deal of political action in Virginia Beach.

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"No!" he said strongly. "I'm going out tonight. I will not sit here and answer the doorbell ten thousand times."

"All right!" she said just as strongly. "If you want to go out, you take the girls and I'll answer the doorbell."

"You mean I should go through this entire neighborhood with those two kids while they bum a lot of candy and other assorted sweet junk from our neighbors?" he asked. "No, I had more in mind maybe going to a movie to get away from all of it."

"Well, you have to do one or the other, and the one who stays here has to take care of the baby too," she pointed out. "Couldn't we hire a baby sitter to hand out the goodies and take care of the baby, and another one to take the girls around the neighborhood?" he asked. "Then we could both go to the movies."

"That's not the proper attitude," she said. "Now stop arguing. I have to finish the costumes for the girls. Your older daughter is going to be a fairy princess and the younger one is going to be a devil."

"Sure fits the younger one better than the older one, doesn't it?"

"That's not very funny," she said. "After all it's only once a year."

"So is Christmas," he said. "But I couldn't find a jack of lantern in the stores two weeks ago until a clerk showed me where they were. They were mixed in with the Christmas tree ornaments which had been on display since Labor Day."

"I know what you mean," she said. "I had some difficulty finding candy to give to the trick or treaters. It was mixed in with the Christmas hard candies and nuts and fruit cakes."

"I hope you got enough candy," he said. "I had to ration it last year toward the end. Remember the civic league survey says there are 474 kids in this neighborhood alone."

"Make that 476," she said. "Two more were born last week-end since the survey was taken."

"And they'll probably be out on Halloween night too," he said.

"I think I bought enough this year; that is, if they don't come from all over Virginia Beach," she said.

"They did last year," he said. "I saw one car drive in. One adult inside opened the door and eight kids jumped out. The adult yelled, 'Don't forget to work both sides of the street. It was worse than the Avon lady.'"

"It's hard enough to recognize those kids in costumes anyway," she said. "But when you've never seen them before, it's a little ridiculous."

"I wonder what the kids do with all that mess they collect," he said. "There must be an awful lot of tummy aches the next day."

"I don't think they really eat all of it. It's sort of a trade deal," she said. "I give all our candy away and they bring home a new supply."

"Why don't we save it until next year, and give it back?" he asked.

She ignored the question. "I certainly hope it's warmer than it was last year," she said. "It was so cold last year the girls had to wear heavy coats over their costumes and nobody could see them anyway."

"That didn't seem to bother those big teenagers who came here trick or treating," he said. "They braved the cold very well."

"Isn't there a law against that?" she asked.

"Who's going to argue with a teenager that's bigger than I am when he's wearing a mask and says 'trick or treat'?"

"You've got a point there," she said. "I think I'll get those two babysitters. Let them handle it. What's playing at the movies?"

HERE COMES OLGA!

Friday night at the Mariner Motel held in the Neptune room was the annual meeting of the North Carolina June German Club.

In talking with some of these people I asked about the club. I found out to become a member of this club either the husband or wife have to be born in North Carolina.

Mrs. Jack Cassada was at the table on entering, and she had the job of seeing that each person picked up their name tags and displayed them so they could be seen easily.

Those attending included Mr. and Mrs. Bob Reinhardt, Mr. and Mrs. Andre Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Dusty Hinnant, Mr. and Mrs. Sid Askew Jr., Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Topleman, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Han Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Vaughan, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cassada and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Brichter.

When I walked over to the table where the food was to get the names of others attending, I could not believe all the food they had. I seem always to make the mistake of eating before attending these parties, and boy was I mad when I looked around the table to find, hot biscuits, fresh pork, crab claws with cocktail sauce, Vienna sausage with a tomato sauce, fried chicken, pate de foie, Swedish meat balls, hot crab meat on crackers, several kinds of dips, hush puppies, and of course pickles, celery and olives. Now do you know why I was mad at myself and couldn't eat?

Those around the table were: Mr. and Mrs. Gene Lanning, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Overman, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Rose, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Parnell, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Midgett, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Kitchen (Jimmie I spelled your name right), Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Darst, Mr. and Mrs. George Gilliam, Mr. and Mrs. Don Fentress, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Midgett, John Tucker, Mrs. Maxine Rieger, I am always glad to come across John Tucker purely because he has a great way of complimenting me to other people, and what women does not like compliments?

4) Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Allen who were elected to the Board of Governors.

When I started to go home I noticed a few names I had not gotten earlier. They were: John G. Perry, who had to come alone, his wife was in the hospital with a new little baby girl (congratulations), Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Sadler, Mr. and Mrs. Scott Taylor, and Mr. and Mrs. Ward King.

Remember I said I was not going to write more than one party a week? It seems as though in the winter this is impossible.

Saturday night was the first of the Cotillion Club dances for the season which was held at the Beach & Cabana Club. I do believe this dance was one of the largest as far as attendance that I have covered, I am sure there must have been at least 300 girls and boys.

The young ladies all wore short formal, and I might add they were not really short but a very graceful length for these young ladies. To the young men I would like to say congratulations on your appearance. There was not a single young man there with long hair. You know when you watch how well these boys and girls behave you sorta gain a little more faith in the youth of today.

The halloween colors were carried out on the tables and decorations. Soft drinks, dips, mixed nuts and petits fours were there for the young people to eat as they wished.

Sue Carey as she entered really made an outstanding appearance wearing a white sequin dress, hair in curls which touched her shoulders, a corsage of red roses, and white sequin shoes to match the dress.

There was not any way possible for me to get all the names but I did manage to get some as I walked around from place to place. Those I knew and some I asked for were: Willie Walker, Lucy Owens, Dave Godshew, Lynn McCoy, Patti Garvin, Cotton Markert, Don Drew, Claire Newbern, Sue Cummings, Jim Dickerson, Kathy Boyd, David A. Bradshaw, Diane Brothers, Jeff Teft, Randall Malbon, Bob Cramer, Ricky Haycox, Lee Smith, Carol Preston, John Camp, Holly Ward, Anne Patterson, Steve Baxter, Pam Brothers, Rick Jackson, Sandy Rice, Becky Old, John Roper and Susan Whitehurst.

The formal worn by the young ladies were mostly materials of velvet, and chiffons. Hairdos were of course most of them the newest with curls, bows or some ornaments were also a big part of the new hairdos. I shall look forward to the next Cotillion dance.

Sympathy Bolsters Dieters

Seriously overweight women in Communist countries don't get off lightly with a doctor's understanding smile, a diet guide, and appetite-suppressing pills. They are hospitalized and then watched closely for a year to make certain that they stick to their diets.

Dr. R. A. Visinesco of the Bucharest University Clinic told Women's Medical News Service that teamwork is essential in working with the obese. In the hospital, a physician, a nurse, and a dietician combine forces to study the patient's habits and needs. Efforts are made to win the patient's confidence.

Once on her way to shedding pounds, the patient leaves the hospital and then what the physician called "social prophylaxis" begins.

The team maintains "permanent contact with all discharged patients, seeing them once a month," the doctor explained. In addition, representatives from the National Council of Rumanian Women call on their stout sisters to give their morale a boost.

The representatives provide on-going nutritional education and even cooking demonstrations.

Every neighborhood is said to have these pound policemen.

Dabney Dalton and Owen Smith enjoyed a quiet moment together at the season's first Junior Cotillion Dance Saturday night.

Miss Joy Lynn Prangle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Prangle of Duncannon Lane was first runner-up in the 1968 Homecoming Queen competition at the University of Colorado.

Lynn was one of six finalists chosen from 65 semi-finalists. The finalists, who had to have a B-plus average, were nominated on the basis of poise, posture, beauty and response to questioning by judges. She is a former Miss Virginia Beach.

Thomas M. Lechner of Virginia Beach is first sergeant in Company D, at Greenbrier Military School.

The promotion was announced this week by Col. Thomas C. McGuire, Director of Military Training at the school. Lechner was selected on the basis of his "excellent military record to date. He was officially promoted by Col. W. J. Moore, superintendent.

Miss Gretchen Ries, formerly of Virginia Beach, reigned as Homecoming Queen at Bucknell University last weekend.

Daughter of Cmdr. (USN) and Mrs. Herbert H. Ries now of Arlington, the brunette English major outpolled five other candidates in an election by the University's student body.

Robert Sturgis Creamer Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Creamer of Kittiwake Court is a first year student at the School of Theology of the University of the South.

Creamer, whose home parish is the Eastern Shore Chapel in Virginia Beach, Va., is a graduate of Arizona State University with a B. A. degree in history. He is married to the former Marilyn McClary of Chattanooga, Tennessee and they have an infant son.

Dan Miller of Virginia Beach is a member of the 1968 football squad at Ottawa University, Ottawa, Kansas.

Church Bazaar Features Meals

The bazaar at Charity Methodist Church will feature a turkey and barbecue luncheon and supper at the church on Nov. 1.

Luncheon will be from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and supper from 4 to 8 p.m. In addition there will be fancy work, homemade cakes, candy and cookies for sale. All proceeds will go to the Women's Society of Christian Service of Charity Church.

Quick Parfait Is Pleasing

Here's a quick and easy recipe idea suggested by Meadow Gold Dairies home economists for a child-pleasing Chocolate Parfait that's a perfect treat for partytime or just plain good eating time.

Pour two cups of chocolate milk drink into a bowl. Add 1 package (4 1/2 oz.) of instant pudding mix.

Beat slowly with a rotary hand beater or at low speed with an electric beater for five minutes. Fold in one cup miniature marshmallows and one half cup chopped salted cashews. In parfait glasses, alternate layers of pudding mixture and 12 chocolate wafers, coarsely broken. Chill. Garnish with whipped cream and whole cashews.

Medical Assistants to Meet

The 13th annual convention of the Virginia Association of Medical Assistants will convene at The Cavalier from Nov. 8-10 with the local Tidewater Association of Medical Assistants hosting the group.

Among the many outstanding speakers for this educational convention on Nov. 9 will be Dr. William D. Stallings, president of the Virginia Beach Medical Society, Dr. Charles E. Davis, Jr. of Norfolk, president of the Norfolk County Medical Society, and Dr. F. Ashton Carmine, Newport News, president of the Medical Society of Virginia.

Saturday night will be highlighted by a banquet, speakers and installations of officers.

The Virginia Association of Medical Assistants is a component chapter of the American Association of Medical Assistants, the only association recognized by the American Medical Association. The AAMA is a national professional organization comprised of nearly 13,000 medical secretaries, technicians, nurses and others who work under the direct supervision of a doctor of medicine. Among its major goals is to increase the education and professionalism of medical assistants. Any medical assistant wishing to attend this convention may get information from Mrs. Ruth Dize, convention chairman at 625-7406 during the day or Maciel Wisecarver, program chairman, 428-1574 after 6 p.m.

Here's a rich delicious prune sauce to serve over hard ice cream. Combine a cup of chopped pitted cooked prunes with a cup of cooking liquid, 1/2 cup each crushed pineapple and brown sugar and 1 teaspoon cornstarch. Cook slowly about 5 to 10 minutes. Serve hot or cold.

Miss Angelena Constantine, who will be married Dec. 27, gets helpful hints from Mrs. Evalina B. Myatt, head bridal consultant at Rose Hall, in the store's new bridal department which offers a complete bridal service including tips for the mother and family of the bride. Brides may also use the historic house for their formal portraits.

World Community Day Is Fri.

"When we know ourselves, then we can learn to love other people," commented Mrs. Harmon H. Bro in regard to hopes of the future brotherhood of man.

Mrs. Bro, who moved to Virginia Beach just last month, will be one of the discussion leaders at World Community Day services beginning at 11 a.m. Friday, Nov. 1 at First Baptist Church. This is an annual day observed by church women throughout the world and is sponsored locally by the Virginia Beach Church Women United.

Mrs. Bro, who lived here for nine months in 1943, is the wife of Harmon H. Bro, Ph.D., an ordained minister who is presently engaged in research in the history and psychology of religions. She is also teaching an adult education class at Friends' School titled "The Selves of a Woman, in Dreams, Art and Myth."

The mother of four daughters and a son, June Bro is also an accomplished musician and plays both the violin and piano. She describes the main barrier to the better understanding of people as a shadow. This shadow, she says, represents the hostilities and weaknesses within ourselves.

"We all have a feeling of superiority about something," she said. "We think we're the chosen religion, the chosen so-dial class, the chosen race. First it was like this in Germany, and now here.

"These things are in ourselves. Our hope is to find our own evil and our own weaknesses and not project them outside ourselves. We usually hurt others until we realize how much evil we have."

She referred to the violent and sadistic acts that take place on city streets while the public stands by without protest. She said women are just as bad in bridge groups when they do not defend persons not present who are maligned by others. "We are cruel to one another with sarcasm," she said. "We use words instead of bullets."

The theme of this year's World Community Day is "New World A'Coming." The program was written by two women in Africa, one black and one white, Mrs. Herbert Robinson is chairman.

There will be luncheon served after the program, and there will be a nursery for children.

Just a week before the national election between 60 and 70 women representing eight women's and junior women's clubs in Virginia Beach met at the Shore Drive in Oct. 29 for a non-partisan political forum.

The forum was sponsored by the recently organized Virginia Beach Council of Women's Clubs. This was their first joint venture since they sponsored a Safety Symposium last winter.

Speakers, representing the three presidential candidates, spoke briefly, then answered questions posed by the ladies present. Also discussed were resolutions passed by the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Walter Harper was chairman of the forum.

Representing the parties were Henry Clarke, Republican party; Ed Brogan, Democratic Party, and Louis Darden, American Independent Party.

Although the majority of the questions were of national policy, several asked from the floor were of local interest to wives and mothers. All three party representatives agreed that the best way to fight unsuitable movies and pornographic literature is for parents to boycott them.

Other questions dealt with crime in the streets, drugs, trade with Soviet and satellite countries and desegregation of schools.

Clubs participating in the council are Baystate Junior Woman's Club, Cape Henry Woman's Club, Cavalier Junior Woman's Club, Chesapeake Beach Woman's Club, Kempsville Woman's Club, Ocean Park Woman's Club, Princess Anne Woman's Club of Virginia Beach and Virginia Beach-Princess Anne Junior Woman's Club.

One of the many groups collecting for UNICEF in the area. This group, sponsored by St. Nicholas Woman's Club, collected $30 in the Carriage Hill section of Virginia Beach.

Some Kids Collect for Others

Many organizations and groups of the area are helping Virginia Beach boys and girls of school age as they take part in the annual "Trick or Treat for UNICEF" campaign. They have been working for almost a week now, and will continue to work through Halloween.

This is the 19th consecutive year that the boys and girls have gone out with their little orange cartons to ring doorbells and collect coins for the United Nations Children's Fund.

UNICEF branched from emergency aid following World War

II and has grown so that it now aids long-range self-help programs in 120 countries.

Last fall the children's crusade prompted the President of the United States to proclaim Halloween, Oct. 31, as National UNICEF Day, in honor of these selfless American kids . . . kids who brought in nearly $3 million to the Children's Fund last year.

Mrs. Arthur Gallagher, chairman of the local UNICEF campaign urges everyone to be generous this year when some child rings a doorbell to "Trick or Treat for UNICEF."

Council Sponsors Non-Partisan Forum

Mrs. Owen Will Be 1 of 6

Mrs. R. H. Owen was one of six Virginia women selected to attend the 6th Regional Community Improvement Seminar, co-sponsored by the General Federation of Women's Clubs and Sears-Roebuck Foundation in cooperation with the Extension Department of the University of North Carolina, held recently at the University at Chapel Hill.

The Seminar dealt with community problems and how to solve them. One hundred and fifty women from Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Kentucky, North Carolina, South Carolina, Puerto Rico, Tennessee, West Virginia and Virginia were guests of Sears at the Carolina Inn.

Haygood Bazaar Is Nov. 9

The Women's Society of Christian Service of Haygood Methodist Church will sponsor their annual "Fall Festival Bazaar" from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Nov. 9.

For sale will be items from the Bake and Candy Shop, Country Store, Flower and Nut Arrangements, Christmas Decorations, White Elephant, Needlework and Woodcraft.

Lunch will feature ham biscuits. A nursery will be provided so mothers can shop in leisure.

Carve a Rutabaga And Burn a Cat

Everybody knows that the spooks and goblins will be prowling tonight, but how many of you know why?

Halloween is the eve of All-hallows or Hallowmas or All Saint's Day. In Latin countries it is a solemn religious occasion when people attend extra masses and say prayers. The American celebration rests upon Scottish and Irish folk customs traced from pre-Christian times.

Early celebrations were held by Druids in honor of Samhain, Lord of the Dead, whose festival falls on Nov. 1. This is also the Celtic New Year's Day and the beginning of winter. On this day Samhain assembled souls of all those who had died during the previous year.

For their sins the souls had been confined to the bodies of lower animals. On the New Year their sins were expiated, and they were released to go to the Druid heaven. Horses and humans were sacrificed at this time (human victims were usually criminals, by burning them alive in cages. This was outlawed in 61 A.D. by the Romans. But in medieval Europe black cats were still put in wicker cages and burned alive. The cats were believed to be familiars of witches, or even the witches themselves who they believed could take the form of a black cat.

All-hallows was incorporated into the Christian calendar. It was a day to honor all saints, known and unknown. The earliest report of such a general commemoration is one in Antioch right after Pentecost. Pope Gregory III fixed the anniversary as Nov. 1 in the eighth century.

In each church on this day there was a display of the relics of that particular church's patron saint. Poorer churches had no relics, so members masqueraded as the patron saint. Outside the church people added fairies and goblins as well as sanctified and unsanctified souls.

Jack-o'-lanterns are of Irish tradition. The Irish had no pumpkins but carved out sized rutabagas, potatoes and turnips to put candles in. The name comes from an Irish tale of a man named Jack who was not accepted in heaven or hell, so he had to wander forever and used a jack-o'-lantern to light his way in the darkness.

The word Halloween is Gaelic, not English. Guy Fawkes Day, Nov. 5, takes the place of Halloween in England.

When the Catholic Gaels arrived in America, so did Halloween. The colonists began holding gatherings at farmhouses on the night of Oct. 31. Apples and nuts were plentiful at this time of year, so they were usually served. It was sometimes known as "Snap Apple" or "Nutcrack" night.

The colonists discovered pumpkins made good jack-o'-lanterns. The celebration was a scattered, regional affair until after the great Irish immigration in the 1840's. Then it became observed nationally.

The Irish folktales of the "little people" got involved too. "Little people" were believed to be constantly hovering and were especially active on Halloween. Any mischief could be blamed on them. (Practical jokes were characteristic of pioneer communities.)

It is believed that "trick or treat" developed from the practice of rustics on the eve of Samhain in the district between Ballycotton and Trillick, stopping at houses and asking for contributions in the name of "Muck Olla" (probably a perversion of some old Druid god). The processions were led by a man in a white robe with a horse-head mask. Also in the procession were young men walking and blowing cows' horns. They recited a string of verses which said that if the farmer's prosperity was to continue, he had better make a generous contribution to the spirit.

Whatever its history, Halloween is still a day looked forward to by millions of children every year. Happy spooking to all.

Mother Nature

Is a Fink

Ah, tracking down a wooded path of a sunny fall day when the air is cool, but not chilly. Sounds great, or so I thought. Only trouble is that one day afterwards my legs are so sore, I can hardly walk.

My idea was to introduce my two girls to "the great outdoors," so we started out to Seashore State Park Sunday afternoon. Being unfamiliar with the trails and not sure of the endurance of the girls (or their mother), we picked a mile-long trail first. The terrain was easy and the swamp it went through was beautiful.

So, when we got back to the starting point the girls were unwilling to go home yet. They said they weren't tired and the first path was too short. Naturally I didn't want to dampen their enthusiasm, and since it was still early, we picked another path. This trail was also short, but it was up and down hill all the way.

The girls still weren't tired, but I was beginning to puff after the last few dunes. Against my better judgement we tried a third path. I first began to worry when I realized we hadn't crossed any other paths. When we reached Long Creek I knew we were in trouble. This was the five-mile plus trail that goes clear around the park.

About that same time the five-year-old decided she was thirsty. Try to explain to a five-year-old that the only water around is from the swamp or Long Creek.

Then they decided they were tired. The younger one went on a sit down strike in the middle of the path. I finally convinced her I was too tired (and she was too heavy) to carry her back.

The seven-year-old decided to pull her junior grade hysterical act then. "We're lost. We'll be here all night. I'm scared." It took some persuasion, but I finally convinced them that the only way to get back was to walk. So we did. And walked, and walked and walked

The girls (and me) were really dragging. The seven-year-old and I were holding up little sister between us. That is until they spotted the sign pointing to the parking lot. Then both took off running at top speed.

The crowning blow came when the five-year-old was describing her adventures to her father. "Mama got lost but Betty and I found the way back."

Weekend Looks Rough for Beach Teams

The day of reckoning has come for the First Colonial Patriots. The hard-running offense of First Colonial runs headlong into the hard-running defense of the Maury Commodores, and exactly what will happen just can't be predicted with a great deal of certainty.

The clash at the Pats' home field headlines the high school football scene this weekend. Both Maury and First Colonial are undefeated so far this season. Maury has five consecutive wins under its belt. The Patriots have seven. This week Maury is rated seventh in the state, 6 of a point behind eighth ranked First Colonial. On the other hand the Patriots lead Maury in the Eastern District because of scoring 170 points in all games to Maury's 130. Only 19 points have been scored against First Colonial all season and only 21 have been scored against Maury.

To this point the season schedule has favored First Colonial. The Patriots have not faced any of the powerhouses in either the Eastern or Southeastern districts, while the Commodores have had more experience along that line. Ironically Norview, rated 12th in the state, leads the Eastern District, having scored 142 points while allowing only 44 points to opponents and because the one loss was not in district play.

Both Maury and First Colonial jumped two spots in the statewide standings after games last weekend. The Patriots trounced winless Churchland, 40-0, while piling up a total of 394 yards on offense. Les Whitehouse, as usual, was a standout, scoring three of the six TD's. Bob Wareing, Clinton Graves and John Grimstead each scored one of the other three. Two of the conversion tries failed, and should that happen this weekend, it might mean the difference in a win or loss for the Pats.

Last weekend Maury won easily over Cradock, 22-6. One of Maury's conversion attempts also failed, as the scoring was done on three touchdowns and one safety. Maury has one excellent running halfback in Don Fitzgerald, and tackle Wayne Marable is outstanding in the defensive line.

The Eastern District crown could well be at stake Friday night as the two unbeaten meet, and Maury would appear to have an ever so slight edge.

Kellam's five-game winning streak over so-so teams seems destined to come to an abrupt end this weekend as the Knights meet Granby at Foreman Field. Granby lost to Norview last weekend, 27-18, in a real thriller that saw Granby dropped from the ranks of the unbeaten and from just behind First Colonial in the statewide standings. No doubt the Comets will be out for revenge when they meet Kellam, loser of only two so far. And one of those losses came at the hands of Norview.

The Knights handled Cox easily last weekend, winning 21-6 over the two-game winner Falcons, who have showed little strength all year. This week Cox takes on Oscar Smith, now ranked 20th statewide. Smith only has one loss and one tie against four wins.

PA's Robert Haines (41) heads for the Cavaliers' first touchdown of the evening. PA broke its long losing streak against Kempville.

BOX SCORE
SUN PREDICTIONS TO DATE	RIGHT 29	WRONG 5

After their first win of the season, Princess Anne's Cavaliers will likely lose again this weekend, to Lake Taylor. Both have only one win so far, but Lake Taylor has managed to score more points than PA. But all is not lost. There are still a couple of wins in the future for the Cavaliers. Their victory over the Kempville Chiefs saw promising soph Robert Haines come alive and run for both touchdowns. Even in winning 13-0, the Cavaliers lacked lustre against winless Kempville, which also may find victory in the last game of the season against Bayside. Bayside incidentally had an open date last weekend.

Bayside, still winless in six tries this season, takes on the surging Norview Pilots this weekend, and the win for the Pilots is reasonably predictable. The hapless Bayside Marlins could very well go winless through the entire 1968 season, although the offense is slippery and quick.

Kempville this weekend plays host to Indian River, which has a 3-4 record this season, after losing last weekend to York, 19-7. But unless the Chiefs find some new weapon, Indian River will win this weekend.

Saturday Union Kempville, drubbed last weekend 34-0 by Westside, meets I. C. Norcom, which has a 5-1 record. Union Kempville has won three and lost two. The Norcom team is well-balanced, and the UK team is big, but this should be another win for Norcom.

LAST WEEKEND'S RESULTS

Kellam 21 Cox 6
Princess Anne 13 Kempville 0
First Colonial 40 Churchland 0
Westside 34 Union Kempville 0

PREDICTIONS

Shrubs Need Care Before Winter

Editor's Note: Here is another in the series on home horticulture by Wesley P. Jenkins, extension horticulture specialist at Virginia Tech.

Fall care of shrubs is very important if you want them to survive the winter in healthy condition and be ready to grow next spring. There are several jobs you must not neglect if you are to have beautiful landscape plantings.

Shrubs must be well watered before the ground freezes. This is very critical for evergreens and for new plantings which may not be well established. If the weather is quite dry during the fall you should apply water to shrubs about once a week until the ground freezes.

You may ask why shrubs need water during the winter when they are dormant. Actually, they do not stay inactive all winter. This is especially true with evergreens. Whenever the temperature gets above 40 degrees Fahrenheit, growth may start. They will lose water, especially if they are in a windy location.

The troubles called sunburn and windburn are primarily caused by loss of water. A good supply of soil moisture is just as important in winter as in summer. In fact, if rain or snowfall continues to be light, you should apply more irrigation in midwinter, whenever the ground is thawed.

Renew the mulch around your shrubs this fall to help conserve soil moisture. A two-inch layer is about the right amount. This will also help control weed growth next summer and gradually increase the organic content of the soil.

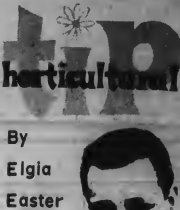

Several types of mulch may be used such as sawdust, wood chips, peat moss, ground bark, pine needles, chopped sugar cane, tobacco stems or peanut hulls. Straw is somewhat undesirable because it usually contains weed seeds which would cause a control problem next year. Ground corn cobs may be used but should not contain grain which will attract mice which may chew the bark from the stems of your shrubs.

As a rule, mice do not cause serious damage to shrubs. To reduce the hazard, keep the mulch several inches back from the stems. The best procedure is to place a small mound of crushed stone or coarse gravel around the stem of each shrub. Mice usually will not make tunnels through or under such a barrier, and will not climb on top of the stones because they do not like to be exposed.

One last caution! Do not prune shrubs this fall just before cold weather. Pruning removes reserve food materials and weakens the plant. If a sharp drop in temperature occurs, the shrub may be damaged or killed by winter injury.

Very light pruning may be done to remove a few long, objectional branches. If such growth occurs on evergreen shrubs, wait and do your pruning during the holiday season. The cut stems can then be used for arrangements and decorations in the home.

I get many questions about when is the proper time to transplant trees and shrubs into one's landscape. The answer in almost all cases, if you are doing it yourself, is during the dormant season.

With this answer, a subsequent question usually follows: What is the dormant season?

The dormant season is that time of year when leaves drop from deciduous trees and growth of shrubs and trees stops. In other words, late fall and winter.

When transplanting shrubs and trees, dig a hole at least twice as big as the root ball of the plant to be planted. Fill in the bottom of the hole with good topsoil. Then you can place the tree or shrub in the hole. Be sure that the hole is big enough for the roots to spread naturally; don't crowd them into a small hole. The plant should be held vertically, the remaining soil placed in the hole, topsoil first, and the soil tamped around the roots. Following this, the plant should be thoroughly watered so that the soil is packed more firmly, and the root ball will remain moist.

A tree should be held in place by three guywires. These should be placed around the tree at about half to two-thirds up the trunk, using rubber hoses or some other suitable material to insure that the wires will not skin the trunk.

When transplanting, tree and shrubs should be cut back by about one-third to compensate for the loss of roots. In some instances, an anti-desiccant spray is used by nurseries to replace the severe pruning of newly transplanted material.

Nurseries, it should be noted, transplant trees and shrubs the entire year. This is possible, however, because their trees and shrubs have been specially grown and because they have the necessary equipment to transplant larger materials.

Chili Is International Favorite

"A chill in every pot." This is the platform of the chili con carne lovers of the Chili Appreciation Society International. The society is planning its cookoff early in November, to elect the best chili cook. But no matter who wins, it's every man to his own recipe. Chili tastes differ passionately. Each chili lover cares very much which ingredients are or are not used, how long the chili is cooked, how it is seasoned.

This year the Texans expect to cook it up with chili lovers from other parts of the country, especially California and Illinois, or possibly Society members from as far away as Australia, Japan and Vietnam. While chili con carne is more Texan than Mexican, there are chili con carne aficionados in Mexico City who can top the Texans when it comes to a taste for chili which throws long hot sparks.

However else these chili con carne recipes may differ they are almost certainly seasoned with chili powder. This is a blend of spices based on chili peppers, ground cumin seed and oregano, powdered garlic and table salt. Depending on brand name, ground cloves or allspice and occasionally powdered onion are added. That's a lot of taste-tingling aroma to come from one container, one thing to be dipped into and replaced rather than five or more.

Not only is chili powder the greatest for the esteemed chili con carne, but convenience-oriented homemakers use it in all kinds of meat, fish, fowl, egg or cheese dishes. Even though it's a beautifully balanced blend as is, there's no law against stepping up any of the spices to your family's taste. Feel free to hot it up with red pepper, if you like, if your family adores garlic, add additional dehydrated garlic. More cumin will make the dish taste more Latin-American; oregano gives it a bit of an Italian accent.

Home economists of the American Spice Trade Association venture to send us one of their favorite chili con carne recipes, plus a delicious chili chicken which shows the versatility of the famous blend.

There are countless recipes for chili con carne. This one, seasoned with chili powder, is one of the best, especially when topped with a bit of sour cream.

CHILI CON CARNE (with Beef and Ham)

- 1/2 c. onion flakes
- 1/2 tsp. instant minced garlic
- 3 tbs. oil
- 1 1/2 lbs. beef round steak
- 1 lb. ham steak
- 1 can (1 lb.) tomatoes, cut up

There must be almost as many variations of chili con carne as there are chili cooks. This version, made with beef and ham, is richly spiced, topped with a dollop of sour cream.

- 1 1/2 to 3 tbs. chili powder
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1 can (1 lb. 4 oz.) kidney beans
- 1/4 c. water, beef broth or red wine (if needed)

CHILI CHICKEN

- 2 broiler-fryer chickens (2 to 3 lb. each) quartered
- 1/3 c. instant minced onion
- 4 tsp. salt
- 3/4 tsp. instant minced garlic
- 1 can (1 lb.) tomatoes, cut up
- 1 can (12 oz.) whole kernel corn
- 1 1/2 tsp. chili powder

Place chickens into a large saucepan. Cover with water (about 3 1/2 cups). Bring to boiling point. Add minced onion, salt and minced garlic. Reduce heat, cover and simmer about 40 minutes or until tender. Cool chicken. Remove skin and take meat off the bones. Strain chicken broth, reserving 2 cups. Return meat and the 2 cups broth to the saucepan. Add tomatoes, corn and chili powder. Simmer, covered, 30 minutes longer. Serve hot with corn bread, if desired. Yield: 6 portions.

VIRGINIA BEACH Garden Club News

Bay Colony

The Bay Colony Garden Club had a workshop conducted by Mrs. E. E. Blake Jr. and Mrs. William Billmyer at the October meeting at Galilee Episcopal Church.

The club has planted three courtyards at Linkhorn Park Elementary School this month. The $400 used for this project was raised by the club's azalea sale, with the azalea plants donated by Winn's Nursery, and its annual greens sale. The greens sale, held right before Christmas, features wreaths, velvet bows, pine and hemlock roping and decorative sprays. Frederick Huette will speak on "Camellias Eight Months of the Year" and show slides at the Nov. 6 meeting at The Cavalier.

Lynhaven African Violet

The Lynhaven African Violet Society met last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Harry Phillips. Members told, in three minutes, how they started in growing African violets. Judges were from the Pioneer African Violet Society in Norfolk.

Christmas Program Slated

The Tidewater District of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs is sponsoring a program, "Knight Before Christmas," presented by Mrs. John W. Knight, Jr., of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, on Tuesday, Nov. 5, at 10:30 a.m., at the Golden Triangle. The doors will open at 9:30 a.m. and donations shall be $1.

Mrs. Knight is an accredited National Council Master Flower Show Judge, an accredited instructor of Flower Arrangement in the National Council Flower Show Judges Schools, accredited National Council Symposium instructor. She holds workshops in flower arrangements and Christmas decorations.

She has served as President of Cuyahoga View Garden Club; president of Flower Artists of Ohio; first vice president, then, president of The Ohio Council of Nationally Accredited Flower Show Judges; Garden Club of Ohio, State Flower Show Chairman for 3 terms; Central Atlantic Regional Chairman of Memorial Gardens for the National Council of State Garden Clubs; one of 14 finalists selected from a list of over 100 of America's outstanding flower arrangers to compete in the 1958 Sterling Bowl Tournament. This is the only National Flower Arranging Contest held in the United States. She was winner of the $5,000 trophy awarded as the first prize. She was also president of the Garden Forum of Greater Akron; member of Chapter 54 (Ireland International); and honorary member of Avant Garde Arrangers' Guild.

"Knight Before Christmas" is a program consisting of decorations to be used throughout the home for the holidays, which are many and varied. Themes for several types of homes are suggested. Mechanics and methods are explained in detail. Fresh flowers are included sometimes.

Mrs. Knight is also author of the book, "Abstract and not-so Abstract Flower Arrangement". Her books will be available and shall be photographed, including also her latest book just released.

Along with books, pencils, and other classroom paraphernalia, tuck a box of junior size facial tissues into the supplies for school-bound youngsters from kindergarten to college.

Bulb Dimness May Be Dirt

Before the homemaker replaces that "dim" light bulb with a higher wattage variety, which will use more electricity she might see if she can get the same results with a little soap and water, suggests Mrs. Mildred Payne, extension home economics specialist at Virginia Tech.

Glass and plastic diffusers and shields should be washed in a detergent solution, rinsed in clear, warm water and dried. Bulbs and fluorescent tubes should be wiped with a damp, soapy cloth and dried well.

Lampshades may be cleaned with a small, soft brush at attachment of a vacuum cleaner. Mrs. Payne suggests that plastic wrappings be removed from new shades, since, contrary to popular opinion, they do not help to keep the shade clean. Dust seeps into the seams and often causes streaks which cannot be removed.

Darkened bulbs should be replaced since they can reduce light output up to 50 per cent, Mrs. Payne said.
